Beirne Blasts Federal Action

Says Phone Union Will Resist Bans

Washington, April 4—(UP)—President Joseph Beirne of the National Federation of Telephone Workers has attacked proposed federal and state action against the scheduled country-wide phone strike.

First, he charged that Attorney General Clark had "stretched the law to the breaking point" in deciding that President Truman has power to seize the telephone industry to prevent the walkout.

Second, he said the union will, "resist the action of states that deny us rights guaranteed under federal law." Beirne apparently referred to reports that some states plan action to ban the strike.

Management-labor conferences will be held this weekend in a last minute attempt to avert the walkout. The strike is scheduled to begin at 6 o'clock Monday morning.

B-29 Out of Control Northwest of Seattle

McChord Field, Wash., April 4—(UP)—An Army weather reconnaissance B-29, presumably carrying a crew of 10 men, has radioed that two of its four engines are "out of control" some one thousand miles northwest of Seattle. The giant plane is en route from Anchorage, Alaska, to Fairfield, Cal., but was last reported limping toward Seattle for an emergency landing. An air rescue service B-17, carrying drop packets and rubber life rafts, has taken off to escort the crippled B-29 to a landing spot or to search for it if it has gone down.

Medill Assumes Blame For Illinois Cave-In

Centralia, Ill., April 4—(UP)—The former director of the Illinois Department of Mines, Robert Medill, has admitted that it was the primary responsibility of his state agency to correct hazards at the ill-fated Centralia mine. Medill quit his job after the disaster which took 111 lives.

Over 200 View Art Exhibit

The open-house and formal opening of the exhibit in Person hall, "Modern Art in Advertising," was enjoyed by more than 200 guests last Sunday afternoon some of whom are shown above, browsing around. Also present at this opening were three representatives of the Container Corporation of America, under whose auspices the show appears here.

The exhibit has been set up in the large gallery at Person hall following specific display plans sent us by the Container Corporation of America. A network of partitions have been constructed in the gallery in order to present the exhibit to its best advantage. It is a very unusual plan and quite unique.

This show has already attracted the attention of more than 500 visitors, including many students of marketing and advertising as well as art aspirants.

The exhibit will run until April 27. It is the opinion of the art department that everyone will enjoy and benefit from this exhibit which is so extraordinary both in content and display.

First Buying Club Meeting To Be Held Monday Evening

Group to Convene at 7:45 in Bingham Hall; Main Business to Be Co-op Grocery Orders

Co-op Chairman Tom McDade announced yesterday that the Chapel Hill Buying club will sponsor its first spring quarter buying meeting on Monday evening. at 7:45 in 103 Bingham hall.

Main object of Monday's meeting will be to accept grocery orders from co-op members for group purchases. Old members have been notified that they may order by mail, but those persons who have not participated in a previous order will have to attend the meeting.

To Pay Dividend

In addition McDade announced that the co-op is planning to pay its first patronage dividend to stockholders. Based on purchases made since January of this year the exact amount of the dividend will be unknown until all stockholders have submitted their claims.

John Campbell, co-op stock sales manager, will be present at Monday's meeting to sell co-op stock to those persons who are interested in becoming members.

"All that is required of an individual in order to place a co-op order is the purchase of one share of stock at one dollar per share. This stock entitles a member to place orders and also pays dividends up to five per cent per year," explained Campbell.

To Make Purchases

Following consolidation of orders taken Monday, purchases will be made at wholesale prices and it is expected that distribution will take place through neighborhood chairmen on Saturday, April 12.

With Tom McDade as chairman and Dr. Frank Kottke as treasurer the co-op was organized last November by a group of veterans alarmed by the problem of "making ends meet" in the face of high living costs. The organization has progressed rapidly to the point where it is today fully incorporated as the Chapel Hill Mutual Distributors. Recently the University Board of Trustees authorized a co-operative store at Victory Village but until this is established the organization continues to operate as a buying club.

Open to All

Like all co-ops the organization is open to all who purchase stock and no distinction is made between veteran and non-veteran.

"We welcome all who have found the cost of living an increased problem and sincerely hope that many new people will be on hand Monday night to help us and at the same time to help themselves," said McDade.

SUNRISE SERVICE

The annual Easter sunrise service will be held tomorrow morning at 7 o'clock in the Forest theatre. The service, jointly sponsored by the YWCA and the YMCA will be conducted by Rev. William Poteat and Alice Summers. In case of bad weather the service will not be held.

Miss Summers, coed at the University, will lead the congregation in the singing of traditional Easter hymns.

Assembly Defeats Hayes Amendment To Exclude AVC

The proposal to exempt the American Veteran committee from a bill that would allow deductions of gifts to veteran organizations from state income taxes, failed to pass the General Assembly and the bill became a law yesterday without exempting the AVC.

Representative James M. Hayes of Forsyth county previously presented an amendment to exclude the AVC from the bill—describing the group as a "Red-tainted outfit." The charges were vigorously denied by Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., who is presently a member of the National Planning committee and in charge of veterans housing, and Walter Spearman, journalism professor at the University.

Both Roosevelt and Spearman denied the acclamations by Hayes in telegrams which were read to members of the Legislature yesterday.

NROTC Plans Complete For Cruise in Summer

The complete itinerary of the annual summer cruise of sophomores of the University NROTC unit has been announced by Capt. D. W. Loomis, professor of Naval Science. Leaving Annapolis June 21 on the heavy cruisers Albany and Oregon City, the University trainees will be in Colon from July 1-7, Port of Spain July 12-15, San Juan July 18-21, and Guantanamo July 23-29. After gunnery practice here they will proceed to Bermuda, spending August 2-5 in Hamilton, August 8-13 in New York city, and returning to Hampton Roads, Va., on the 15th.

The University Naval students will participate in these manouvers with contingents from 34 other units located at eastern colleges. Lt. R. E. Patton, instructor in the NROTC department here, will also make the cruise.

Chaplain, CMH Winner, Coming Here April 13

Father Joseph T. O'Callahan, S.J., will speak at 8 o'clock Sunday evening, April 13, in Hill hall under sponsorship of the Aquinas club. Father O'Callahan is the only armed forces chaplain in American history to receive the Congressional Medal of Honor, which he won through heroism aboard the aircraft carrier Franklin in the Pacific. Father O'Callahan's talk will be on post-war problems and his visit to the campus is sponsored jointly by the Aquinas club, the Duke Catholic club, and the Chapel Hill Rosary guild.

Construction Nearly Finished On Seven New Class Buildings

By Ed Joyner

An old grad revisiting the scene of his school days at the University would no doubt be surprised and shocked by what appears to be an Army camp mushrooming among the hallowed edifices of the campus. But he would be even more surprised a few months from now when the twenty-nine retired Army buildings now being converted into civilian classrooms are more nearly completed.

At present work is almost finished on seven of the buildings and construction is proceeding rapidly on most of the others, with at least the foundations laid for all but five of the 29 units. Work on two others will begin Monday.

Nearest Completion

Buildings nearest completion are two on the west side of the library, three near the University power house, and two public health school units near the medical school.

Three buildings intended for additions to the main library should be finished within thirty days, J. S. Bennett, Supervisor of Operations, said yesterday. Two of these will be turned over to the library immediately to relieve the congestion of books in the main building. The other unit will be used as a tool room by the J. A. Jones Construction company, contractors for the building project.

Only difficulty being encountered on the job now, Bennett said, is that the dismantled buildings are arriving from Camp Forrest, Tenn., faster than they can be handled by workers here. Word was received yesterday that seven truckloads of the building parts are on their way here now and will arrive Monday.

Although not intended for regular class use before next fall, several of the buildings will be ready during the summer session if needed. Heating will be installed in all units during the summer and the buildings will be ready for a full time class schedule in September.

Nearly One Hundred Former Service Women Matriculating at University this Quarter

By Darley Lochner

They were Army nurses, Navy nurses, WAVES, WACS, SPARS, and WRS, but they are Carolina coeds now. Almost a hundred former service women have exchanged Uncle Sam's unifiorm for his $65 a month and are now students.

Carolina's female veterans look very much like the usual coed but they have been places and done things that make them different from the girls who did not join the services. Many women, especially Army and Navy nurses, served overseas. Wanda Reeves of Sparta was an Army nurse in England, France, and Germany for 22 months. Mabel Hall of Murphy served with the Army nurses in France, Switzerland, Belgium and Germany, as did Thelma Hoffman of Snow Hill in England.

All Over Globe

Wave Alice Logan of Chapel Hill saw V-J Day in Honolulu. Also in Hawaii were Navy nurse Ada Boyd of Muskogee, Okla., and Army Nurse Dorothy Lunsford of Petersburg, Va. In New Hebrides and New Zealand was Sally Gray, navy nurse from Roanoke, Va., June Watson of Kingston, N. Y., and Clyde Hogsed of Cornelia, Ga., who are roommates here, were also together for five years as Army nurses in Hawaii and Guam. Statia Kowalski of Schenectady, N. Y., was a Navy flight nurse with home base at Guam. Marie Lusk of Las Cruces, N. M., was with the WACS in Australia and New Zealand.

In many cases women veterans are taking courses specifically designed to aid them in a career chosen while in service. Lib Savage of Henderson, WAC, now studying dramatic art, was a secretary before she became interested in the stage through a special services group in England. The WACS gave LaVerne Appleton of Milan, Tenn., her first training in laboratory technician work. Ruby Weeks of Raleigh majored in education at Woman's College in Greensboro but decided to do public health work while in the WAVES.

Definitely Civilians

Carolina's former service women are definitely civilians again and so are their unifiorms. Coats and dresses, which were once strictly regulation have been cut, dyed and trimmed into the latest fashion. Babe Hooks, WAVE from Whiteville, wears a dark blue blazer trimmed in Scotch plaid that is definitely not regulation. Reggie Kachigian of Detroit, Mich., once a part of the WAVE unit stationed in Chapel Hill with the V-12 and NROTC units, has a smart three-quarter length rain coat trimmed with pearl buttons that never even hints it was once a WAVE coat.

WAC uniforms are little more difficult to convert because of their olive drab color. One army nurse tried to dye her uniform six times and finally threw the "streaked rag" away. Jessie Moore of Sharon, Tenn., is mixing parts of her WAVE uniform with civilian clothes, but is saving one dress uniform "for American Legion parades."

"Carolina's women veterans never meet a stranger as long as he's a veteran too," Gail Griffith, WAVE from Charlotte, said in explaining the feeling of kinship that exists between men and women veterans.

Different Viewpoint

Beulah McDaniel, also an Army nurse, from Paragould, Ark., presented a different viewpoint. "Men don't discuss service experiences around women anyway, and being in the service doesn't help a woman in getting along socially at all," she said.

But it was left to Vivian Wise, Army flight nurse from Latta, S. C., to present the final comment on the relationship between the ex-GI and the ex-service woman. "Chapel Hill is just like the Air corps," she said. "The only difference between the Chapel Hill wolves and the Air corps ones is that the men in the Army used to whistle and the college men don't."

Now Is the Time

Although the present weather may not remind one of football and September may still seem to be in the far distant future to some, may we remind you that one has only to go down to the football practice fields these warm afternoons to see Coach Carl Snavely putting his team through prolonged workouts.

And may we respectfully remind the Carolina Athletic Association that before we realize it the football season and the seating problem will be with us once again. It is definitely not too early to work out suitable seating arrangements for the overflow of students who will be packing Kenan stadium for every game this fall. Perhaps a little thought and planning now could eliminate endless griping and complaining when the season opens.

The seating problem is brought to our attention by notices in the Duke Chronicle and the Georgia Tech Technique, at which two schools the bad seating arrangements last year caused no end of trouble.

The Men's Student Government at Duke announced recently "that the student section of the Duke stadium has been moved back to approximately its former position for next fall's football games."

The announcement continued: "In response to the general disapproval of the student body to the seating change made last fall. . . . . student organizations have been successful in having the student seating sections moved from the 35-yard line to the 47-yard stripe."

The Duke SGA is to be commended for its work in getting the Duke officials to give the students back their seats. There can be no argument against the fact that, if football is to remain on a collegiate status, loyal student supporters deserve the top seats.

Similarly, the Student Council at Georgia Tech has proposed a long resolution to the Athletic board, chief item of which calls for student seating to start at the 50-yard line and go as far north as necessary.

Seating arrangements at Carolina's opening game last fall brought forth an outburst of angry student protest. The Athletic Association cooperated, erected temporary stands, improved conditions for later games.

It is to be realized that this fall, more students will have to be seated than ever before in the University's long athletic history. It will not be an easy task, should furnish many a headache to those in charge before the season ends.

But some intelligent thinking and a little cooperation now might lessen the pain of some of those early fall headaches. A good seating plan will make Carolina students happy come September.

Cancer Control Month

April has been designated by the President of the United States as "Cancer Control Month." Cancer control is one of the big problems facing our country today, for this vicious disease which strikes young and old alike is far from conquered.

Over 2500 persons in North Carolina alone died as a result of cancer last year. One out of every eight people in this country will die this year. Such facts are not pleasant. If they are to be eliminated from our country's future, understanding of the nature of cancer and intelligent work to combat it are necessary. It is the responsibility of every American to educate himself concerning the cancer problem and do his part in the fight against cancer.

Senate Vote Favoring Lilienthal Is Triumph for Justice and Truth

By Earl Heffner

There was sorrow in the League of Pettiness this morning as bereaved malcontents who sought to eliminate David E. Lilienthal from the chairmanship of the Atomic Energy commission sat back and licked their wounds inflicted on them by the arms of Justice and Truth as wielded by forthright, intelligent senators. Thank God, there was no party line demarkation in the balloting. Rather men of the Bilbo-Talmadge ilk continued their despicable assault on the bloody head of Mr. Lilienthal whether they were Republican or Democrat.

The "Big Two" among Senate Republicans split on the issue as greying Arthur Vandenberg, the Michigan internationalist, brought ringing applause from the galleries with his vigorous argument for President Truman's nominee while balding Robert Taft supported the recommittal motion of his first term colleague, "Honest John" Bricker, also of Ohio.

When the final roll call vote was tabulated, the Senate was on record as refusing Mr. Brickers motion to send Mr. Lilienthal's nomination back to committee for a check by the Federal Bureau of Investigation by a 52 to 38 vote. As a result ageing Senator McKellar, Tennessee Democrat who opposed Mr. Lilienthal because the latter wouldn't play politics, suffered a bitter defeat. The Tennessee Tiger did succeed in another last minute move when he blocked an effort by Senator Hickenlooper, Republican of Iowa, to get an agreement to vote on the Lilienthal nomination at 5 p.m. Monday.

Thus, Mr. Kellar scored a point. And so did the town bully when he took his baseball and bat home because the other fellows wouldn't let him pitch in the crucial game.

If Mr. McKellar and the 31 Republicans and six other Democrats who voted with him could have their way, the Atomic Energy commission would be a political instrument to be used in the philosophy of the Jacksonian spoils system.

Fortunately, it does not appear that they shall win their childish whim.

For the final Senatorial vote was widely interpreted on Capitol Hill as meaning that the Senate will confirm Mr. Lilienthal when a final vote comes, perhaps next week.

This breathing spell will give Mr. Lilienthal's opponents an opportunity to decide whether to carry the fight in the face of apparently insurmountable odds. An intelligent decision would be to abandon the fight since both sides admitted that the anti-Lilienthal group probably mustered its greatest strength in this latest test.

Certainly, President Truman and Nominee Lilienthal are to be commended for their staunch, unswerving maintenance of their just position in the face of so much personal and petty assaulting.

In the meanwhile, the voters of America should give close attention to names of anti-Lilienthal senators. For the benefit of those interested on this campus, here it is:

For recommittal (38).

Republicans — Brewster, Bricker, Bridges, Brooks, Buck, Bushfield, Butler, Cain, Capehart, Cooper, Donnell, Dworshak, Ecton, Ferguson, Flanders, Hawkes, Jenner, Kem, Malone, Martin, Moore, Reed, Revercomb, Robertson, Taft, Watkins, Wherry, White, Wiley, Williams, Wilson.

Democrats—Byrd, McCarran, McClellan, McKellar, O'Daniel, Overton, Stewart.

Not voting but announced against was Johnston, Democrat of South Carolina.

Without the courage of his convictions, maybe?

System of Seasoning Makes For Strong Future Leaders

By Jud Kinberg

Whatever the reason, student politics at Carolina are travelling at a safe-and-sane speed that belies the proximity of the big spring elections. The restraint so far shown is as commendable as it is amazing.

In the past years, student politicians inundated the Daily Tar Heel and campus with a torrent of nominations, then proceeded to drown us all with claims and counter-claims. This year more thought and deliberation seem to be going into choice of candidates, less into meaningless oratory.

This election is the time to reinstitute the "seasoning" system which brought UNC extra-curricular leadership to great and consistent heights in the early 1940's. In those years, well-established roads of experience led to qualification for top campus posts. When a man ran for Legislature Speaker he had behind him two to three years experience in that group. It was the same story with all other governmental and publications candidates.

The war necessarily interrupted that chain of experience, and many organizations suffered. Even this year there has been much recollecting about the days of former glory, much bemoaning of the lack of "giants" to lead extra-curriculars. Potential "giants" are still here, it is merely that they have been shoved into top posts before they have fully grown in understanding of their duties.

And that is why the big vote-fest slated for early May is so crucial. If those who turn the wheels behind the 'big wheels" use their power wisely, all three parties will present well-qualified candidates to the electorate. They will also have a strong smattering of young, lower-class candidates for secondary positions. In that way, the future leaders will be gaining the seasoning that is indispensable to efficient functioning of student government, the Daily Tar Heel, Magazine and all the other groups to which aspirants will be nominated.

I think it is a generally accepted and generally unspoken fact that too large a number of student veterans take little interest in anything besides getting along and getting a degree. If it is lamentable, it is also understandable. But even so, wise choice of candidates can return student activities to the system of succession through experience which proved so successful in former eras.

That is why the restraint bodes so well for the future. There is no reason why a campus of 7,000—even with 2,000 uninterested veterans—cannot supply some 200 capable and qualified major and minor leaders. As with all parties, power at the polls is still a consideration for the UP, SP and CP. If the leaders of these three groups add to this, power to fill the post on the part of each man and woman nominated, the renaissance so many have called for will be an accomplished fact.

Wise and campus-spirited choice of nominees can give to student activities the new men to learn the ropes and the qualified men to teach the hard knots of experience which are part of those ropes.

The electorate should demand such candidates from all parties. Citizenship in the campus community has given all of us great freedoms. If we demand the records of candidates and examine them before voting, we will have carried out one of the basic responsibilities which must accompany freedom in any well-ordered community.

This growing of "giants" demands scruplousness on the part of the politicians and requires a demand for such scrupulousness on the part of the voters.

Plaudits for the Publications Board: The men who sit about the PUBoard roundtable deserve congratulations for reinstituting the Publications Keys this year. Although the keys are reputed to bring less than a dollar in the local pawn-shop, their value as recognition for work well done is inestimable.

Under wartime pressures, many of these "niceties" of extra-curricular life were abandoned. This move on the part of the Board is important in that it makes a mighty contribution to esprit-de-corps so vital to the Daily Tar Heel, Carolina Magazine and Yackety-Yack. Praise is just about all student activities have to give to their workers. The keys are a part of that praise.

Letters To The Editor

By Gum!

Dear Sir:

It is high time, it seems to me, that the attention of the Administration, the Department Heads, the Student Welfare Board, the miscellaneous advisory councils be called to a malicious habit which has inundated this campus to pose as a menace to the greater part of the student body and to the sensibilities of those who concern themselves with this sort of thing. I refer, sir, to the chewing of gum.

Although to some campus liberals this may seem an innocuous enough occupation, to the contrary, I declare it a dire menace to the preservation of order and discipline hereabouts. There is nothing so hypocritical, sir, than to see a group of students seemingly deep in ruminating their studies, when all the time they are ruminating only gum. Nor is there anything so distracting to the taking of notes than a gum-snapper masticating behind you.

I need not, I believe, resort to the mass of figures showing the tremendous increment of labor needed to clear gum-wrappers alone from the campus. Nor need I more than point out the woeful unsanitariness of second-hand chewing gum parked under sundry desks, seats, etc. The situation, sir, is apalling.

Now that the Great Smoking Problem has been successfully handled by administrative council and encyclical; the time has come to act on this equally deplorable situation. As a clinching argument permit me to point out a possible chain of action, now that smoking has been effectively banned. With a gum-chewing background it is but one step for the deprived smoker to take up the chaw; a situation which was not foreseen in the recent administrative letter that cured the Tobacco menace. Why, should the chew become popular, the appropriations needed for spitoons alone would throw this institution into bankruptcy.

Therefore it is only just that for the preservation of "maintainance, order, and training" the chewing gum be eradicated by the most expeditious means possible, b'gum.

Yours,
J. K. KRUSPY

Janitorial Faux Pas

Until the beginning of the second quarter of this school year the individual rooms in the men's dormitories received no janitorial service. About a month or so ago "cleaning and waxing" crews began to make their rounds and waxed each floor. For this we are very grateful and we extend our thanks to those responsible for such action.

However, When John Ray and his crew came to give Old East Dormitory its second waxing of the year (March 13) they pulled some of the most loathsome acts that a man can do. They piled shoes, wastebaskets, and everything else not nailed down onto the beds. As a result a large number of sheets and pillow cases were soiled beyond use. Why this crew lacked the decency to at least put a newspaper under these articles instead of deliberately soiling the beds is a matter of speculation. We are of the opinion that they either are not acquainted with the proper functions of a bed or they just don't give a damn about the property of other people. Perhaps to them it is a great and home-like sport to toss shoes and wastebaskets on beds.

We think it is Mr. Bennett's duty to instruct these crews to be more careful and to stop this type of action. As matters stand at the present the harm is greater than the good. Since the closets are not waxed at all the shoes and such can easily be put in there or at least a paper can be placed under them when they are piled on beds. We urgently request Mr. Bennett to not only do this but to notify the dormitory managers before the crews are to come to each dormitory.

There are numerous people and organizations on this campus that supposedly aid students. Here is a chance for them to operate. We request the help of Mr. Fred Weaver as Dean of Men, the Student Legislature as a representative student body, the Student Welfare Board, the Inter-dormitory Council, THE DAILY TAR HEEL, and the Campus Party which recently included in its platform the improvement of janitorial service.

Five Teams Vie For Honors In Carolina Relays Here Today

Yale and Duke Among Entries

Tennessee, State Also Represented

By Morty Schaap

The Carolina track team will make its home debut of the year this afternoon starting at 2 o'clock when the Tar Heels of Dale Ranson will play host to five other college teams in the second running of the Carolina relays.

Coaches Fetzer, Ranson and Hilton sent their team through tapering off drills yesterday and said they were hoping for the best in the meet today.

With the Duke-Carolina baseball game moved back an hour it is hoped that a number of students will get down to Fetzer Field to see this fine event.

McLEOD
Carolina

Yale's representatives arrived early in the week and when weather permitted they have week working out on the track. The Eli contingent is led by Sherwood Finley, one of the top collegiate hurdlers in the country. He finished second in the IC4A outdoor meet last year by nosing out Chunk Simmons of Carolina. This winter Finley has done very well and placed in almost all of the big meets in Madison Square Garden. He took a second place in the IC4A. event indoors.

Other leading hurdlers in the field include, Gorden Highfill of Duke, J. C. Jones of State and Bob Morrow, Hunter Heggie and Dick Taylor all of Carolina.

JACKSON Tennessee

Coach Ranson has not as yet set up his relay teams but they will probably be made up from such stalwarts as Ted Shultz, Dick Preyer, Tommy Turner, Merv Lentz, Bynum Dixon, Don Nelson, Halstead Holden, Hunter, Dick Hollander, Bill Halsey, Walt Francis and Mark Burnham.

The mile team to represent Carolina will be made from Jack Milne, Julian Mackenzie, Jimmy Miller, Alvin Smith or Sam Magill.

Vaulting for Carolina will be Norm McLeod, Rusty Russell, and Bill Patterson. In the javelin throw it will be Fred Bauer, Skeets Baldwin and Bob Kirk. The shot put will have Bob Seligman, Jack Ross and B. K. Grow.

Other teams entered in the affair are Duke, Tennessee and N. C. State, in addition to Carolina and Yale. The Blue Devils will be strongest in the dashes and relays with Roger Neighborgall expected to appear in several events.

Carolina Net Stars Stroke Way to Wins

Greensboro, April 4—Vic Seixas and Clark Taylor of the Carolina tennis team advanced to the quarter final round of the Sedgefield tournament here today by winning two matches apiece.

Seixas, the first seeded player in the tourney turned in a 6-2, 6-0 victory over Hubert Barrier of High Point in the second round and then came back to cop a third round joust from Lionel Johnson of The Citadel, 6-1, 6-2.

Clark Taylor, the Frankie Kovacs of Carolina net play, also turned in two victories by downing Henry Welford of Washington and Lee, 6-1, 6-0 and Byron Abels of Greensboro, 6-0, 6-0.

In doubles play the two Carolina teams entered reached the quarter final round. Seixas paired with Taylor to defeat Ed Goode and Carlyle Lewis of Burlington, 6-2, 6-1, while Charlie Rice and Jack Kenfield were downing D. C. Vick and J. T. Hammack of Oak Ridge, 6-2, 6-2.

Virginians Score Three Runs in First Frame; Leachman Hurls Eight Hit Game for Winners

By Billy Carmichael

The first three Virginians to step to the plate in Emerson stadium yesterday afternoon all made it around the bases to score and the first inning uprising gave ample notice of the impending doom of Coach Walter Rabb's Tar Heels, as the locals went on to drop their first game of the season. The score was 5-3.

Freshman Ray Blair started on the mound for Carolina and the visiting Cavaliers lost little time in going to the front at his expense. Lead-off man Ellington beat out an infield hit, advanced to second when little Charlie Noe bunted safely and then fled all the way home when the forementioned Mr. Blair threw Bear's attempted bunt in the direction of the grandstand.

When the dust cleared Bear and Noe were standing on second and third respectively, later to score on an outfield fly and an infield out to give Virginia a 3-0 lead.

The Tar Heels were slow in their efforts to get back into the ball game and it was not until the last of the seventh inning that they were able to tie the contest up.

Break the Ice

They got a run in the fourth when Buck Hardee walked, then raced all the way to third on Cookie Di Chiara's single down the right field line, the latter taking second on the throw in. After Andrews rolled out to short, Ryan flied out to center to tally one marker, but Beason then bounded to the pitcher to snuff out the rally.

They got another in the fifth when Johnson and Fahey put together a pair of doubles and then finally tied the thing up in the seventh.

In that frame Kenny Black got his third walk of the day, promptly stole second, and finally scored when John Gregory came through with a rousing single to center field.

Fine Pitching

The visitors who had been coasting along up until this point behind the fine pitching of Jack Leachman, got back into their first inning form to push across a run in the top of the eighth. This was accomplished by the use of two long singles by Huff and Derian, and a pop bunt by Bill Berner, that Dub Johnson almost caught, but which dropped just beyond his reach to squeeze in the winning tally.

The Virginian went on to add the clincher in the ninth on a walk to Noe, a sizzling single by Bear, coupled with another smoothly executed squeeze play. From here on it was all Virginia as the locals failed to even threaten in the bottom of the ninth.

Tommie Andrew followed Blair to the mound for the Tar Heels and pitched admirably for the last seven innings.

Carolina will open Big Four hostilities this afternoon in Emerson Stadium when they play host to the always powerful Blue Devils of Duke in the first of four meetings scheduled between the arch rivals.

Monk Whiteheart will get the nod to do the pitching chores for the Tar Heels with the starting Duke hurler not yet named.

The game will get underway at 4 o'clock with the late starting time necessitated in order not to conflict with the track meet.

Little Symphony to Play Here April 30

If the Little Symphony, composed of personnel from the North Carolina Symphony Orchestra, wins its audiences as completely as it did the State Legislators in Raleigh, music lovers of this community have a great treat in store for them.

The Little Symphony, which launched its current season with the concert before the General Assembly, is now in the midst of its longest tour to date. It will appear here on April 30.

When members of the Little Symphony descended upon the Governor and the Legislature their purpose was double. They wanted to give tangible proof of their musical skill to the Legislators on whose support they so much depend. And they wanted to express personally their gratitude to the state for its past support and encouragement.

Though the song the sirens sang was not exactly "Can't you give us anything but love, Baby?" their brief program opened with the Strauss' waltz, "Wine, Women and Song." This appetizer relieved the stuffiness of the packed house and set the pace for the lively numbers to follow.

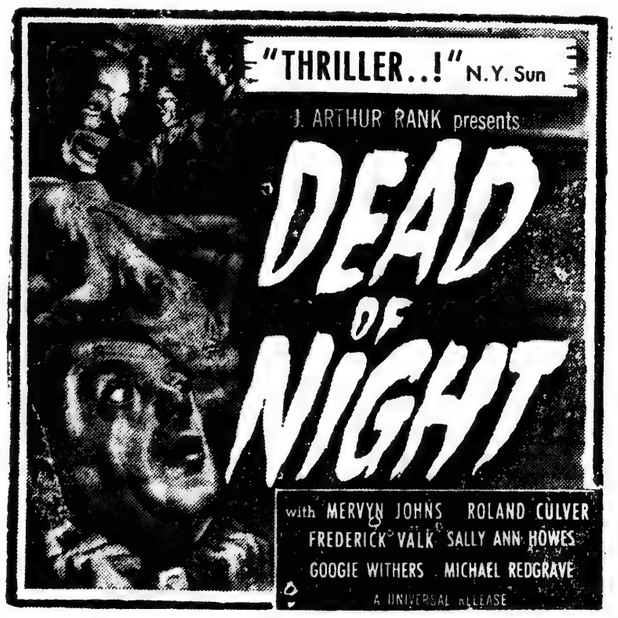
The program was characterized by lightness and smoothness—as if to free the Legislators' minds for a busy week to follow. In Strauss' "Clear Track" the Symphony recreated, with a sharp bugle call and the rhythm of racehorses, the exciting atmosphere of the racetracks. This number ended the program, followed by eager shouts of "More!" from the lawmakers.

The ovation encouraged the players.

Group Scores Triumph At Raleigh Assembly

The concert was a sample of the longer programs given free for school children and by membership for adults. Already this season, the players have noticed the increased interest in music on the part of children who heard the Symphony last year. Their attentiveness is gratifying and in itself refutes the arguments of those who contend that great music is over the heads of children.

In olden times, rulers often kept court orchestras for private concerts.



The concert for the popularly elected Legislators and the follow-up with a state-wide tour for children and grown-ups—are seen as democratic symbols that the North Carolina Symphony finds its 'courts' not with an exclusive few but among the people at large.

Lewis' Demand To Close Mines Gets Rejected

Return of Miners To Work Doubtful

Washington, April 5. — (UP) — Coal Mines Administrator N. H. Collisson tonight rejected a demand by John L. Lewis that all but two of the nation's soft coal mines be kept closed until they have been certified safe by federal inspectors.

Most observers believed, however, that the United Mine Workers would stay out of the pits on Monday, when they were scheduled to end a six-day work stoppage called by Lewis as a memorial to the 111 men killed in the Centralia, Ill., mine explosion.

Require Two Months

Lewis' request would force the government to send federal inspectors to re-examine the mines. Interior department officials say they have only 171 federal inspectors, and they estimate that it would require at least two months to inspect all the mines, as asked by Lewis. In the meantime, almost no coal would be dug. The giant, strategically important steel industry would be among the first to be hit. Other dislocations would follow.

Lewis made his request in a letter to Interior Secretary Krug and Captain N. H. Collisson, coal administrator, who went into immediate conference over the proposal.

Labor Secretary Hopes To Avert AT&T Strike

Washington, April 5. — (UP) — Secretary of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenbach said tonight he hoped to avert the nationwide telephone strike scheduled for 6 a. m. Monday.

He appealed to telephone workers not to jump the gun by quitting work before the deadline.

Schwellenbach said that some progress had been made at today's conferences in Washington and throughout the country on local issues. He said "anything can happen between now and Monday morning."

He is famous for his German translations of Shakespeare, his German books about the theatre and his work done as a director with Max Reinhardt's theatres in Berlin before World War II, when the Nazis forced him to leave Germany.

The meeting, as are all CPU meetings, is open to the public, which is cordially invited to attend and take an active part in the discussion.

Kenneth Cruse and Kennedy Gammage will present opposing viewpoints on the problems involved in short introductory remarks, after which the floor will be thrown open for informal discussion of the problem.

Jerry Davidoff, CPU chairman, announced with regret the acceptance of the resignation of Billy Britt by the Union last Sunday evening. Britt, a former treasurer and vice chairman of the Union, has been active since his return from service in the fall.

Chapel Hill Buying Club Meets Tomorrow Night

Spring quarter activities of the Chapel Hill buying club will get under way tomorrow night at 7:45 o'clock in 103 Bingham hall when the organization meets for its initial buying meeting.

According to chairman Tom McDade main object of Monday's meeting will be to accept orders from co-op members for group purchases. Old members have been notified that they may order by mail but those persons who have not participated in a previous order will have to attend the meeting.

Following consolidation of orders taken at Monday's meeting purchases will be made at wholesale prices and it is expected that delivery will be made through neighborhood chairmen on Saturday, April 12.

"The organization's facilities are open to everyone, veteran and non-veteran, student and townspeople, and we hope that a large number of new people will attend Monday's meeting. They will be helping us as well, as themselves," said McDade.

STORES CLOSED TOMORROW

The Chapel Hill stores with the exception of the drug stores and the eating places will be closed on Easter Monday, tomorrow, but will be open all day Wednesday.

Capt. 'Swede' Hazlett Wanted Appointment To West Point, Had to Settle for Annapolis

By Sigsbee Miller

On a rainy Tuesday afternoon an Army officer and a retired Naval officer sat in the latter's Chapel Hill home talking over the days when they were "best friends" in a small midwestern prairie town, cramming together for the U. S. Naval academy entrance exams.

Back in Abilene, Kansas, Swede Hazlett had announced at an early age his intention of becoming a West Point cadet. When the time came he was willing to settle for an Annapolis appointment. He persuaded his best friend, who was working nights to get enough money to go to Kansas university, to try for the other appointment. Through high school they had been inseparable buddies and the prospect of twin Navy careers was inviting.

Competitive Tests

Swede's friend placed first in competitive tests at the state capital. It was a sort of stunning anti-climax when he got the letter telling him he was being given the West Point berth, simply because the West Point exams were being given three months before the Navy exams.

That was in 1911. The boys went their respective ways at West Point and Annapolis, corresponded regularly and managed to see each other once in a while.

Last week General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower stopped over in Chapel Hill to see Captain E. E. Hazlett, U.S.N., retired. It was their first meeting in 12 years.

Captain Hazlett came to Chapel Hill in 1944 to head the N.R.O.T.C. program at the University. Retired in 1939 because of a heart ailment he had returned to active service 10 months later to teach at Annapolis. With the end of the emergency he returned to retirement. He decided to remain in Chapel Hill and he now lives with his wife and two daughters, one of whom is a student at the University, at 109 North Boundary street.

The Florida club will not meet Monday night as has been previously announced. The time and date of the next meeting will be announced at a later date.

Studying the SP Platform

Without a doubt there is no redwood in the new Student party platform. Hence, no person or organization will be able to flay the party for ideas traveling along with the general communistic philosophy.

Actually this party has presented a platform containing a set of fine planks. Unfortunately, some of the timber—which looks fine on the surface—lends a shaky foundation to what otherwise would be a firm foundation.

Under close scrutiny, the planks indicate wishful vision and good intentions by its creators. So, when students are casting their ballots, they will be unable to ignore the party because of a controversial platform aim.

The purpose of this editorial is to keep potential voters from putting their heads in the clouds without keeping their feet on the ground, a trick neatly accomplished by the Student Party platform creators.

Basically, the aim can be separated into two categories, both commendable. However, some of the aims are possible while others are impossible, are mere policy statements, seem to be of wormwood.

This latter category includes the "elimination of unfair price discrimination by local merchants."

A momentary pause amidst this waste will suffice for a recognition of the situation. Wherever a monopoly exists, high-sounding phrases and oratorical splendor will do nothing to lower the scale of costs.

An admirable aim, but well nigh impossible.

To a lesser extent, the plank for a "new and better registration system" falls in this category. For while not impossible, certainly it is improbable. Even so, this platform aim may be accepted as an excellent intent. Perhaps, it can be effected. Yet, it is doubtful. Certainly, the party can cooperate with University officials in constructive changes to Lanier's Lottery.

In the excellent category of aims which can be established, the party is to be commended for its plank for improved seating of students at athletic events. This should be forced. The question before a critic is: Just what improvements are advocated by the Student Party? While the aim is good, clarity is desirable.

Also, an up-to-date catalogue of courses would be a fine innovation on campus. Should it contain more information about the courses, the instructors, etc., such a catalogue would be of immeasurable value to students, both new and old.

Library facilities for infirmary patients might create a few mechanical problems. But certainly they could be eliminated in order to ease the weight of idle time on the hands of the ill. A good plank. The Daily Tar Heel hopes it soon will be instituted into operation by the University.

As for the campus schedule of events, the Daily Tar Heel considers this a good piece of timber if it is taken one step further and contain the clearing house for such events, a feature long advocated by the DTH. Too often, there is a conflict of events on campus. It is a situation which should be remedied. But so far, no move has been made to do so.

Almost lost in the last paragraph of a news story was the intention of seeking a "thorough orientation system".

This aim—more than any other—could do much toward reawakening the sleeping student government by injecting interest as well as information into the heads and hearts of incoming students. A better orientation system is a vital requirement. Incoming students—and many of the present book-carriers—should learn the constitution, its history, should know the Honor code, the Campus code.

The remaining planks—all good—are better Quonset hut living conditions, better telephone service, better printing facilities, and reconstitution of the Student Welfare board.

In brief, the Student platform may be analyzed as an ambitious undertaking worthy of praise. For the most part, its aims are realistic. It is unfortunate, that its fathers performed a Caesarian in giving birth to the one impossible plank, the resolution against price discrimination.

Ban of Communists Takes Significant Turn . . . .

By Kennedy Gammage

The present move under way in Congress to ban, regulate, or in some way curb the Communists in the United States has taken a significant turn. Most of the members of the House committee on un-American activities are no longer in favor of legislation which would outlaw the Communist party. On the surface, this might look to the uninformed as if the Communist techniques and propaganda had won another victory over the resistance which was formed in Congress, and they may wonder whether or not our lawmakers are blinded to the dangers of a Communist fifth-column in this country.

There need be no fear that Congress is not aware of this menace. The reason for the shift in sentiment against any blanket outlawing of the Communist party was a more mature consideration of the practicality and enforceability of such legislation. It was NOT due, as the righteously indignant Crimsons would have us think, to doubts as to the constitutionality of such legislation. Nor was it due to any fear of the abridgements of constitutional rights of the individuals themselves; for these self-same individuals are the very ones who would have us destroy those rights. The weeping, wailing, and gnashing of teeth which took place in various Commie hangouts over the abridgments of rights was indeed a ludicrous thing to behold. Crocodile tears were being given away on an open market.

These expressions of truly touching concern are recognized for the bilge that they are, however, by those who are not mentally blinded by the verbiage thrown at them by the pink guardians of Democratic privilege. And with few exceptions, congressmen are remarkably clear-visioned upon this issue. Recently the House committee on un-American activities heard both J. Edgar Hoover and William Bullitt, former United States ambassador to Russia, testify that the Communists in this country were nothing more than "Red Fascists." They heard Hoover state that the Communist fifth-column in this country is far better organized than was Hitler's in many of the countries which he blitzed. And they heard him quote a top Communist party official in this country: "But if it (war between Russia and the U. S.) should come, the Communist party in the United States would be with Russia, and make no mistake about that." Yet both Mr. Hoover and Mr. Bullitt opposed passage of any bill to outlaw the Communist party. Why? Because such a bill would only serve to drive the Communists underground, there to continue their schemes for disrupting anything and everything they can contaminate with their filthy touch. The best defense against Communism is to bring it out into the open where it can be watched, and, if there are any doubting Thomases, compared to our American way of doing things. Communism flourishes in dark places where it can spread its poison from unrecognizable and anonymous pores; bring it out into the sunlight where it can be easily discerned for what it is, and it must wither and perish. Laying about with a club in the dark is no solution. Very seldom will you hit what you wish to, and occasionally some leftishly-inclined but well-meaning lad may get bashed, to the mutual chagrin of all concerned. The Red Witch-hunt of the 1920's must not be duplicated. It is to be hoped that intelligent, mature, and thoughtfully considered legislation by our representatives in Congress will enable us to expose Communists to the air and sunlight, however, and toward that end, with helpful assistance from those who have had experience in dealing with such creatures, our lawmakers seem to be progressing.

World Affairs

By-Passing Of UN Group Unjustifiable

By Manny Margolis

The glory that was Greece is quickly being shrouded by the grandeur that is Trumanism. It is becoming increasingly difficult to use our heads instead of our headlines. A war-scarred world is again fast becoming war-scared.

Yet behind this gigantic smoke-screen lie any number of contradictions. Just to mention a few:

1. On the one hand, we are cutting taxes, while on the other, we are spending hundreds of millions of dollars to fight "Russian expansionism." And the end is not yet.

2. We speak of the spread of COMMUNISM as being synonymous with RUSSIAN expansionism, refusing to recognize that these new communists and socialists and liberal democrats are Greeks and Czechs and French and Italians and Chinese (native 100 percenters, if you please!) and not Moscovian agents. Over 800,000 communist votes were cast in a recent Brazilian election—et tu, Brazil???

3. We are sending "relief" to Turkey, a nation which is at the present time EXPORTING food. Why? Simply because it is anti-Soviet? Maybe.

4. The Christian-like generosity prompting these loans is truly mystifying. Two words have been conspicuous by their absence from State department and White House statements on this vital subject—"oil," for somebody's lamps, and "repayment," for somebody's pocket, namely, your own.

As for our position on the United Nations, we leave the realm of contradiction and enter the realm of pure nonsense! A few days ago, Security Councilor Warren Austin announced that the U. S. was actually strengthening the United Nations. Ignore it and make it stronger, says Austin.

The United Nations should and is prepared to undertake a program of relief for all peace-loving peoples in the war-ravaged areas in the world. (See the recent F.A.O. Report.) The United States, by refusing further support to UNRRA last year, killed it. Why? Was it for the purpose of undertaking our own special brand of "relief"?

If the U. N. is weak, now is the time to make it strong, not to further maim it. If it is untested, let us put it to the test. Otherwise, we are a drowning people clutching not at straws, but at a dream.

To reject the course of utilizing the U. N. is to eviscerate the political guts out of it. It means booby-trapping the entire world peace structure.

One cannot logically justify the by-passing of the United Nations any more than one can justify a lynching in Georgia on the grounds that the "crisis is immediate" or that the established legal machinery will not provide "adequate punishment." The Truman policy promises to become one of the most sickening international "lynchings" in recorded history!

The tone of the reports from Moscow are becoming increasingly dolorous. Ask yourself why. It's not too mysterious. This is where Secretary of State Marshall "came in." Just as was the case during his mediation efforts in China, he comes as a diplomatic agent trying to reach agreement, while his government engages in active support of Fascist armies in the name of the holy crusade against "Russian expansion."

But, these "communists" we're fighting aren't Russians . . .

Accusations Aired and Answered

The Charges

With the appearance of the extensive editorial by Roy Moose in the Daily Tar Heel Friday, March 28, 1947, my long restrained impulse to write you a letter has been released.

A review of the files of the Daily Tar Heel reveals that the "deluge of protests" as to the Registration System has flowed from a small group of persons on the editorial staff of the Tar Heel. It is the duty of the official student newspaper to report accurately the news of the campus, both student and administrative, rather than degenerate into a "gripe" sheet for the expression of the personal views of a few.

The facts stated by Mr. Lanier in his talk at the U. V. A. meeting last Thursday night have been available through his office for some time, yet at no time has the Tar Heel fulfilled its responsibility to the students of securing these facts and accurately placing them before the students. The whole tone of each and every editorial on the registration system has been: "that certain students have eight o'clock classes or that they were unable to get the easiest and most popular professors." These gripes have come from your editorial staff, directly or indirectly, and not by any deluge of letters from the students.

I have taken the time to check into the records of four or five of the most ardent critics of the Administration and more particularly of the Registration System, and I find in each case that not one of them has had any administrative or business experience. All four came to the University straight from high school; three of the four had their education interrupted by military service, and returned here immediately upon release; the other is a non-veteran, having come here directly from high school. Yet these four bright young men would tell the officials of the University they should forget their many years of experience, ignore any responsibility they have to the trustees and the taxpayers and citizens of the State and operate the University in accordance with the wishes of the above four. These four or five students have manipulated themselves into strategic positions whereby they seek to control the minds of the other students, and lament and moan when the students do not fall in line to carry out their unsound, and distorted views.

Mr. Moose states in his "profound" editorial, to which you have given a full half page, that "a chasm of animosity between student and administration has widened more and more. A breaking point is bound to come soon," and he infers that the total of 7,000 students are up in arms. I defy Mr. Moose to substantiate this accusation, exclusive of his little clique.

Mr. Jud Kinberg in an editorial of 26 March 1947 says there must be "nothing less than mass-meeting protest." Mr. Kinberg goes on to say that the Administration must realize that the returning veteran is not a child to be ordered around, etc. I suggest to Mr. Kinberg that it is he and his group of noise-makers that need to realize that the returning veteran is not a child to jump to his beck and call; to fall in behind him in gross hysteria every time he suggests such action in his "profound" editorials.

The returning veteran is here to get an education; to finish up as quickly as possible; he is appreciative of the opportunities afforded him, and he seeks the stamp of approval the University which comes with graduation. He is not here to quibble and fight and antagonize.

I submit that the great majority of the students have no complaints as to the registration system, or with the treatment received at the hands of the Administration; and that the faction referred to above is representative of only a small group and not the Student Body at large.

JAMES R. FARLOW

The Reply

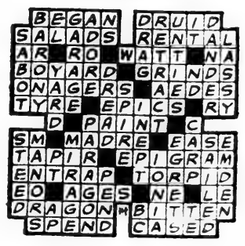
(1) First, Mr. Farlow, the editorial in question was not an attack upon the registration system, but rather it was an inquiry as to why the "Division of Student Welfare" was not being consulted, and since it was not being consulted, if there was any need for it. Quoting from the fourth paragraph: "No, this is NOT a story about the merits of said plan" (registration system). The story was about the Welfare Board, and to make the point more obvious, a list of its members was attached to the bottom of the article.

(2) Furthermore, Mr. Farlow, as for the "profoundness" of the story, Dean Mackie (Chairman of the Board) and Dean Weaver (a member) were interviewed and their comments prompted the writing of the editorial.

(3) Furthermore, Mr. Farlow, the meeting at which Mr. Lanier appeared was called at the request of many students who came to me personally and asked that a way be arranged in which the students and administration could discuss the matters in question together. It was NOT a protest meeting called by me.

(4) Furthermore, Mr. Farlow, the "deluge of protests" is a significant reality. Not only has the Daily Tar Heel received many letters, but when the registration system started to function, almost every "bull" session on the campus was concerned with it and the comments I have heard have been anything but complimentary. Perhaps the reason you have not come in contact with those protests, is that you are in Law School, which does not come under the system and which exempts you from the jurisdiction of it. That you, who are not affected by the system at all, should be telling a. the undergraduates who are affected by the system how they should act and react to something they have openly expressed displeasure with, seems incredible.

(5) Furthermore, Mr. Farlow, it is very unfortunate you did not enclose the names of the four or five "bright young boys" whom you "probed". It does not give them a chance to defend themselves and I do not believe you are sufficiently qualified as a F.B.I. agent to have the final word. The war gave me a chance to come here, a chance for which I am indeed grateful. However, Mr. Farlow, if there must be a qualification necessary to be able to express an opinion or to write that which I believe, then I should want nothing whatsoever to do with it.



(6) Furthermore, Mr. Farlow, "the chasm of animosity" has been brewing for a long time and has been recognized by the Student Legislature which appointed a fact-finding committee, headed by Johnny Clampitt, to investigate the many student gripes.

Your right to speak and have an opinion is well recognized and I will back you on that right to speak. How-

Six Records Fall In Carolina Relays

Carolina Runners Gain Six Firsts; Simmons Triumphs

By Morty Schaap

With six records being smashed and one new event being added to the program, the revival of the Carolina Relay meet yesterday proved a big success as five collegiate teams battled for honors.

Carolina waltzed off with six first places against four for Duke, two for State and one apiece for Yale and Tennessee.

The feature race of the day was the 120-yard high hurdle event that saw Carolina's Chunk Simmons edge out Sherwood Finley of Yale. Both boys won their heats and Finley tied the meet record of 15 seconds flat in his heat. In the finals Simmons withstood a late drive by the Eli lad and hit the tape in 14.6 to set a new meet mark and also post the best time he has ever run. Hunter Heggie of Carolina finished third.

In the high jump, the old record was surpassed by four inches as Jack Moody of the Tar Heels and Dick Dickey of State college leaped over the bar at 6 feet, 2 inches to tie for first.

The Duke relay team had a field day by grabbing three of the four relay titles and setting records in all of them. In the mile relay they nipped Carolina to set a standard for this event, a new race on the program. In the 440-yard relay, they clipped two-tenths of a second from the old mark held by Carolina in 43.6 seconds. The sprint medley saw the Blue Devils edge State in the record time 3:37.6.

The Carolina mile team, paced by Jimmy Miller who led the pack home in 4:28.2, broke the former mark of 4:30.9. The Tar Heels won the event by virtue of Miller's win, Jack Milne finishing second and Sam Magill crossing the line sixth for a team total of nine. Tennessee was second with third, fourth and fifth places for a total of 12 points.

The broad jump saw Doug Ausbon of Duke eclipse the old standard by almost a foot to win over Grimes of Yale.

The upset of the meet came in the shot put when Ed Byler of State heaved the 16-pound ball 47 feet, 2¼ inches to beat out favored Bob Seligman of Carolina.

The discus saw Seligman bag the event with a throw of 140 feet, 3 inches.

In the pole vault Norm McLeod of Carolina and Brown of Yale tied at 12 feet for first place.

The Summary:

Shot Put: Byler, NCS, Seligman, Car., Andrews, NCS; 47 feet, 2¼ inches.

Discus: Seligman, Car., Andrews, NCS, Klosterman, Car.; 140 feet 3 inches.

Javelin: Taylor, Tenn., Dunham, Duke, Dickey, NCS; 173 feet 5½ inches.

HIGH SCHOOL TRACK

In the high school division of the meet, Granby swept four first places while Durham picked up the other three.

Hylton of Granby was high scorer by taking first place in the shot put, discus and javelin. He set a record in the spear throw by heaving 177 feet 10½ inches which was better than the college division.

Harrell of Granby won the 100-yard run in 10.2 to break that mark.

Carolina Netters Reach Semi-Finals In Sedgefield Play

Greensboro, April 5.—The Carolina net contingent participating in the Sedgefield tourney here were all successful in their ventures and moved into the semi-final round in yesterday's play.

Vic Seixas, seeded number one in the tourney, mowed down Holmes Cathrell of Colgate university, 6-2, 6-1. Clark Taylor, number two on the Carolina squad, took Bob Spurrier of Presbyterian college into camp, 6-1, 6-2. Neither netter has lost a set in the tournament play thus far.

In doubles competition, Seixas teamed with Taylor to advance to the round of four by defeating Warren and Arnold of Colgate, 6-3, 6-1, to join Jack Kenfield and Charlie Rice in that round. The latter pair gained their position in a victory Friday afternoon.

Tomorrow morning Seixas plays Frank Warren of Colgate and Taylor meets Philip Neff of Washington, D. C. Neff defeated Dr. Johnson, second seeded in the tourney, in a match played today.

In the afternoon the winners will clash in the finals. Semi-final doubles play is also scheduled for the morning with the last round in the afternoon.

The lacrosse team being organized is planning to travel to Durham this week to play a scrimmage game with either Duke, Penn State or Virginia.

Locals Open Big Four Play With Third Win of Campaign

Cheek, Gregory, Ryan Lead Way at Plate; Carolina Meets Michigan Here Tomorrow

By Bob Goldwater

Carolina engaged in its favorite pastime—that of whipping Duke—yesterday afternoon much to the satisfaction of a pleased Emerson stadium crowd as the Tar Heels opened Big Four hostilities and scored their third win of the season with an easy 8-2 triumph over the Blue Devils.

The locals play host to Michigan's touring baseballers tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock in the first of a two-game series. Lefty Vinnie DiLorenzo will handle the mound chores for the Carolina crew in his second appearance of the campaign.

Whitehart Wins Second

Yesterday's victory saw the Tar Heels coast to a win mainly on the steady eight-hit twirling of Monk Whiteheart and the batting prowess of Emmett Cheek, John Gregory and Rip Ryan, who together contributed a sum total of 12 bases. In pitching the distance, Whiteheart became the first Blue and White hurler to go the route and racked up his second success of the season in doing so. The high-kicking righthander showed perfect control, allowing no walks while fanning a pair of Devils.

Carolina took one inning in which to warm up and then began teeing off on Hal Stevenson, the first of two Duke pitchers, in the second frame. With two away, first-baseman Gregory took a liking to Stevenson's fourth offering and hammered the ball deep into right-center field to mark up Carolina's initial round-tripper of the year. Ryan followed with the first of three singles and took second when center-fielder Art Vann juggled the ball. Buck Hardee's safety, to left scored Ryan and the Tar Heels led, 2-0.

Carolina came back in the third frame to register a single tally, again with two outs, when Whitey Black reached first on Bakie Palmer's miscue, stole second, and rode home on a terrific clout by Cheek that went for three bases. Gregory grounded out to end the inning with the scoreboard reading 3-0, Carolina.

The Blue Devils finally broke into the scoring column in the fourth stanza with another triple playing the major role. Jerry Frye lashed the three-bagger down the left-field line and came across with Duke's first tally a moment later on Milt Ayers' single into left field. Then came the Tar Heels' big frame that saw eight batters stride to the plate and four came all the way around to register.

After Cookie DiChiara, who played a smooth game at second base for the locals, led off in the last half of the fifth by lofting deep to center, the Tar Heels loaded the bases on singles by Harry Beason and Dub Johnson and a free pass to Black. Cheek thereupon exploded his second extra-base blow, a double to right-center field that served to drive in three runs, and the big rightfielder dented the plate two plays later on Ryan's infield single.

New Pitcher

Both teams came up with runs in the seventh stanza. Frye led off for Duke with his second smash for extra bases, this time a double, and tallied on Bob Lapp's single over second base. The Tar Heels collected their run at the expense of a new hurler, Bob Houghton, who pitched a near no-hitter against Carolina last year. After two were out, Gregory reached second on an infield grounder when Frye threw wild to first and the first-baseman tallied on Ryan's third single, this one in the direction of left field. That ended the scoring for the afternoon.

DIAMOND DUST: Cheek was in the lineup as a result of Jack Hussey's sore arm. . .The tussle was run off faster than any of the previous three games—only one hour and 43 minutes.

where he is today—brains, personality and enthusiasm. He was always at the head of his class and participated in all types of athletics. I think his love for athletics and his zest for fun were responsible for his not making a very notable scholastic record at West Point.

"I had always wanted an Army career and my father sent me to military school to get it out of my system. In my senior year I took the entrance exams for the Naval academy and flunked out. I was going to take the exams again and I decided to get Ike to go in with me.

Ike Undecided

"I don't think Ike had really decided what he wanted to do. He came from a poor family that included six boys and after high school he worked nights in a creamery to get money to go to the University. I talked him into trying for the Senatorial appointment to Annapolis. Having taken the exams once I knew the ropes and we crammed together. We were together almost constantly those days—he at the office where I worked during the afternoon, I at the creamery at night.

"Ike placed first among 50 taking competitive exams at Topeka. Because the West Point exams were being given in January and the Annapolis exams were not being given until April, he was offered the West Point appointment. We were peeved and disappointed when the Senator's letter came but he decided to take the appointment."

Essentially a Student

Eisenhower, said Captain Hazlett, is essentially a student. When the two met in Panama some years ago, Hazlett found his friend poring over the Napoleonic campaign, checking and plotting Napoleon's moves against the strategy he himself would have used.

"Ike hasn't changed a bit," said Captain Hazlett following the Eisenhowers' visit to Chapel Hill last Tuesday. "He hasn't let success go to his head. He definitely isn't going to run for the presidency but I personally think he could be elected on either ticket.

"Before he left Tuesday he said to me, 'Swede, I think success is not so much a matter of brains and ability as it is of application and luck. I got the lucky breaks. Your heart went bad on you.'

"That's the kind of man Ike Eisenhower is."

NEWS BRIEFS

Officials See Good Progress In Phone Row

Conciliators Hint Early Compromise

Washington, April 7. — (UP) — Government labor experts say they are making good progress in settling the phone strike.

Conciliation Chief Edgar Warren met with the policy committee of the striking unions at 9 o'clock last night. Warren admitted late yesterday that some sort of compromise formula is in the making, one that he hinted might bring a quick settlement of the phone dispute, perhaps in 24 hours.

Recess Called

He and Assistant Labor Secretary Gibson called a recess in their long parley with company and union representatives. There is quite a bit of speculation that the meeting was adjourned to give union leaders the opportunity to decide upon a new plan for arbitration.

Union spokesmen told newsmen that nationwide bargaining was not the major issue holding up the settlement of the day-long strike. They added, "the trouble is the company won't bargain, even at any level."

Company officials are silent on the progress of the negotiations. As to the effectiveness of the tie-up, they report that emergency long distance calls are being handled satisfactorily.

Closed Shop Measure Introduced by Taft

Washington, April 7. — (UP) — Chairman Taft has handed his Senate Labor group a labor bill which would outlaw the closed shop but allow industry-wide bargaining. As for special legislation to deal with the phone strike, top congressional leaders predict none will be rushed through.

Most Miners Extend Mourning Stoppage

Washington, April 7. — (UP) — Most of the soft coal districts report that miners are extending their six-day mourning stoppage into a safety strike. They are following the wishes of John L. Lewis who demanded that the government keep the pits closed until federal inspectors rule them safe.

Red Calls Greek Plan Serious Blow to U. N.

Lake Success, April 7. — (UP) — Russian delegate Andrei Gromyko has told the Security council that President Truman dealt the United Nations "a serious blow" by proposing what Gromyko called "unilateral aid to Greece and Turkey." Gromyko charged that the United States is "interfering in the internal affairs of Greece and Turkey," and he has demanded that the job of helping the two nations be turned over to the UN.

German Plebiscite Asked by Molotov

Moscow, April 7.—(UP)—Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov has proposed that the Big Four let the German people decide by a plebiscite whether they want a strong or a weak central government. All three western powers opposed letting the Germans decide what they called a question of world security.

Many Large N.C. Towns Without Phone Service

Raleigh, April 7.—(UP)—Union leaders say more than 4,700 telephone workers in North Carolina are out under the nationwide telephone strike. However, company officials and supervisory employees are still trying to maintain emergency long distance service. Several larger towns, of which Asheville is the biggest, are without any service because they have no dial systems. Others in this fix are Burlington, Gastonia, Salisbury, Goldsboro, Shelby and Statesville.

John Clampitt Announces Candidacy For President

DOTSON PALMER

Senior Week Plans Formed

Celebration Opens May 7, Says Palmer

Senior Class President Dotson Palmer today released tentative plans for senior week to be held May 7, 8, and 9. Activities now include barefoot day, a saddle shoe stomp in the Y court and a senior banquet to be climaxed by the junior-senior dance.

"We hope to make this year's senior week comparable to the big pre-war celebrations," Palmer said today in urging every senior to take part.

No Shoes to Class

Tradition requires that all seniors go to class without shoes on barefoot day which has been set for Wednesday, May 7. The saddle shoe stomp, scheduled for that night in the Y court, will be an informal affair with music broadcast over a loudspeaker. The Y fountain will be open so that seniors may quench their thirst.

More details about the senior banquet, to be in the Carolina inn ball room Thursday evening of senior week will be announced later.

Climax of the week's festivities will be the junior-senior dance slated for Woollen gymnasium Friday night. The Duke Ambassadors will play for this affair.

Banquet Only for Seniors

All students purchasing tickets will be invited to the Friday night dance. The senior banquet is closed to seniors alone and the saddle shoe stomp is open to seniors and their dates.

Those working with Palmer include Alex Veasey, chairman of the dance; Charlie Tietjen, saddle shoe stomp chairman, and Bill Halsey, senior class chairman of dance tickets. Ed Early of the junior class is working with Halsey.

Freshman Class Plans Weekend Program For Greensboro Coeds

The Freshman class will play host to 160 students from the Woman's college in Greensboro on Saturday afternoon and evening according to completed plans announced by Freshman Friendship council head Ed Hamilton. Since only a limited number of men can come, bids will be made available at a meeting of all those interested tonight at 7:30 in Gerrard hall, where explanations will be made concerning the weekend.

"It will be necessary for all those wishing to get in on the weekend fun to be at the meeting tonight," said Hamilton. "The first to sign up will be the lucky ones to date the WC women."

Activities will get underway at 5:30 Saturday afternoon in Battle park, immediately after the four buses bring the coeds from Greensboro. The picnic in the park will last until time for an informal dance presented to the freshmen by Graham Memorial. The student union dance band, led by Ned Reap, will play in the main lounge of Graham Memorial.

Bids will be necessary at the dance as well as for the picnic and will be available at the meeting this evening in Gerrard hall.

Coeds Will Go to Polls To Select Senate Head

Vice-President of WAA Will Be Decided; Bryson, Cashion, Beale Vie for Speaker

Polls will be open today from 9 until 5 o'clock for the election of a Speaker for the Coed senate and officers of the Woman's Athletic association. Coeds living in Alderman, Kenan and McIver dormitories will vote in McIver, while polls in Gerrard hall will be provided for women students living in Smith, Carr, Archer house, sorority houses and also for town students. Residents of Spencer hall will vote there.

Run for Speakership

Among candidates for the speakership of the Coed senate is Audrey Bryson who transferred to the University from Southern seminary where she served as president of the Student council and president of the student body. Bryson was also dormitory president there, a student counselor, a member of the International Relations club, Spanish club, Little Theater, and the editor of the "Virginia Reel." At the University she has contributed to the "Y and Wherefore," served on the YWCA Junior council, is a member of the Western North Carolina club and vice-president of the Alpha Gamma Delta pledge class.

Barbara Cashion, also a candidate for the speakership of the Senate, has attended the University throughout her college life. While here she has served on the Student council, as president of the Town Girls' association, cheerleader, and was secretary of the freshman class.

Annie Ben Beale of Greensboro transferred here from Mary Baldwin college where she was a cheerleader, the fashion editor of the college newspaper, social chairman of the sophomore class, and a member of the House council. While at the University she has been a member of the Yackety Yack staff and the YWCA.

Marshall Spears, unchallenged candidate for the presidency of the Woman's Athletic association, formerly attended Stephens college where she served as house manager, a member of the House council and the junior class council. Here she has been ac-

Debaters Take Six Firsts In Tough National Debates

By Tinsley Campbell

Meeting possibly the strongest competition amassed this year at a speaking contest, the University Debate squad fought its way through the illustrious verbal battle known as the Grand National Forensic tournament and did not emerge until it had grabbed top honors in six debates and second place in one other speech event.

Although local delegates elevated themselves to the finals in seven individual speaking categories, they were unable to cop a top berth. Debate council President Maurice Braswell attributed this to the excellent calibre of participants present at the Fredericksburg, Va., affair. Braswell described the notable meet as "a well run tourney which represented a cluster of the nation's most ambitious youth."

Brogden Takes Second

Carolina's E. O. Brogden took second place in the informative speaking event with a talk on "American Efforts To Democratize Japan." Along with Brogden in the upper brackets was Blanton Miller, who reached the finals in dramatic reading. Braswell and Bill Miller got as far as the second round in their events.

The Tar Heel debaters, Charles Hodson, Bob Ormand, Earl Fitzgerald, and Russell Baldwin, were working together for the first time against teams well-stocked with experience from as many as 38 past events. In taking six debates, these men show promise and should show up well in the future, Braswell asserted.

49 Schools Present

As many as 49 colleges and universities were represented at the contest. Well stocked with oral experts were such schools as Tulane, University of

Charlie Spivak to Play for May Finals

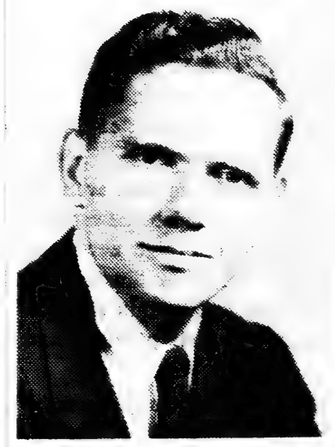
Elliott Lawrence, young keyboard specialist, will lead his popular orchestra in a Memorial hall concert on April 27 under the auspices of the German club.

Elliott Lawrence To Give Concert

By Bookie Jabine

Plans which include a concert by Elliot Lawrence on April 27 and finals with Charlie Spivak on May 16 were announced yesterday by the German club through its president, Carroll Tomlinson.

The concert will be held in Memorial hall featuring Elliot Lawrence, currently billed as "The Young Man with a Band." Lawrence, who is only 22, has soared into the limelight only recently, largely through his popularity at college dances throughout the nation.



In Memorial Hall

The Lawrence jump session will be held in Memorial hall from 7:30 to 9:30 Sunday evening, April 27.

Tomlinson expressed regret that the piano playing maestro couldn't be signed for a dance here, due to the suspension of the May Frolics set this year.

With May Frolics out, the administration permitted the club to change the date of Finals to May 16. In signing Spivak for this set, the German club brings to Carolina

Johnny Clampitt, energetic chairman of the Elections committee of the Student Legislature, has announced he will run as an independent for president of the student body.

DTH Publishes New Stylebook

Is First Since 1932; Compiled by Giduz

The Daily Tar Heel took a great journalistic step forward yesterday with the releasing of its first complete stylebook since 1932. A pamphlet-size, 28-page booklet, this stylebook was edited by DTH Managing Editor Roland Giduz, under authority of the Publications board.

It represents nearly a year's work, and contains a composite of all Daily Tar Heel codes, writing rules, and numerous other phases of newspaper writing.

There will be a meeting of all members of the Daily Tar Heel news, sports, and editorial staffs tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock in the staff offices. All of these staffs are expected to be present, as many important matters will be considered at this time, and no excuses will be accepted, unless cleared through the editor or managing editor beforehand.

Over twenty phases of publication are taken up, divided into chapter headings and subheadings. A short section is included on the history of the Daily Tar Heel, and organization of the staff. Another complete chapter is devoted to preparation of copy and general rules and tips to reporters. Samples of all DTH headlines, and a

Third Candidate Will Enter Race As Independent

By Sam Whitehall

Johnny Clampitt, fireball chairman of the Elections committee of the Student legislature, announced last night that he will run as an independent candidate for president of the student body in the spring elections.

In a statement to the Daily Tar Heel last night Clampitt stated that he reached his decision following a student petition submitted to him asking that he consider running as an independent candidate.

Fact-Finding Group

Clampitt, a junior from St. Petersburg, Fla., was elected to the Student legislature in the fall elections and since that time has taken an active part in its functions, serving as chairman of the Elections committee. He is now chairman of the Fact-Finding committee, appointed to investigate facts pertinent to campus questions and difficulties.

He was appointed chairman of the Student legislature committee that investigated the advisability of the University participating in and becoming a member of the National Student organization. Prior to his entering the University he attended St. Petersburg Junior college and served with the army for almost four years.

Triangular Twist

The race for the student body presidency has taken a triangular twist with Clampitt's announcement of his candidacy. The University party announced last week that they will support Bill Miller for the post, while Tom Eller has obtained the backing of the Campus and Student parties. Political onlookers have stated that the fight for the presidency would be quite colorful even if two of the candidates, Clampitt and Miller, did not have red hair.

Clampitt, a staunch advocate of "the man rather than the party," severed his relations with the Student party, of which he was a member, when a faction of the party broke away and formed the Campus party several weeks ago. He gave his reason for breaking all party affiliation as a non-believer in "the party for party sake."

Full Statement

The following is a full statement made by Clampitt: "Several reasons could be given for my entering the presidential race. First, I was asked if I would; second, I would like to be in a position to be the student representative to the faculty in order to present the student sides to all controversies; third, I would like to see a complete orientation of the students and faculty on the Honor code and Campus code, and student government. These are just a few of the reasons why I decided to run."

Sociology Prizes Are Offered Here

Sociology majors writing papers this year will be offered three awards of $25 each. One prize will be given to an undergraduate coed by Chi Omega, and the other two will be sponsored for a graduate and an undergraduate by Kappa Delta, local chapter of the national honorary sociological fraternity.

Any graduate or undergraduate major in the sociology department may submit as many papers as he wishes without the same entry eligible for both undergraduate prizes. Entries must have been written in the 12 months prior to April 15 and must be typewritten, double spaced, and limited to 25 pages. The name of the author must not appear on the papers as the secretary of the sociology department will identify each by number. All manuscripts must be turned in to Mrs. Payton in 311 Alumni building before April 15 in order that announcement of winners may be made about June 1.

A Statement

The Publications board is now completing budgetary material which will present to the student legislature the need for an appropriation of not less than $76,000 for the administration of four student publications next year. To those who are shocked by the size of this figure, I must ask the question: Do you or do you not want the University of North Carolina to have the best college publications in the South and a superior rank among college publications in the nation? To those who want next year to witness the return of national supremacy to the publications of our student body, we respectfully submit the above figure as a minimal and modest proposal.

Our publications can be operated at $54,750 (the estimated figure presented by the Budget committee), but then the University of Texas will publish a better daily newspaper, and Duke University will publish better magazines, and a host of Southern universities will publish better yearbooks.

Our publications can be operated for much less than even the figure estimated by the committee, but the student newspaper will then have to abandon its pictures and foreign news and enlarge its type, the magazine will be with fewer illustrations and cheaper and fewer pages, the annual will be thin and students and organizations will pay more for their pictures, and there will be no humor magazine.

The only question to be asked is this: Is it worth a penny more per student per day to have student publications which will make our University proud—and will constitute the best ever produced in the South?

—Robert Morrison,
President Publications Board

Why It's True

The statement published above is one that should be of interest to every member of the Carolina student body. It was written by Bob Morrison, former DTH editor and present chairman of the Publications board and explains the need for an increased publications budget.

At first glance, $76,000 looks like a large sum of money. As a matter of fact, it is a large sum of money. But it is a necessarily large one.

The Daily Tar Heel has struggled along this year on a budget that has been too small to adequately meet the needs of a first-class collegiate newspaper. The Carolina Magazine and Yackety Yack have been similarly hampered.

The crux of the whole situation is in the sentence above which reads, "Our publications can be operated for much less . . ."

But to do so is to destroy the effectiveness and high rating of Carolina's publications. The Daily Tar Heel has not had enough money to print all the pictures and features it could this year. The budget for cuts and engravings has already been used up. With the rising cost of all items in the newspaper and magazine field, more money is an absolute necessity.

Money to pay for complete coverage of a busy sporting scene next year, money to enlarge and include a possible long-planned, but never available Sunday feature section, more and better pictures, and all of the things promsied by editors-to-be in the annual spring campaign can be made available by the acceptance of the increased budget as planned by the Publications board.

The board is to be congratulated for taking cognizance of the need for increasing the budget. We hope the legislature will also realize the need for increasing the fees and making possible numerous improvements in our eevr-growing field of publications.

The Romanticist

I'd Rather Be Right . . .

Subsistence Question Soon To Be Considered in House

By Earl Heffner

Time is flying by. And the bird is on the wing.

Within a short while the Veterans Affairs committee of the House of Representatives is going to take one of three actions on the proposed increase in subsistence for veterans studying under Public Law 346, the GI Bill of Rights.

Either this committee will pass the bill out into the House with a favorable recommendation, will send it out with an unfavorable recommendation, or will pigeon-hole the bill, this being tantamount to killing the measure.

Officials of the American Veterans committee, frequently under assault by scare-mongers, have reported from Capitol Hill—through the AVC Bulletin and with verification by Walter Spearman of the University journalism department and local chapter of the AVC—that the bill is doomed unless it is stimulated by individual letters to Congressmen by student veterans.

Unfortunately, the present situation is acute and cannot be aided by letters to just any Congressman. This type of letter will help immeasurably if and when the bill gets out of committee. But as long as it remains there, the concentration must be on members of this committee.

For this reason I have taken special pains to find out the names of all men on the Veterans Affairs committee of the House of Representatives. Their names follow:

Republicans: Alvin E. Okonski (Wisconsin), Frank A. Matthews, Jr. (New Jersey), William J. Crow (Penn.), Richard B. Vail (Ill.), Herbert A. Mayer (Kansas), Edward A. Mitchell (Indiana), Dayton Phillips (Tennessee), Chairman Edith Nourse Rogers (Mass.), Berbard W. Kearney (New York), Robert Trip Ross (New York), Homer A. Ramey (Ohio), James T. Patterson (Conn.) George W. Sarbacher, Jr. (Penn.), and Claude I. Bakewell (Missouri).

Democrats: John E. Rankin (Mississippi), A. Leonard Allen (La.), Olin E. Teague (Texas), Glen D. Johnson (Okla.), Joe L. Evins (Tennessee), Georgia L. Lusk (N. M.), W. M. Wheeler (Georgia), Walter B. Huber (Ohio), Melvin Price (Ill.) and Hamilton C. Jones, (North Carolina, Charlotte, that is.)

There is the list of representatives serving on the committee which will determine whether a number of veterans will be able to realize the benefits of the GI Bill of Rights.

The personal stand on the issue of each of these representatives is unknown to me at present. However, it would seem safe to surmise that opinions could be swayed by letters from their voters.

The choice to veterans seems to be: Would you rather write a letter, or take up another notch in that belt which soon will fit around your waist?

Like the Good Health motto, "It's All Up To You."

Letters To The Editor

All letters must be typewritten, double-spaced, under 300 words in length, and signed by the writer. Writer's name will be withheld on request, but letters must be signed. The Daily Tar Heel reserves the right to present the letters as it wishes and to delete all matter it considers libelous.

Free Speech

In answer to Mr. Smith's and Mr. Clark's objections to the Daily Tar Heel's publication of articles by Mr. Margolis, there are several points which need clearing up.

In the first place, there is nothing undemocratic about Mr. Margolis' point of view or the means by which he expresses it. The fact that Mr. Margolis feels free to question our nation's policy and to exercise his right of freedom of speech through a free press embodies three of the basic concepts of American democracy. Far from being totalitarian, "Russian" or "foreign," Mr. Margolis' exercise of his right to criticize is about as close to a vital, living expression of democratic ideals as one can approach. The campus would undoubtedly benefit if there were others who exercised their right of expression through the student newspaper, no matter what their conclusions might be. A student newspaper is, contrary to Mr. Smith and Mr. Clark, the exact place where student opinion should be aired. We agree with Mr. Smith and Mr. Clark in their idea that the "capitalistic-democratic" point of view needs more champions; champions who will give the good aspects of our administration's policy, not merely damn those who see bad points.

Democracy is incompatible with the saying, "My country right or wrong, but still my country." Rather, democracy thrives where the idea, "My country right and wrong," is acted upon.

We congratulate Mr. Margolis for expressing his views, though this is no more than should be expected of a citizen of the United States. We congratulate the Daily Tar Heel for publishing his articles, though again, this is no more than should be expected from a free press.

Sympathy Note

May we be the first to express our deepest sympathy for the poor, mistreated boys of Old East who had shoes, wastebaskets, etc., piled on their beds by the mean old janitors who were waxing their floors. We want them to know that our hearts bleed for them. Their hardships are more than mortal man should be called upon to bear. The very least that this institution could do would be to provide a chaplain to listen to such heartbreaking tales of woe, and to offer spiritual consolation for their suffering. Perhaps in the afterlife things will be different.

We, here in the Quonset Huts, have no such problems as beset our less fortunate brethren. The janitors bother us not at all. Indeed, we don't even need them to soil our beds. The dust, rising from our concrete floors and the soot settling from our oil-burning heaters does the job quite effectively. Our clothes too are exposed to the soot and dust, as we have no closets. But still we are fortunate. No janitor has ever sullied the cleainliness of our linen or disturbed one particle of dust in our happy homes.

Let the boys of Old East receive consolation in the knowledge that our hearts are touched by their plight. With them, we say, "Ain't it a shame?"

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

MARGARET TRUMAN ASKED TO SING STAR-SPANGLED BANNER AT 1948 DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION; DEMOCRATS BEGIN "DRAFT TRUMAN" MEETINGS; TRUMAN RADIATES POLITICAL CONFIDENCE.

Washington.—While Republicans were literally pounding on the outer gates during the Lilienthal debate, Democratic national committeemen from Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia and West Virginia were enjoying a unique session with Harry Truman within the White House.

Spoke up vivacious Mrs. Emma Guffey Miller, Democratic committeewoman from Pennsylvania:

"Mr. President, I've got a request to make. I want a girl whom you know very well to open the '48 Democratic Convention by singing 'The Star-Spangled Banner.'"

Truman grinned happily.

"You know who I mean, Mr. President," Mrs. Miller continued. "She made her debut only recently and she's very good."

"I've heard that request before, haven't I, Gael?" Truman finally replied, looking toward Democratic executive director Gael Sullivan. "The answer is 'no comment.'"

While Democratic leaders got no commitment regarding Margaret Truman and "The Star-Spangled Banner," they did come away from the meeting more confident of their political future than at any time since Franklin Roosevelt died just two years ago this week.

The meeting had been arranged by Sullivan as first in a series in which party kingpins will come to Washington to discuss national affairs wtih the President and top Cabinet officials. It was also designed to warm up Democrats for a "Draft Truman" drive.

CHICAGO VICTORY

Truman himself really seemed to enjoy the meeting. He'd ordered a dozen chairs arranged in front of his desk and as the group entered, he shook hands and escorted the women separately to these favored chairs.

Ex-Senator James Tunnell of Delaware opened the discussion by remarking that the President should feel pleased with the results of the Chicago mayoralty election, which returned the Democrats to office with a thumping majority. Republican efforts to minimize the national implications of the Chicago Democratic victory, Tunnell added, sounded rather thin to him.

Truman agreed. Then he passed around a Baltimore Sun cartoon by Edmund Duffy showing the GOP elephant huddled under the Capitol dome, viewing with alarm the Chicago election.

"If you look at those results and the results of the various surveys," Truman said, "I think you can safely conclude that the Democratic party is on the up —" He paused, then added, "and up."

Pennsylvania's national committeeman David Lawrence then asked about the reaction to the "Truman Doctrine" speech which called for aid to nations threatened with Russian domination.

"I've been delighted by the response," the President said, explaining that it was overwhelming. "We've all got to work to make the peace. We've all got to make the peace work."

GOP BUDGET CUTTING

Delaware's Tunnell then dissected the Republican Congressional objections to the Truman program, pointing out that men like Michigan's Congressman Crawford and New York's John Taber, came from rock-ribbed Republican districts where they didn't have to explain their actions to the voters to win re-election.

"I think the people aren't being fooled," replied Truman. "I suppose you noticed Sam Rayburn's speech in the House yesterday. Sam certainly called the turn. The Republicans have made a lot of promises that they can't live up to. But what's even more surprising is that they made a lot of promises after election that they didn't have to make. Now they can't live up to any of them."

Pennsylvania's Lawrence then told how the Republicans were attempting to slash several important Federal projects in Pennsylvania; also how Pennsylvania's Republican Senator Martin was assuring voters that the projects would not be cut, particularly one proposed dam in the Pittsburgh area.

Carolina Sweeps Pair Of Wins From Michigan

Netters Battle Colgate, Linksmen To Play Georgetown Today

Baseball Club Triumphs, 6-1

DiLorenzo Pitches Five-Hit Victory

By Bob Goldwater

Another type of wolf—slightly different from the Carolina version—was trapped in Emerson stadium yesterday afternoon when the Tar Heels, behind the five-hit shooting of chief-hunter Vinnie DiLorenzo, skinned Michigan's Wolverines, 6-1, for their fourth success of the campaign.

The New Jersey southpaw, twirling Carolina's best-pitched game of the season, had a shutout for eight innings but weakened in the ninth when the visitors crashed through for their lone tally. DiLorenzo whiffed nine batters to run his total up to 19 for 15 innings.

Big Fifth Frame

Carolina iced the contest with a big fifth frame during which the locals batted completely around the lineup to register four runs. Emmett Cheek, big man in Saturday's triumph over Duke, started the inning off in the right direction by clouting a triple that sailed over the head of left-fielder Paul White. Free passes to John Gregory and Rip Ryan loaded the bases but Jim Hayworth forced Cheek at the plate for the first out. DiLorenzo thereupon proceeded to clinch his own victory.

With the sacks still filled, the Tar Heel moundsman dumped a Texas leaguer in short left field and Gregory and Ryan tore home for the second and third runs. Cookie DiChiara worked his way for his second walk of the game to again crowd the bases and Harry Beason promptly singled through the middle to drive in Hayworth and DiLorenzo. Dub Johnson and Whitey Black skied to the outfield to end the stanza.

Take Early Lead

The Tar Heels jumped off to an early advantage in the first frame without the benefit of a hit. DiChiara strolled, stole second, and scored on infield outs by Beason and Johnson. The Blue and White batters collected their only other marker, save for the four in the fifth, in the eighth inning when Jim Hamilton, third-base replacement, started off with a free pass to first and was bunted along to third from where he tallied on Gregory's infield out.

In the meantime, the Wolverine attack was being figured in terms of hits rather than runs. Michigan picked up single safeties in the second, third and fourth frames, but first base was as far as the runners ever progressed. A snappy double-play, Ryan to DiChiara to Gregory, erased the fourth-inning runner and the visitors went hitless after that until two bingles in the final inning produced their only tally.

Michigan Scores

First-baseman Howie Wikel led off in the ninth with a solid single into left and Dom Tomasi drove him around to third with another safety. Wikel tallied on a long loft to center by Bob Weise.

Wolverine hurler Bud Rankin matched DiLorenzo in the pitching department, allowing but five hits in the seven innings he worked. Six walks proved to be his undoing and he suffered the loss.

The two teams play the second game in the series tomorrow afternoon. Starting time is again at 4 o'clock.

Seixas Sweeps Honors In Sedgefield Tennis

Carolina's Vic Seixas swept individual honors in the finals of the Sedgefield Invitation tennis tournament in Greensboro Sunday when he trimmed teammate Clark Taylor in the singles and then teamed with Taylor to triumph in the doubles play.

Both finalists advanced to the championship round in competition Sunday morning, Seixas with a 6-3, 6-4 success over Frank Warren of Colgate and Taylor by virtue of a 6-2, 6-4 win over Phillippe Neff of Washington. In the finals, Seixas had an easy time with his doubles partner, routing Taylor by 6-1, 6-1.

Taylor summed up the match when he stated: "I usually play a slow game, but Vic didn't give me a chance to concentrate on my shots. It was bang, bang, bang—just like that."

In the doubles final, Seixas and Taylor, after getting off to a shaky start and dropping the first set, rallied and sailed through the final two cantos to topple Dr. David Johnson and Doyle Royal, both from Washington, by a count of 4-6, 6-2, 6-1.

Another Tar Heel duo, Jack Kenfield and Charlie Rice, was eliminated from the doubles play in the semi-finals.

Kenfield Kids Gain 10-2 Win

Colgate Big Test For Local Crew

By Roy Holsten

Scoring their fifth straight victory in as many outings, the Tar Heel netters came out on the long end of a 10-2 score yesterday when they trounced the Michigan Wolverines in the first of five games to be played this week.

The Ann Arbor crew, who suffered from lack of practice, were no match for the potent Carolina squad as they played the first of five encounters in their current southern tour. During the next six days they clash with Duke, Virginia, Washington and Lee, and Davidson.

Today at 3 o'clock, the Kenfield Kids take on the highly touted Red Raiders from Colgate in what promises to be one of the best encounters of the season. The Colgate crew can boast of three potent netmen in Frank Warren, Bill Cartel, and Frank Arnold, all of whom have impressive records.

In today's number one tilt, powerful Vic Seixas continued his winning ways when he pounded out a 6-4, 6-3 victory over the Wolverine top-seeded netman, Andy Paton.

In the first set, Seixas led 5-1 when the erratic Michigan sophomore turned on some beautiful net work and took the next three games to make it 5-4. Seixas recovered and after battling out a deuce point six times, the Carolina star poured over a quick ace followed by a smashing return of the 21-year-old Michigan junior's high lob shot to take the initial set.

Second Set

The second set was featured by Seixas' well placed net shots and fireball services. Paton countered with strong returns and drew applause for several of his shots but vaunted Vic was just too powerful.

Colorful Clark Taylor played his usual steady brand of tennis and trounced Fred Otto, 20-year-old number two Wolverine 6-3, 6-1. Taylor pressed his man after losing two early games and Otto was forced to resort to a defensive style. The Tar Heel courtman took advantage and poured over strong deep shots that soon wilted the slim Michigan visitor.

In the doubles, Seixas and Taylor repeated their single wins by topping Paton and Otto in two quick 6-1 sets. Both teams were strong on net volleys and play was very fast.

Remaining Results

The other results: Rice over Zeimann, 7-5, 6-3; Nicholson over Mikulich, 7-5, 7-5; Gruner over McClusky 6-3, 6-3; Kenfield over Cook 4-6, 6-3, 6-2; Skakle over Lincoln 6-4, 6-4; Naugle over Swigart 4-6, 6-4, 6-2. Doubles: Mikulich and Zeiman over Nicholson and Skakle 6-3, 6-4, 4-6; McClusky and Cook beaten by Kenfield and Rice 6-3, 6-4; Morris and Alexander over Lincoln and Naugle 6-1, 6-1.

Mural Softball Openers Set For This Afternoon

The opening of intramural softball season, cancelled twice previously because of bad weather, is slated for this afternoon with 36 fraternity and dormitory nines scheduled to see action.

The loss of two weeks playing time necessitated the drawing up of a new schedule, which provides for each team to play eight contests before the end of the season.

Team managers have been urged to have their teams organized and ready to play ball at the appointed time and place so that the necessity of declaring forfeits will be eliminated.

SOCCER PRACTICE

Spring soccer practice will begin this afternoon at 3 o'clock, according to an announcement yesterday afternoon by Coach Marvin Allen, who pointed out that he planned to work the Tar Heels for about two weeks before a projected mural soccer tournament.

Tar Heel Runners Begin Workouts For Georgia Tech

Carolina's track team went through a rough session yesterday afternoon in preparation for its first dual meet of the season Saturday afternoon against Georgia Tech in Atlanta.

The Tech runners are power-laden and they scored their first win of the season last Saturday by downing a strong Florida team by 11 points.

Tech's Yellow Jackets are strong in the dashes, where they have such outstanding stars as Buddy Fowlkes, Mel Queen and George McHugh.

Fowlkes is a versatile cinderman, pacing Tech in the sprints, broad jump and low hurdles. He does well in all of them as was shown by his performance in the recent indoor games here. He set a new meet record in the broad jump, won the sprint and finished a close second to Chunk Simmons in the low hurdles.

Coach Dale Ranson warned the squad about over-confidence and told all the men that it was a rough road that lay ahead. He also added, "We have the best potential material out for the team that we have ever had and hard work and determination will be the only means to a successful season."

This meet will be a homecoming affair for "The Snipe" Seligman, as Bob was a V-12 student at Tech and scored many a point for Coach Norris Dean of that institution.

Life Saving Classes Get Underway Today

Today is the last day to enter the Senior Life Saving classes here, and all men and women who are interested are requested to report to Buddy Crone at the indoor pool at 4 o'clock.

All those holding instructors' badges on the campus are invited to help out in this class. Credit will be given to all those that participate.

Golfers Seek Third Victory

Doeschler To Play In No. 1 Position

Carolina's undefeated golfers will face their toughest competition of the early season this afternoon when they tee off against the powerful Hoyas of Georgetown at Durham's Hope Valley Country club starting at 1:45 o'clock.

Coach Chuck Erickson is expected to juggle his starting lineup for the match, switching dependable Dick Doeschler to the No. 1 spot and dropping Harvey Ward, who hasn't hit his stride thus far this season, to the No. 3 slot. Big Junie Bailey will continue to hold down the No. 2 position with Ray Taylor moving up to No. 4. A newcomer, Ed Ashby, will break into the lineup at No. 5, leaving the No. 6 berth as a toss-up between Bob Cox and Mike Nolan.

The visitors from Washington will send a strong sextet against the Tar Heels, coming south with recent victories over Navy and Dartmouth, the pride of the East, under their belts.

The Hope Valley course, which has been in a rather soggy condition of late, seems to be drying out under the effects of summer-like sun and warm breezes, and the first signs of new grass have just begun to appear. It should be in top form for the match.

Murray To Umpire In Piedmont League

Frank Murray, freshman basketball mentor and umpire in the home baseball encounters, leaves for Lynchburg, Va., tomorrow to make a bid for an umpiring position in the Piedmont league.

Murray called most of Carolina's home games last season and started off again this year.

Over 40 Papers, Periodicals Are Available in DTH Office

Over 40 publications are now regularly received by the Daily Tar Heel through exchanges and subscriptions and are always available for anyone to read, in the DTH offices. Included in this list are eight college dailies from all over the United States, nearly two dozen non-daily college newspapers, two state daily newspapers, and several state and trade publications and periodicals.

Feeling that many students will be interested in some of these, the Daily Tar Heel maintains regular files of the following ten publications on racks in the news office: The Durham Sun, Durham Morning Herald, Chapel Hill Weekly, News of Orange County, The Daily Texan, The Duke Chronicle, The Carolinian (WCUNC), Old Gold and Black (Wake Forest), The Technician (N. C. State), State Magazine.

Care Urged

These are constantly kept up to date, and the public is welcome to read them, however, great care is urged in replacing them in the files after reading, and keeping them in good condition, as frequent reference is necessary to them in DTH writing.

Other newspapers and magazines left in the outer news office are: The Daily Trojan, (U. of Sou. Cal.), The Daily Californian, The Syracuse Daily Orange, Temple University News, The Indiana Daily Student, Columbia Daily Spectator, The Flat Hat (Wm. and Mary), The Carnegie Tartan, The Stratford Traveller (Danville, Va.), Southern Textile Bulletin, Purdue Exponent, The Heights (Boston college), Trumbull Tide (U. of Conn.), Oberlin Review.

Fairmont Times-Messenger, New Mexico Lobo, The Dakota Student, The New Hampshire, The Salemite, Orange and White (U. of Tenn.), The Missippian, Miami Hurricane (Florida), The Twig (Meredith College), The Emory Wheel. Other newspapers are received from time to time from the Universities of South Carolina, Alabama, Georgia, Georgia Tech, Florida, Virginia, Maryland, and George Washington.

Suggestions are welcome as to other suggested exchanges.

Cercle Francais to Sponsor French Charity Drive Here

By Louis Nicoud

The Cercle Francais is a nebulous quantity to the majority of University students, but for all its lack of campus fame, it is an extremely busy and industrious organization.

It has recently assumed the local sponsorship of a drive to collect funds for American Aid to France, Inc., a national organization pledged to financial assistance in the reconstruction of war-torn France.

Through the cooperation of E. Carrington Smith, owner of the Pick theater, the Cercle has been able to arrange for the presentation of four French films the first of which, "Le Resistance," will be shown tomorrow.

Between performances of the films members of the club will pass a collection box among the audience. Funds collected will be submitted to a central fund collected from eight southeastern states which have pledged themselves to the rebuilding of the town of Lorient. The ultimate goal of this drive is $85,000.

Lorient was at one time an important port in France and a great navy arsenal during the war. However, after being long beleaguered, the town is now 80 per cent destroyed. The former population of Lorient was around 70,000, but there are now some 30,000 people unable to return, as they wish, as they have no place to live.

The entire population is homeless and those inhabitants who have remained in the town are living in barracks. Conditions of sanitation and hygiene are deplorable, and the town has no hospital.

When informed by cable that the Cercle Francais planned to assist in the rehabilitation of his town, the mayor of Lorient sent a cable in reply, which translated, reads: "In the name of the people of Lorient so direly tried during the war and German occupation I address to the people of Chapel Hill the expression of very sincere thanks and assurance of warm friendship. Signed: Lepan, Mayor of Lorient."

No Progress Made to End Phone Strike

Union, AT & T Heads Confer at Capital

Washington, April 8—(UP—Joseph Beirne, the head of the striking telephone workers, told the nation tonight evening that federal peacemakers have gotten nowhere in their efforts to end the nationwide walkout.

The denunciation of the expressed hope of Conciliator Peter Mann that long distance lines operators would reach an agreement by today. Beirne asserted that he himself had withdrawn from the negotiations and therefore saw no reason for optimism since no separate peace with the Bell system will be reached without the approval of the policy committee governing the strike as a whole.

Good Progress

The union's government conciliators announced good progress in their attempt to send 625,000 phone workers back to their jobs. The government's first team of labor experts announced it intended to keep negotiations going in the nation's capital long after union and company delegations spent the day in conference at the labor department.

The President's fact finding board is standing by and waiting.

Senate Begins Debate On Aid to Greece Plan

Washington, April 8—(UP)—The Senate yesterday began debate on what may well be the most important foreign policy decision to come before the current session of Congress—aid to Greece. Senate president Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan opened the discussion with an hour long speech in which he called for immediate aid for both Greece and Turkey, warning that Congress will endanger the welfare of the nation if it refuses assistance in the Middle East.

Vandenberg admitted that the aid plan is a "calculated risk" to head off a third world war and named Russia specifically when he warned that other countries have expansionist ideas. Greece and Turkey. He added that he believed it is wiser for the United States to enter into the Middle East now even if it means an open break with Russia. Vandenberg stated: "If we were to reject the plan, we would be giving the green light to aggression everywhere. Our moral authority and leadership would die on the spot. We would invite our own hazards."

UP Names Jacobson For Mag Editorship

Present Chief Unanimously Endorsed To Run for Second Term this Spring

By Sam Whitehall

A University party unanimous nomination yesterday put the name of Fred Jacobson in the running for Editorship of the Carolina Magazine. Without a dissenting voice, the men who represent the entire Jacobson, successful candidate last year and current editor of the Magazine.

Nomination of Jacobson for a second term is a move unprecedented in recent campus publication history. "We feel that Fred has done a tremendous job in reviving a Magazine which hit rock-bottom during war years," explained a University party spokesman. "Recent issues of the Carolina Magazine have been generally accepted as the best since 1942. We feel that if re-elected, Jacobson will bring to the editor's post the experience needed to stabilize the publication at its best."

Long Record of Service

A rising Senior, Jacobson has a long record of scholastic, service and professional writing and editing behind him. Before joining the Army, he worked for two years in the New York Sun's sports department.

In the service, he was in intelligence and was also battalion publications chief. His service under fire was recognized by the award of the Silver Star for "valor in action."

Returned Winter, 1946

Jacobson returned to Chapel Hill and the University in the winter quarter of 1946, immediately resuming work on student publications. Campus experience includes night editorship and associate editorship of the Daily Tar Heel, and columnist for the same paper.

Jacobson is probably the first candidate to have edited the publication before being elected to the post. That came about when he was invited to edit the February, 1946, issue of the Carolina Magazine. The talent he showed in this period led to his nomination and greatly aided in his election by an overwhelming majority in last year's election.

Fred Jacobson, editor of the Carolina Magazine, received the nomination of the University Party for reelection.

Police Discover Langley Collyer

New York, April 8—(UP)—New York police tonight closed the books on the mystery of the fifth avenue hermits, the Collyer brothers.

The brothers, Langley and Homer—one a musician, the other an admirer of [illegible]—lived as hermits in their Fifth avenue mansion for nearly 40 years.

Three weeks ago, Homer, blind and paralyzed, was found dead in the trash-filled mansion. Since that time police have been going through the home and searching through the city for Langley.

Search had a case to stir the imagination of the big town. Every one reported seeing long-haired Langley but the police.

Today, shortly before 4 o'clock, police found Langley. He was dead, apparently crushed to death in one of the tunnels of refuse which ran like mazes through the mansion.

Marshall Spears Unanimously Chosen Head of Coed Athletic Association

By Bettie Washburn

In the lightest vote recorded in coed elections, Barbara Cashion, rising senior from Chapel Hill, defeated Audrey Bryson and Ben Beale for the speakership of the Coed Senate.

The new Senate speaker has attended the University throughout her college career and has been outstanding in student government. At present she is a member of the Student council and served as president of the Town Girls' association this past year.

WAA President

Marshall Spears of Rocky Mount went into the presidency of the Woman's Athletic association unopposed as the candidates Spears transferred to the University from Stephens college this fall. While here she has been active in woman's athletics and has served on the Woman's council and the WAA council.

Bill Lloyd of Chapel Hill defeated R. I. Durham of Hendersonville for the vice-presidency of WAA. Miss Lloyd is a member of the YWCA cabinet, the Student legislature, Town Girls' association, and the Woman's council.

Barbee Elected

Betsy Ann Barbee, also of Chapel Hill and recently elected president of the Town Girls' association for the coming year, was elected secretary of WAA over Mary Ellen Wellons of Raleigh. Miss Barbee has served as president of CICA, president and vice-president of the WAA Council.

Janet Crinkley of Warrenton defeated Nina Moseley of Chapel Hill for the treasurership of WAA by a small margin. Crinkley is a transfer from Peace college.

Nancy Bitzer, Goldsboro, Edenton and [illegible] transfer from Louisburg college went into the office of awards chairman of WAA unopposed.

The 284 ballots of the special election were cast as follows: Senate speaker—Barbara Cashion, 149; Audrey Bryson, 99; Ben Beale, 50; Vice president of WAA—Bill Lloyd, 160; R. I. Durham, 112; Secretary of WAA—Betsy Ann Barbee, 148; Mary Moseley, 125; Ellen Wellons, 119; Treasurer of WAA—Janet Crinkley, 133; Nina [illegible].

Gauss to Speak On 'City of Man' This Morning

With "The City of Man" as his topic, Christian Gauss, dean emeritus of Princeton university, will address the first Convocation of the spring quarter this morning at 11 o'clock in Memorial hall.

Gauss' talk will center around the revolutionary nature of the modern era and the need of bringing political and social thinking into line with the fundamental concepts of the "humane tradition."

All classes at 11 o'clock will be suspended so that all students and faculty members may attend.

Currently the president of the United chapters of Phi Beta Kappa, Gauss, before his retirement from active service, was for many years Dean of the College and professor of romance languages at Princeton.

Awarded Legion of Honor

Today's speaker has been fervently interested in the problems of international and intercultural relations. He was awarded a knighthood in the French Legion of Honor in recognition of his achievements both as scholar and teacher.

In addition to numerous books in the field of literature and the romance languages, Dean Gauss is the author of "Why We Went to War" (1918), and "A Primer for Tomorrow." He also has been a frequent contributor to magazines and collaborative works of national interest.

Rush Says Library Additions Are Part of Indefinite Future

The long-needed additions to the University library must stay in the class of things to come for an indefinite period, Charles E. Rush, University librarian, said yesterday. The advisory building committees of the library administration board and the statewide Friends of the Library will hold planning sessions throughout the spring and summer to make recommendations to the next University building committee, but actual construction cannot begin until the governor and his advisers decide that building costs have come down enough for the state to get the greatest benefit for its money.

Paring First Job

"The next task of the planning committees will be a paring one," said Rush, pointing out that the University's original request for $1,500,000 had been cut to $1,215,000. "And then construction details must be based on building costs that will be one-half [illegible] today."

If the library started building now he explained, only one-half the absolutely required space could be completed under present conditions. And the needs of the Library are constantly growing.

Little Symphony Completes Series of 63 Concerts

The full Symphony, composed of some 65 players under the direction of Dr. Benjamin F. Swalin, launched the most ambitious tour in its history, today in Reidsville, with appearances scheduled in 25 different communities from Asheville to Wilmington.

Two concerts, one for adults and one for children, will be given in repeat appearances, adding five new towns to the schedule.

Following the Reidsville concerts today, the Symphony will appear in Leaksville April 10, Kannapolis April 11 (private concert), Greenville April 14 (private concert), Washington

Daily Tar Heel Staffs Meet this Afternoon

All members of the news, sports, and editorial staffs of the Daily Tar Heel will convene this afternoon at 5 o'clock in the DTH news offices.

All staff members must be present on time, as several very important matters will be considered. No excuses will be accepted unless cleared in advance through the editor or managing editor.

A Repudiation

With this morning's major political news, Fred Jacobson, editor of Carolina Magazine, is revealed as the University party's candidate for re-election to his position.

In the face of criticism which has been aimed at him, this nomination comes as a complete repudiation from the insults of Mr. Jacobson's opponents and an endorsement by polittcal leaders cognizant of the quality of his work.

It is a recognition of Mr. Jacobson's perserverance in surmounting numerous difficulties, the most notable of which were his own inexperience and some campus hostility as a result of the initial experimental issues.

By nominating Mr. Jacobson to succeed himself, the University party shows it agrees with the majority of critics who feel that the present Magazine staff, under the capable leadership of Mr. Jacobson, has emerged as a high quality unit capable of publishing an excellent magazine. Not only this. The party indicates that it recognizes the excellence of the last few issues of the magazine, a fact pointed out to Daily Tar Heel readers with each Mag issue by DTH Critic R. Haskell Hamilton.

Whether Mr. Jacobson will be a "vote-getter" is a question only the polls can answer. But the question of the quality of his regime has been answered with a hearty affirmation.

Elections Fever

Machine politics on the University campus took a body blow yesterday with the announcement by Johnny Clampitt, chairman of the Elections committee, in declaring his candidacy for the student body presidency.

And with Mr. Clampitt's announcement, the accelerating spring elections fever rolled into high gear with promise of heated campaigns which will shroud predictions of the results in a nebulous cloak which no "expert" may hope to fathom with any degree of certainty.

Perhaps the greatest benefit of an independent entering the race will be the stimulation of student interest in the forthcoming elections, an interest that is altogether too conspicuous by its absence. Maybe students will refrain from leaving "elections to the politicians," instead will study the platforms of parties and of individual candidates, will peruse the assets of each candidate before ignoring the ballot box by not voting, or ignoring the vote by casting it simply along party lines with no mental exercise whatsoever.

Soon the University and Campus parties may reveal their final platforms and their complete slates of candidates. When this—and the declarations of independents—finally becomes public, the fever may catch.

The Daily Tar Heel hopes for this aroused interest, also hopes that it will not cause the elections to become embroiled in a mud-slinging campaign, even if this would be more interesting.

Spirit of Peace

It is good to see unselfishness in operation when all around us we are accustomed to egotistic concentration on self.

For this reason, if for no other, Le Cercle Francais is to be commended for assuming local sponsorship of a drive to collect funds for American Aid to France, Inc., a national organization pledged to financial assistance in the reconstruction of war-ravaged France.

Orchids also should go to E. Carrington Smith, owner of the Pick theater through whose cooperation the Cercle has been able to arrange for the presentation of four French films, the first—"Le Resistance"—to be shown today.

The reply of Mayor Lepan of Lorient, city to receive the Chapel Hill aid, shows that the French city is deeply grateful, will be sadly disappointed should the assistance be inconsequential. His cablegram read:

"In the name of the people of Lorient so direly tried during the war and German occupation I address to the people of Chapel Hill the expression of sincere thanks and assurance of warm friendship."

Certainly each of us who finds it possible should attend these films and make heart-felt and large contributions when the collection box is passed.

While the shooting is over, the war still rages so long as any of our allies still suffer its consequences. The "All for One and One for All" spirit of the Three Musketeers should dominate our philosophies and pocketbooks in this atomic age.

Griselda and Scribe Discuss Plight of Student Veterans

By Dick Savage

It has come to my horrified attention that many veterans because of advancing old age are hurrying through their college careers with all speed possible. Their plight has touched me deeply, for many of them have already reached the unearthly age of twenty-five or even more!

However, since I have been going to college for upwards of fourteen years and have now attained that mellow stage of life whre my greatest concern is the vitamin pills I take, I think I can offer condolences and perhaps a few words of advice.

My advice should be of particular benefit in this matter since I matured very early in life. At four years of age I was using my father's Schick Injector—at six and one half years I was translating "Fleurs de Mal,"—at ten I was a bus-boy in the officers' mess during the Spanish-American War. As a result I have tasted early all the dangers and delights concomitant with youth and can now comfort the aging veterans in a most dispassionate and felicitous manner.

As Griselda and I perched happily in our favorite tree in the Arboretum, I outlined my plan to her.

"Griselda," I said, "gib acht! For the benefit of the many ancient veterans on the campus I am going to amplify Socrates' answer to the question as to what is the greatest blessing of old age."

"Mmmmm," said Griselda, as her mouth was full of hair pins. (She was combing her gleaming, tawdry locks with a Chinese back-scratcher).

"Socrates," I went on, "said that the greatest blessing of old age is to be released from the passions!"

"Pfft!" exclaimed Griselda spitting out the hair pins. "You never had enough passion in you to steam-up a mirror. Why, look," she said chucking me under the chin with the wrong end of the back-scratcher, "you're so anemic your blood looks like diluted Southern-Comfort."

"You're very unfair, Griselda," I muttered with embarrassment, quickly mopping up the blood. "There's some things a man likes to keep secret. Besides, in my younger days I was a beautiful shining thing filled with all the grand passions!" I unbuttoned my coat and pointed to my cumberbund made of rattlesnake skin. "See those notches around the top?" I asked proudly.

"Gad!" murmured Griselda, her eyes shining with new ardour.

"Vive l'amour," I breathed with commendable modesty. "But anyway, this is getting beside the point. For the benefit of those students growing old in pursuit of their studies I am going to write a book with Socrates' quotation as the monogram. I shall entitle it 'College Life Without Passion' or, 'How to Tell the Students from the Professors.'"

"I can see it now," sighed Griselda. "Tristan Whetstone—the author of the revolutionary book on life without passion!"

"Yes," I said, "and if that doesn't give enough comfort to the aging veterans, I am submitting another plan to the university officials on how to telescope a veteran's college career into only six weeks. Under this plan it will be necessary for the student only to live on the campus during this period.

While he is there the student will walk inside the buildings and shake hands with various professors who have more radiation than others and in general, simply expose himself to all matters of learning and education. Thus, by a process of diffusion, osmosis and imbibition he will save many precious years of his life which otherwise would have been dissipated away at college. And thereby," I concluded, "he will leave his mind free for more important matters such as Sex and Big Business."

"Darling ,you're wonderful!" cried Griselda swinging through the surrounding trees with pure exuberance. "But I've often wondered," she added, hanging by her toes on a nearby branch, "what course you're taking?"

"I'm taking my degree in Domestic Relations," I replied proudly.

"But why so long at it, my ubermensch," purred Griselda.

"It takes time to become domesticated," I declared stiffly. "Besides, I'm not the least afraid of growing old in pursuit of a degree. My GI Bill of Rights is retroactive from the Spanish-American War and I have many convivial college days ahead. I'm freed from the passions and neither sex nor beer have the slightest. . . ." I paused. "Griselda," I admonished, "will you please stop hanging from the tree in that position. Someone might mistake you for a sloth."

"Silly!" laughed Griselda. "That's impossible. . . I haven't any secondary mammaries!" We dropped the matter there and I began making notes for my new book.

Today's Question

How do you feel about the bill in Congress to outlaw the Communist Party in the United States?

Answers

As much as I dislike the principles of the Communist Party I am opposed to outlawing the party because that would be destroying the very essence of democracy.—Steve Roberson, Charlotte.

Although such an act would be a violation of democratic principals I feel that it is a necessary one for the preservation of our democracy.—James Morris, Atlantic.

Outlawing the Communist Party will force the party to operate underground and adopt more subtle methods. Such action would also be undemocratic and a greater threat to our present democracy in the long run.—Bernard Turner, Charlotte.

I doubt that outlawing any political party as such is a solution to the problem. I rather think they should be allowed to try their best with a check being kept on their funds and men in political position.—Frank Anderson, Birmingham, Ala.

My reaction to the bill as it stands is that it is an undemocratic muzzling of constitutional rights. I do feel, though, that attention should be given to the troublesome communist element in labor organizations. But if the communists are subversively antagonistic, I think they ought to be watched very closely wherever they are.—Don Shields, Torrington, Conn.

I fear that the measure will install Communists in a light of martyrdom thus facilitating their cancerous expansion rather than eradicating the evil. Also, the bill may give birth to a political weapon to be used against liberal non-communists.— T. Earl Heffner, Charlotte.

DTH for Breakfast

To the Editor:

I am one of the many students who are temporarily cut-off from the rest of the campus due to confinement to the infirmary because of illness.

I was amazed to discover that it is practically impossible for patients here to get a Daily Tar Heel during his illness.

I think that it would be a nice gesture on the part of your staff if you would arrange to have a Daily Tar Heel delivered with each patient's breakfast tray. I don't think it would be difficult to arrange, and it certainly would be appreciated by the patients. How about it?

Foreign Policy of Nation Not Clothed in Obscurity

By W. Le Roy Ward III

The war is over now. It has left in its wake millions of suffering peoples. The guns have ceased fire in most of the world's battlefields. The armies are now being geared down to peacetime standards. The virtual "mess" of war is in the process of clearing house. The soldiers have been given their "walking papers." The world, now like a panting dog, has settled down to the various problems of peace.

This nation has now come to ask itself if we were victorious in war why can we not be also victorious in peace? The question is so simple yet the answer gets more and more difficult with every passing day. The United States has asked itself this question and the United States government has embarked on a precarious journey to answer that very question.

The government through its state department has ushered in a foreign policy in keeping with this changing world. The government realizes that there is no "sure fire" curc to the ills of millions of suffering peoples. The free-elected executive and the free-elected congress of the United States in keeping with their duty have presented to the people and to the world what this nation intends to do regarding the peace that we so dearly fought for.

The foreign policy is simple. It is not clothed in obscurity nor is it designed to dupe any nation into the realm of fear. Its main precepts are to help the nations which without this help would be doomed to disaster. It means that the United States is desirous that all nations shall have a chance at a free election; free from the forces of coercion by any group advocating government by totalitarian methods. It is the firm belief of the people of the United States, acting through their duly elected representatives, that this foreign policy is a step in the right direction.

It is regretable that some of us here on the campus cannot see beyond our noses. It is also regretable that some of us on the campus continue to confuse "profundity with obscurity". I am sure that the United States government realizes that the foreign policy is not a "cure-all" but a help to a better understanding of the principles of the government that we in the United States live under and abide by. I am sure that the president is keeping his oath of office and not jeopordizing these principles. It is the duty of every citizen of the United States to support the foreign policy of this nation where that support is deserved and when it is needed. It is also the duty of every citizen to support the president in the gravest of all his responsibilities.

Ford Song Writer Says New Yorker

New York, April 8—(UP)—A New York song writer revealed today that Henry Ford, in addition to the many other things he did, once helped write a song.

The number was called "The White House Is the Lighthouse" and dealt with President Wilson. Lyricist Irving Caesar wrote it while working as a mechanic at Ford's Long Island city plant.

He says Ford visited him one day and saw the lyrics strewn around the room. The motor magnate inquired about them, and Caesar admitted he wasn't having much luck. So Ford, who was a Wilson enthusiast, said, "We've got to finish that."

Caesar told David C. Whitney of the United Press, "He sat down with me and we worked on that song for several hours. He had some good ideas, too."

Later, Caesar left Ford's employ and devoted all his time to writing songs, turning out such hits as "Swanee" and "Tea for Two."

"But," Caesar said today, "I never told anybody before that Henry Ford helped me write that song. He had too many important things to do to be called a songwriter."

Golfers Romp Overs Hoyas

Ward and Doeschler Turn in Top Scores

By Billy Carmichael

Carolina's high-flying linksmen found the warm sun and drying fairways of Hope Valley Country club to their liking yesterday afternoon as they played the best golf of the season to defeat the highly-toured Hoyas of Georgetown, 21½ to 5½. It was the locals third straight triumph.

Little Harvey Ward turned in the top round of the afternoon as he paired a 37 on the front nine with a blazing 32 on the backside to post a one-under-par 69. The Tarboro Terror put on a fine display of good golfing collecting twelve pars, two birdies, and an eagle for the day's work.

Automatic Dick Doeschler, transplanted No. 1 man, also gave an outstanding account of himself in hanging up a par 70 round. The Jacksonville junior went out in the top-flight score of 33, but eased up on the incoming nine to slip up to a slightly less sizzling 37.

The rest of the Tar Heel golfers were also in tip top form. Hard-hitting Junie Bailey started slowly, but hit stride after six shaky holes to finish with a 73; Ray Taylor and Bob Cox overcame a deluge of hard luck to post a 74 and a 75 respectively; and Ed Ashby, performed admirably considering his lack of practice, to come in with a point-winning 77.

The visitors were all but outclassed by the locals, with Ray Larrow and John King scoring a 74 and 77, to lead the Hoyas in their efforts.

Coach Chuck Erickson seemed well pleased with the performances of his charges, but warned that the season's toughest match would probably be on tap for the Tar Heels when they tee off against Michigan, Big Nine champions, at Hope Valley Friday afternoon. "We'll have to be in top form to take that one," the genial golfer mentor remarked.

The complete summary:

Doeschler (NC) defeated Larrow, 2-1.

Bailey (NC) defeated Schattman, 3-0.

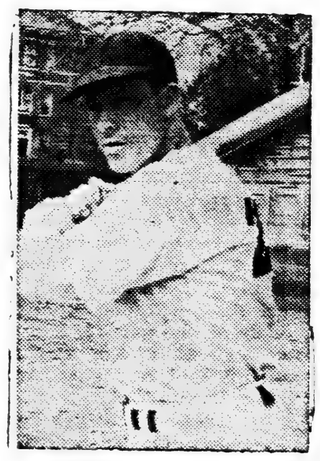
Best ball: NC, 3-0.

Ward (NC) defeated King, 3-0.

Taylor (NC) defeated McCarthy, 3-0.

Best ball: NC, 3-0.

Cox (NC) defeated Rita, 2-1.



Ashby (NC) defeated Martin, 2-1.

Best ball: Georgetown, 2½-½.

Three More Drills Remaining Before Meet With Tech

With only three more workouts scheduled before the big meet with Georgia Tech in Atlanta Saturday, Coach Dale Ranson put all members on the squad through a stiff conditioning session yesterday afternoon.

Again Ranson warned the members of the team that Tech had a strong squad and only through hard work could they hope to take the Yellow Jackets into camp.

Tech has a rough combine and their men in the mile and the two mile are capable of giving the Tar Heel distance men a rough afternoon. In the mile they have John Corridan, who was the Indiana state high school mile champion and finished third in the indoor meet here last March. Dave Durst, the Southeastern conference two-mile champion, will be matched against such Tar Heel stars as Jack Milne, and Sam Magill.

The shot put will feature Tech's football all-star Bobby Davis against Bob "The Snipe" Seligman, and a close finish is forecast.

In the pole vault Norm McLeod and Rusty Russell will be matching jumps with Reiser and Dykes, who tied for third in the indoor classic.

The Engineers have a strong mile relay team with which they copped the indoor title here, and they are paced by Cady, Stowers and Lansing, all capable of running a 50-second-quarter mile.

However the big competition will be in the form of Freshman Buddy Fowlkes who was high scorer of the meet here last month and is even more versatile outdoors. He can be counted on for points in the sprints, low hurdles and broad jump.

Righthander After First Win of Year

Carolina's baseball club will try to quell a revenge-motivated comeback in Emerson stadium this afternoon starting at 4 o'clock when Michigan, 6-1 loser in Monday's tussle, again provides the opposition for Coach Walter Rabb's charges.

The Wolverines will be facing the slants of a Carolina hurler also attempting a reversal of form. Righthander Tommy Andrew, 1944 letterman who suffered the Tar Heels' lone setback last week against Virginia, has been named as the Blue and White twirler for today's debacle and will be seeking to chalk up the third straight complete game for a Tar Heel pitcher. Monk Whiteheart and Vinnie DiLorenzo both went the full route in Carolina's last two outings.

The rest of the locals' lineup is expected to be about the same that opened against Michigan two days ago. Lone exception is slated to appear at the backstop position where Buck Hardee will probably see action in place of Jim Hayworth.

Filling the other berths will be John Gregory, Cookie DiChiara, Rip Ryan, and Dub Johnson in the infield, with the outfield consisting of Emmett Cheek, currently the team's top batter with four hits in eight trips, Whitey Black and Harry Beaman.

BASEBALL BITS: The varsity reserves and jayvees went through a brisk intersquad contest during yesterday's drill. Mural Softball Outfits Show Power in Openers

By Gil McLeod

Several intramural softball nines served notice of their power yesterday afternoon as the opening rounds of play got under way.

A powerful KA No. 2 team started things rolling with an onslaught of 16 runs in their first time at bat against the Chi Psi No. 2 nine. When the game was called after the sixth inning the KA's were leading, 21-8.

The smooth-playing Chi Psi No. 1 team made a much better showing than the No. 2 outfit by running over the SAE No. 2 nine, 20-0.

Other high-scoring combinations included ATO No. 1 with an impressive 24-6 victory over Pi Lamb No. 1, and the Roaches, who exterminated the Locals, 20-3.

The Ringers were awarded the only forfeit of the afternoon when the Med School No. 1 team failed to appear.

Due to the varsity baseball games today and tomorrow, the second rounds of softball play are scheduled for next Tuesday.

Lacrosse Team Works For Game With Duke

The newly organized Tar Heel lacrosse team went through a rough practice session yesterday afternoon in preparation for a tussle with Duke at Durham next Wednesday afternoon.

After the fine showing the Blue Devil stickmen have made in contests with Maryland and Penn State, much work lies ahead for the Carolina team.

All men in school that have had any experience or would like to learn the game are urged to come down at the far end of Fetzer Field this afternoon or any afternoon at 3 o'clock and start getting into condition.

A goal has been set up and the work yesterday afternoon was designed to get the men used to playing the various positions and to work out a style of attack.

The team works under the handicap of no coaching, but what it may lack in ability it makes up in spirit and willingness.

The essential thing now is to get as many men out as possible so that plenty of substitutions can be made in the coming contest.

MICHIGAN WINS

One run in the fifth inning broke a 3-3 deadlock and gave Michigan a 4-3 victory over Duke yesterday afternoon in Durham.

Kenfield Crew Gains 7-2 Win

South Carolina Tilt Opens League Slate

By Roy Holsten

Still unbeaten in six starts, Coach John Kenfield's Tar Heel net terrors took the punch out of the Red Raiders from Colgate yesterday, 7-2, before the second largest crowd of the season, an estimated 1,500.

Despite the lopsided score, the Colgate crew gave the Tar Heels some of the best competition of the year. What the Hamilton lads lacked in depth they made up in spirit. Today they travel to Davidson to meet the Wildcats in the second of their southern tour engagements.

This afternoon the Carolina tennis squad clashes with the South Carolina Gamecocks in their first Southern conference encounter of the season. The tilt is slated for 3 o'clock.

The star attraction of the afternoon was the doubles match between the number one and two players of the respective schools; Carolina's Vic Seixas and Clark Taylor and Colgate's Frank Warren and Holmes Cathrall. Play was highlighted by the stellar net work of both duos. The Tar Heels captured the first set 6-2 but ran into difficulty early in the second when the Colgate netmen poured over a barrage of well placed corner shots. Recovering quickly, Seixas turned on his powerful serve and the next few games were theirs to run the score to 5-4 in favor of the Blue and White. The last game went to deuce before Taylor rifled two lob returns into the right corner to take the match 6-2, 6-4.

In the singles, Seixas had little trouble with Frank Warren, former Carolina star. Warren, who played freshman tennis here in 1941, boasted a fast serve but the bronzed Seixas returned it easily and his powerful net play was the deciding factor in the 6-1, 6-3 setback.

Clark Taylor trounced hard fighting Holmes Cathrall 6-1, 6-4. Taylor had the former Eastern Interscholastic champion 40-love three times in the second set only to lose the game. He finally wilted him and captured the last game with his steady play.

Both Jim Nicholson and Stan Gruner were impressive in their wins. Nicholson topped Doug MacKenzie 7-5, 6-1; and Gruner beat Bill Childs 6-0, 6-2. Each of these boys have improved steadily and are rapidly climbing in standing.

In other matches, (singles) Arnold (Colgate) defeated Rice, 6-2, 6-1; Ford (Colgate) defeated Alexander, 7-5, 3-6, 6-4; (doubles) Nicholson-Skakle (NC) defeated Cathrall-MacKenzie, 3-6, 6-2, 6-2; Kenfield-Rice (NC) defeated Nelson-Childs, 7-5, 6-2.

Snavely Works To Fill Center Position As Spring Grid Drills Enter Third Week

By Irwin Smallwood

Spring football practice for the Tar Heels moves into the third week of activity this afternoon, and after the first 10 days of operations, King Carl Snavely has uncovered a rough spot in his projected 1947 gridiron outfit.

SNAVELY

This weak spot was given its start back last season when stellar center Chan Highsmith suffered two broken vertabrae in the season finale with Virginia. And now with Highsmith definitely ouf for next season, Snavely is faced with the job of filling the center of a potentially powerful Carolina line.

The No. 2 center from last year's defending Southern conference championship team, Dan Stiegman, is back on hand, and Al Bernot, starting center from the 1945 Snavely machine, has also returned. However, Bernot, a standout near the end of the 1945 campaign, is lacking in valuable experience and is having a hard time getting back in shape, and Stiegman still has a trick ankle.

In an effort to strengthen the center berth, Snavely has switched guard letterman Dick McDonald from Durham to the pivot spot. McDonald was a strong reserve on last season's squad and may work into the center position with a little more experience.

At the same time, the silver-thatched Tar Heel mentor continued to run several other of the Tar Heel veterans at new positions, and he indicated that he would continue to make changes throughout the spring sessions. Jack Fitch has shown continued improvement as a tailback, and Fred Bauer may wind up a valuable addition to the wingback department instead of returning to his old flank position.

Overall activity has reached the rough contact and scrimmage stage, and Snavely said yesterday that he would probably have a full-length scrimmage session by the end of this week. A final game-like scrimmage between evenly divided parts of the squad is being planned for about the last week in April, and this event will be open to the student body and Carolina supporters as a spring preview of what's in store for next fall.

Charlie Justice, Carolina All-American freshman star from last year, is still taking part in jayvee baseball, but the outstanding little tailback is expected to be back in the football camp in a week or two more in order to take part in the final couple of weeks of spring practice.

There have been no unusually outstanding performers uncovered in the spring drills so far, but Bill "Earthquake" Smith, a returning tackle letterman, Art Weiner, outstanding end from last season who dropped out of school during the winter quarter, Bernot and Gus Purcell, a jayvee back last year, have attracted considerable attention in early practice.

As a whole, the first two weeks of spring drills have been very satisfactory as far as the "Gray Fox" Snavely is concerned, and the Carolina football head has time and again expressed pride in the squad, which is one of the best ever to report for spring work in the Tar Heel camp. One of the toughest seasons in history lies ahead, however, according to Snavely, and much work is still necessary before the Tar Heels are ready to take the field against Georgia in the opening game here in Chapel Hill September 27.

Hoey Backs Marshall in Fight Against Spread of Communism

North Carolina Senator Expresses Views On Greek Loan, Lilienthal as Atomic Head

By Mel Cohen

"Secretary of State George C. Marshall has my support in his strong position against any further spread of Communism," said Senator Clyde R. Hoey, in Shelby during the Senate's Easter recess. From his first words, "Come in, boys," the interview in his modest office flowed amicably as he expressed his support of the $400,000,000 loan to Greece and Turkey, his incompatability with the proposed universal military training program, qualified approval of Mr. Lilienthal for the Atomic post, and a middle of the road view on the Palestine question.

Appeasement of Hitler

Citing the unsuccessful appeasement of Hitler, Hoey stated, "I voted for the loan to Greece and Turkey because the forcing of communism upon the people of Greece must not come about. The citizenry of Greece voted 85 percent in favor of the monarchy in what our observers called a free election."

Universal military training, he said, is not the solution to our preventing aggression by a foreign country because the next war will be a scientific one. One atom bomb, Hoey continued, might wipe out thousands of men concentrated in a training camp. He advocated that our young men be left to peaceful studies of science in colleges.

Turning to the vote coming up in the Senate next Tuesday on the appointment of David Lilienthal to head the Atomic commission, the Senator declared, "Although Mr. Lilienthal is not the best available man for the job, I will vote in favor of him since I do not believe a case has been made against him."

Asked whether or not he supported the British policy or President Truman's policy regarding Jewish immigration into Palestine, he stated, "I am in favor of a compromise plan whereby the immigration of the Jewish people to Palestine would be a gradual process. The Arab's right to the land they have owned for centuries must be taken into consideration."

Vandenberg-Taft Rift Debated at IRC Meet

Fearful of a collapse in bi-partisan support for America's foreign policy, members of the International Relations club debated at Monday evening's meeting the possible implications of the behind-the-scene rift between Senators Vandenberg and Taft.

Elton Edwards, IRC president before the war, revealed information he had received over the week-end during a private talk with Senator Robert Taft in Washington, and expressed the opinion that Taft is opposed to the Truman doctrine for aid to Greece and Turkey but has not spoken out against the plan because he feels that it would be politically inexpedient at this time.

Distrust of Republican foreign-policy makers was expressed by IRC member Harold F. Elkin, who recalled the long tradition of isolationism in that party.

Ed Hecht started the ball rolling in the discussion with his factual report on the past records of John Foster Dulles, Vandenberg and Taft, leaders in Republican foreign policy making. Harold Stassen, candidate for the Republican presidential nomination in 1948, came in for the hearty approval of those members who hoped for a more internationalist Republican policy.

Phone Strike Parleys Fail

Jersey Workers Defy State Seizure Action

Washington, April 9 — (UP) — Phone strikers in New Jersey decided last night to face jail terms and heavy fines rather than return to their posts.

The attorney for the telephone workers made the announcement shortly after Governor Alfred Driscoll signed a new law that prescribes severe penalties for strikers who stay away from the state-seized exchanges.

From Washington the phone workers top policy committee ordered New Jersey unions to defy the state seizure law and union President Joseph Beirne called the measure unconstitutional.

Blasts Predictions

Beirne also said that settlement of the phone dispute seems farther away than ever tonight. He again blasted government predictions of an early end to the three-day strike.

A late bulletin from Washington reveals that the Southwestern Bell Telephone company has broken off its separate negotiations with striking workers. Union officials promptly said the company's action will prolong the coast-to-coast walkout.

The long lines negotiations, regarded as the key to the whole strike situation, broke off last night when federal conciliators made their usual comment that an agreement was just around the corner. Union spokesmen denied this optimistic forecast.

Safety Strike Still Hampering Industry

Washington, April 9 — (UP) — The government reports that production increased in six of the largest soft coal districts during the day. But the safety strike still has about half the industry closed down.

Automobile Walkout Curtails Production

Detroit, April 9—(UP)—A sudden strike by 51 assembly line drivers has idled 14,000 workers and halted all production at the Hudson Motor company. It is the second wildcat walkout by CIO Auto Workers in two weeks.

Drastic Labor Measure Predicted by Hartley

Washington, April 9 — (UP) — Chairman Hartley predicts that G. O. P. members of his House labor committee will vote solidly for a drastic labor bill authorizing injunctions against strikes in vital industries.

Truman, Cabinet Talk Over Cost of Living

Washington, April 9. — (UP) — President Truman met for an hour and 40 minutes with his cabinet and top economic advisers to discuss the high cost of living. But White House Secretary Charles Ross says, "it was just a lot of talk back and forth, pro and con."

Vandenberg, Taft Clash On Greek Aid Question

Washington, April 9. — (UP) — The two top Senate Republicans have clashed again, this time over the Greek-Turkish aid program. Michigan's Arthur Vandenberg asked for an immediate vote on amendments to assure the U.N. a voice in the program. But Ohio's Robert Taft squelched the move by saying an immediate vote would cut off further debate on the amendments.

Legislature To Vote On Budget

To Appropriate $109,500 in Student Fees; Slash in Publications Total Recommended

By Bookie Jabine

Consideration of a campus budget of $109,500 will be the main business at this evening's meeting of the Student legislature at 7:30 o'clock in Gerrard hall.

Main item of the budget which Bill Mackie's Finance committee will report out tonight is the highly controversial publications figure. Holding hearings throughout the week, the committee arrived at a sum of $69,552, $5,000 less than asked for by Publications board chairman, Bob Morrison.

Morrison Statement

Said Morrison, "The request for $74,267 is really a conservative figure. Many more dollars could be wisely invested."

Meanwhile a spokesman for the Finance committee stated, "We believe that our figure is acceptable to the campus, and one that is adequate to cover publications costs during the coming fiscal year."

The Finance committee will recommend that the Yackety Yack request be cut approximately $5,000, but yearbook Editor Gene Johnstone explained, "In order to put out an annual of the same quality as this year's, and one that will compare with other schools, a bare minimum of $46,000 is needed."

Warren Approves

With reference to the publications allotment, Charlie Warren, speaker of the legislature, pointed out, "The Finance committee has conservatively and properly cut the income of the student publications. The legislature, now guardian of student funds, must show a lot of plain horse sense in expending these funds. In view of the sharply increased costs of publications I do not advise that we compete in a game of spending with other universities. I feel we shall still maintain adequate standards in our publications by following the recommendations of the committee."

Other more important items included in the total of $109,500 are Graham Memorial which will receive $21,900, and the costs of student government. The Finance committee will urge that the legislature approve a figure of $4,371.88 for the three branches of campus government.

Discuss Amendments

The budget, however, is not the only item on tonight's crowded agenda. The assembly will discuss three new constitutional amendments, and a bill to establish precincts in the town district which will be reported out of Bill Miller's Ways and Means committee.

Observers feel that the amendments will encounter little opposition from the floor, but the precinct measure, considered by many to be a "political move" is expected to be hotly contested. The bill would establish separate polling places for men living in fraternity houses and other students residing in town.

State Dramatic Festival Starts on Campus Today

Junior, Senior Colleges, High Schools Appear this Morning in Playmakers Theater

Budding actors and playwrights from high schools and junior and senior colleges, accompanied by their coaches, will match plays and acting ability once more at the annual spring Dramatic Festival beginning this morning at 9:30 in the Playmakers theatre. It will be the 24th annual festival to be sponsored by the Carolina Dramatic association, headed this year by W. Raymond Taylor of the Woman's college dramatic art department in Greensboro.

W. Raymond Taylor, head of the Woman's college dramatic art department in Greensboro, president of the Carolina Dramatic association, will preside over sessions of the CDA's annual spring Drama festival today through Saturday.

High Schools This Morning

Play productions by city high schools will compose the morning session: "Sunday's Child" will be presented by the Beaux and Belles of Lee Edwards high school in Asheville; "Peace, It's Wonderful" will be presented by The Masquers of Needham Broughton high school in Raleigh; "The Dear Departed" will be presented by The Playmasters of Greensboro Senior high.

The afternoon session, which begins at 2 o'clock, will be play productions by county high schools: "Miss Personality Plus" by the Appalachian high school Dramatic club, in Boone; "Pink and Patches" by the Jefferson high school Dramateers. Closing this session will be the presentation of a radio play, "The Finger of God," by the Goldmasquers radio workshop of Goldsboro high school.

Evening Session

Play productions by city high schools will be seen in the evening session which begins at 7:30: "A Pair of Lunatics" by the Hendersonville high school Players; "Circumstances Alter Cases" by the Lexington high school Dramatic club; "The Happy Journey" by The Dramateers of Greenville high school; "Sugar and Spice" by the Broughton Little theatre in Raleigh.

Admission to a single session of plays is 30 cents. A season ticket for the three days of the festival is $1.25. Tickets are on sale in the Green room of the Playmakers theatre.

American History Is Taught Wrong, Says Dean Gauss

The way that American history is taught in schools in the United States is "subversive to our culture," Dr. Christian Gauss, Dean Emeritus and former chairman of the Department of Romance Languages, Princeton university, declared in an address yesterday at the University.

"American history is usually taught as beginning in 1776 and it aims to present America and Americans not as fundamentally beings but as a unique people, the very button on fortune's cap with a manifest destiny of its own and exclusive and immigration quotas designed to protect our interests which are quite different from those of all other peoples," he explained.

Speaking before the quarterly convocation of students, faculty and townspeople in Memorial hall, Dean Gauss was introduced by Chancellor Robert B. House. The program was arranged by a convocation lecture committee of which Dr. C. B. Robson is chairman.

Comparing the subject of his address, "The City of Man" as having the same meaning as Wendell Willkie's expression, "One World," Dean Gauss said, "Willkie's One World is only a new word for the City of Man and our problem today is to examine briefly whether we can hope to realize it fully and remain true to our American tradition."

Dean Gauss said that if the Declaration of Independence is regarded as valid Americanism, it could today be made the Charter of a United Nations.

DTH Unanimously Endorses Jacobson for Magazine Editor

A unanimous endorsement was given Carolina Magazine Editor Fred Jacobson yesterday afternoon by members of the Daily Tar Heel staff. Voting at a staff meeting, the newspaper men and women endorsed the present editor and University party nominee for the editorship of next year's Magazine without a dissenting vote.

Jacobson, elected to the post last year following a period of service as associate editor of the Daily Tar Heel, was termed "most qualified" and "magazine-wise" by those speaking in his behalf. Staff members expressed the opinion that Jacobson was "capable of putting out the best Magazine possible," and displayed unlimited confidence in his ability.

Endorsement of Jacobson is the second such action taken by the DTH staff this year. The group earlier endorsed present Desk Editor Barron Mills for the post of editor. Mills has since been nominated by the Student party.

Mrs. C. W. Tillett Will Speak Tonight in Graham Memorial

Democratic National Committee Official Will Discuss Women's Place in Politics

By Bettie Washburn

Mrs. Charles W. Tillett of Charlotte, vice-chairman of the Democratic National committee, will speak here on "Women in Politics" this evening at 8 o'clock in the main lounge of Graham Memorial, under the sponsorship of the Women's Vocational office and the Vocational and Public Affairs committees of the YWCA.

Mrs. Tillett, who has long been active in civic and political work throughout the state and nation, has several times been a delegate to Democratic national conventions. She is the first woman to have served as vice-chairman of a national convention, having had that honor in 1944 at the Democratic national convention in Chicago.

The distinguished Mrs. Tillett was graduated from the University of North Carolina and also studied at Columbia university.

Her political career began in her own precinct in Charlotte when she decided that the best way for women to accomplish things in government is to become active in one of the major political parties. From a mere listener at political meetings, she became successively vice-chairman of the Mecklenburg County committee, vice-chairman of the Tenth North Carolina Congressional district organization, and finally vice-chairman of the North Carolina Democratic Executive committee on which she worked for 10 years.

It was in this post that she presented to the State Executive committee the motion which gave precinct representation for women in the state.

Mrs. Tillett has been an active advocate of a world organization for peace for more than 20 years, during which time she has participated in important women's organizations supporting this movement. In recent years she has spoken on international affairs to women in 46 states and in 1945 arranged for the holding of more than 3,000 meetings of women throughout the country in support of Dumbarton Oaks, Bretton Woods agreements, and the United Nations charter.

She has been chairman of committees on international relations of various organizations, including the League of Women Voters, American Association of University Women, and the YWCA.

She attended the San Francisco conference when the United Nations charter was adopted and has participated in many panel discussions on international relations in various parts of the country.

Foreign Expert Harvey Hall Calls for 'Long Range Policy'

Harvey P. Hall, former information expert in the State department's office of Near Eastern and African affairs, called for a more idealistic and long-range U. S. foreign policy during his talks here Tuesday to various student seminars. Hall's visit was sponsored by Professor K. C. Frazer of the political science department.

"Truman's Greek-Turkey aid proposal is merely a short-range tactic," explained Hall during a discussion with an International Relations club interviewing committee. "We talk nonsense when we say that our reason for supporting Greece is because we want to preserve democratic governments. Our immediate problem is the preservation of stability and peace in the Near East."

Now Edits Journal

Hall is now editor of the Middle East Journal, a newly formed quarterly magazine published in Washington. During the war, he worked with the O.S.S. on problems relating to Turkey.

"America's support of democratic principles everywhere must be a beacon for the peoples of the world," Hall stated. "Democratic governments are the best insurance against war and the best resistance against aggression." He defined a democratic government as "one having the best interests of all the people at heart, with a large measure of personal freedom and economic justice."

On Palestine

On the Palestine question, Hall declared that any solution will have to be imposed forcefully. He said that the United States may soon have to take over Britain's responsibilities in the Holy Land.

In answer to a student's question, Hall admitted that Churchill's plan for an Anglo-American campaign in the Balkans during the war might have been a good idea for political reasons.

'MACBETH' SCRIPTS

Scripts for "Macbeth," which will be produced by the Carolina Playmakers in the Forest theatre during May, are now on reserve in the library. Tryouts for this production will be held in the Forest theatre next Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Coffee Shop To Reopen In Lenoir Pine Room

The popular Coffee shop, begun last year in Lenoir hall Pine room, will be re-instituted next Monday morning, replacing the present tray cafeteria announced L. H. Gooch, dining hall director.

A complete changeover from the present ready-meal service will be made in the Coffee shop revival, featuring table service, long hours, and a la carte service. Although it will be closed on Saturdays, the new restaurant will remain open all day Sunday.

Should student demand be great enough, Gooch explained, a nickelodeon will be installed for dancing, and the new restaurant may remain open until 11 o'clock nightly. Tried first last summer, the Coffee shop was discontinued in the fall due to the necessity of speeding up lines to handle the increased school enrollment. The tray cafeteria is being closed due to lack of trade.

Special dishes to be featured will include steaks, chops, sandwiches, salads and cold plates. Hours will be as follows: morning: 9:15-11; noon, 11:30-2; evening, 5:30-8.

Liquor, Fireworks Discussed by Phi

The Phi assembly, at a meeting devoted mainly to bills concerning the General Assembly at Raleigh, advocated last Tuesday the institution of ABC stores throughout North Carolina and upheld a measure passed by the state legislature which prohibits the manufacture, sale, and use of firecrackers.

Main features under discussion, of the liquor bill, were benefits which would accrue to the educational system of this state due to proper taxation of liquor.

Annual Sigma Chi Derby Day Is Scheduled for April 19

Sweetheart to Be Chosen at Woollen Dance; Group Also to Select 'Miss Modern Venus'

By Sam Whitehall

The gala social event of the spring quarter—the annual Sigma Chi derby and Sweetheart ball—will be held next Saturday afternoon and evening, April 19, a spokesman for the local Alpha Tau chapter revealed yesterday. The program will consist of a derby, consisting of seven coeds' events, to be held on Fetzer field starting at 2 p. m., and a formal dance in Woollen gymnasium starting at 9 p. m. with music by Roy Cole and his orchestra.

Selection of two beauty queens will highlight the day's activities. "Miss Modern Venus" will be selected in the grand finale to the derby, while selection of the "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi" will be the big event of the evening. The new sweetheart and her two hand-maidens will be presented during the figure at the dance.

"Miss Modern Venus" will be selected from candidates from the five campus sororities, the CICA.

The contestants will wear bathing suits and be judged on the basis of figure and beauty. Miss Barbara Lynn, last year's winner, went on to win the title of "Miss Dixie" in Daytona Beach, Fla.

A number of humorous events have been scheduled for the derby, which will probably prove to be the slap-happiest track meet of the year on Fetzer field. Lovely coeds will compete in such events as the egg-and-spoon relay, a pie-eating contest, a potato sack race, the beauty contest, and the domestic handicap and Sigma Chi claiming, two events about which little has been revealed except that they will be exciting and very, very funny. The sororities will also present five-minute skits, with prizes being awarded to the group giving the most humorous presentation.

Going from the ridiculous to the sublime, the evening will feature Roy Cole and his well-known orchestra playing for a formal dance that will be open to the campus.

The Future of Publications

Tonight the student legislature considers a budget. Acceptance or disapproval of this budget can make or break the future of publications on the Carolina campus.

The history of Carolina publications has been a bright one—one that compares favorably with any other institution in the nation. The awards won by the Daily Tar Heel and Carolina Magazine have been many and important.

But the future can maintain the pace of the past only if an increased budget is approved by the legislature. Increased costs and changing times have made it impossible for our publications to exist on the present budget and stay at the top of their fields.

The new budget presented by the Publications board calls for $76,000. The board, which handles money matters for all of the publications, has realized the need for an increase, and readily approved it. Past experience has shown that the Carolina Publications board does not spend money carelessly. The increase would not have been recommended had not the board thought it necessary. Mere presentation of the budget by this group is ample proof of the dire need for such an increase.

The increase, which would mean only one penny more per day in each student's publications fee, offers many advantages and improvements.

The Daily Tar Heel at present does not have sufficient funds to feature more pictures, additional pages, a Sunday feature section, and additional features. The increased budget makes all of these possible. Money to pay for more and better pictures, to maintain a staff photographer to cover all campus events, to pay for extra pages and supplements is provided for in the budget as submitted by the Publications board.

We urge the student legislature to consider these things tonight. Approval of the budget assures Carolina of a continued spot in the publications sun. There can be no ifs, ands, or buts. The increased budget is an absolute necessity. The future of our publications depends upon it.

Campus Service

The most recent Daily Tar Heel service to the campus is a daily broadcast of campus news over station WDUK Monday through Friday. Starting with one five-minute broadcast a day, this service has now been enlarged to two five-minute broadcasts daily.

One broadcast consists of a summary of the latest sports developments, while the second gives listeners the up-to-the-minute campus news as received in the DTH offices. Both broadcasts are features of the daily hour broadcast from the WDUK studios in Chapel Hill.

DTH columnists and reporters handle these broadcasts, which are done purely for the benefit of Carolina students. No compensation or remuneration of any sort is received. We hope that these broadcasts may be increased and improved still further in the future for the listening pleasure of all students interested in local campus happenings and as a further step in the development of Carolina publications.

Erasing the Obstacles....

Mandatory Budget Increases Will Spell Better Newspaper

By Barron Mills

The growth and welfare of many campus organizations during the coming year will depend upon the actions of the Student Legislature in their next few meetings. For the first time in the history of the University the task of preparing a budget breakdown for fee-supported organizations will be placed upon the assembly.

Probably the proposed budget for the publications on campus will draw the most attention, monopolize the discussions, and even be the butt for many a disparaging remark and glance. However, the facts must not be evaded.

The Daily Tar Heel is now the identical size that it was when it first turned daily in 1929. At that time it was sufficiently large to include articles, announcements, and advertisements for the 2,500 students that were then enrolled here. However, since 1929 the student body has almost tripled itself—and yet the size of the Daily Tar Heel has remained uniform.

No longer can the publication allot its space according to the news value and reader interest. Instead it has been forced to resort to turning its pages into an announcement sheet for campus organizations simply because there is insufficient room for evaluating news according to its news value and interest.

It is quite evident that this situation must be remedied. Coupled with it is a need for an efficient press for printing the paper. If the printers of the Daily Tar Heel obtain a press suitable for printing a small-town daily, then the paper will have to change its size either to an eight column (regular size) newspaper, containing four to eight pages, or a five column tabloid. Even a four-page eight column paper would give the DTH almost one and a half times as much space for campus coverage and extra pages could be printed when the amount of news and events merits it.

The publication has had to resort to using its engravings time and time again, borrowing engravings that were printed in the other state dailies several days previous, and even to billing an individual or organization for running his picture in the publication. These practices are not only bad journalism, but a juvenile fallacy. But what other alternative could the publication take since the photography and engraving budgets are too small to cover the costs. It must print pictures.

Forty dollars for the complete year is too small a photography budget for any publication. The actual cost of one flash shot runs close to 90 cents. This would give the Daily Tar Heel only about 50 pictures to print even if each shot were perfect—without allowing for retakes. The engraving budget is in the same predicament.

These are just a few of the mandatory increases in the budget of the DTH. The other publications can cite milar situations. My allotment of space does not permit me to relate more incidents. If all these things were taken into consideration by the Legislature these obstacles of progress would be erased and the publications will attain a position whereby it can render both service and enjoyment to the students.

Short Quirks

FLOWERS GO PLASTIC

Gainesville, Fla. (UP)—The University of Florida's experiment station has found a way to dehydrate botanical specimens and preserve them indefinitely in transparent plastic. The process is adaptable to manufacture of plastic book ends, lamp bases, candelabra and other gift shop items with real floral adornments.

NEW BATHTUB WRINKLE

New York (UP)—The newest wrinkle in supplying warm baths is heating the tub instead of the water, Business Week magazine reports. The invention consists of four coils of copper tubing wrapped around the the tub and connected to the house heating system. The tubing helps heat tub, water and bathroom.

CRIME COURSE EXTENDED

South Bend, Ind. (UP)—Notre Dame will open graduate courses next fall in the fields of probation, parole and prison administration. The courses will emphasize that the criminal is not entirely irresponsible and can learn to control his conduct despite the evil influences that led him to turn to crime.

INVITATION ACCEPTED

North Platte, Neb. (UP)—Thieves at North Platte believed in a sign, especially one above a doorway reading "Step Inn." They removed the front door lock, stepped in, and stepped out again with $50 in cash and several boxes of cigars.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

JOHN L. LEWIS'S INFLUENCE AMONG MINES WAS SLIPPING BEFORE CENTRALIA DISASTER; LEWIS FAILED TO ORGANIZE SAFETY COMMITTEES; WHY LEWIS YELLS "MURDER" AT KRUG

Washington.—Some interesting undercurrents have been taking place inside the ranks of the United Mine Workers regarding John L. Lewis. They indicate that, for the first time in years, grousing against the big miner boss had become serious—up until the time of the Centralia accident.

The worst blow John L. Lewis ever received in all his colorful career was the Supreme Court decision finding him in contempt of court and taking thousands of dollars in hard-earned dues from the union treasury. The miners never did like last November's strike anyway, though they went ahead on the assumption John knew where he was taking them. So when the Supreme Court showed he didn't know, Lewis's leadership was badly shaken.

There has always been a certain amount of griping about Lewis. The men in the anthracite fields don't like him at all, have even dared him to show himself in Pennsylvania, which he has not done for a long time. In the bituminous fields, however, the miners will cuss out Lewis between strikes but swear allegiance during strikes.

Most of them take pride in the fact that John has his big limousine, a fine house in Virginia and can hold his head up with the best of Washington society. They have not been happy, however, about the long list of Lewis relatives on the miners' payroll—John L. at $25,000; brother Denny at $12,000; daughter Kathryn at $10,000; brother-in-law R. O. Miller at $10,000; brother-in-law J. R. Bell at $10,000; brother-in-law Herbert Bell at $8,000; cousin William Thomas at $10,000; plus several others, making a grand total of $150,000 in salaries to the Lewis family—all taken from miners' dues.

To make up for all this, Lewis has to win strikes and keep on winning. That is the first rule of dictatorship, and, make no mistake about it, Lewis is a pure and simple dictator. The minute a dictator meets his first defeat, he is a dead duck—unless something diverts public attention.

That was why the Supreme Court defeat hit Lewis so badly. That was also why there has been talk for the first time in years about Lewis turning the mine union over to popular secretary-treasurer Tom Kennedy, former Lieutenant-Governor of Pennsylvania, with John replacing Bill Green as president of the AFL.

Finally, all this is why the Centralia mine disaster played squarely into Lewis's hands, why he clutched at it as an excuse for calling a safety strike, and why he has staged such dramatics in front of Congressional committees to prove that Secretary of the Interior Krug was to blame for the tragic loss of 111 lives.

VICTORY FOR MINERS

Only those who have sat on the inside of the mine negotiations realize it, but one reason why the owners have refused to take the mines back from the Government is section 2B of the Krug-Lewis agreement. They consider this one of the most revolutionary clauses ever inserted in any labor contract; for it gives the miners themselves power to close down a mine if they consider it unsafe. Employers say this is equivalent to permitting the workers of any factory to regulate conditions inside the plant. They point especially to the provision, "The operating manager is required to follow the recommendation of the committee." This they brand as "revolutionary."

But after winning this all-important and "revolutionary" concession from the Government, John L. Lewis did almost nothing about it. Few mine safety committees were organized. Many of the miners did not even know about this provision in their contract.

Probably this resulted from the peculiar system under which John L. Lewis operates, whereby he is a law unto himself. Less and less do other officials of the United Mine Workers know what is going on in their union. Matters of policy—even the details of carrying out that policy—are centered in the hands of one man, plus the little group of brothers and brothers-in-law who surround him. When another man challenges Lewis's authority, as in the case of Ray Edmundson, he is out. John Brophy, Van Bittner and other old-time miner executives have found that they could not exercise individual judgment and stay in the union. They are out.

Only the little group of Lewis relatives and district presidents carefully picked for subservience to John L. remain. That largely explains why the individual miners did not take advantage of—and did not even know about—the all-important provision in their contract permitting them to organize mine safety committees and close down mines if unsafe.

That also explains why the beetle-browed miner boss has gone to such extreme lengths to point an accusing finger at Secretary Krug and bellow: "Murder!" For the man who most loudly accuses others, sometimes is most guilty himself.

UNDER THE DOME

A strong Congressional drive has been launched for the appointment of GOP elder statesman Jim Wadsworth of New York as the new Secretary of National Defense if, and when, the Army-Navy merger bill becomes law. Wadsworth is 69 years old. He has indicated to friends that he is interested. . .Frank Sinatra is flying to New York to accept "a miniature Jefferson" at a Jefferson birthday dinner of the council against intolerance. ORDINARILY IT'S THE golf pros who draw the big galleries, but Carolina sports fans are missing a big treat if they don't see the undefeated Tar Heel linksmen in action. More specifically, they will be missing a real spectacle tomorrow if they miss the matches between Carolina and Michigan over Durham's Hope Valley Country club fairways.

For opposition tomorrow, Coach Chuck Erickson's lively linksters have drawn the championship golf combine from the midwest, the Big Nine's Wolverines from Michigan. Admittedly one of the strongest teams in the history of the school, the Michigan crew sports five veterans from last season's titular team and three returnees from previous Wolverine squads.

And at the same time, the Tar Heels are blessed with what appears to be the best sextet ever to walk the links under the colors of the Blue and White. Two members of the Carolina team have hit in the high sixties already, and the team leader, Dick Doeschler of Jacksonville, Fla., has had two 71's and a 70 over the par-70 Durham course. Junie Bailey, a jayvee basketballer last winter, hit a sizzling 68 in the opening match, and little Harvey Ward, a former Carolinas junior champion, turned in a 69 in the contest with Georgetown Tuesday afternoon.

JUST SPORTS: The Michigan baseball team that split a two-game series with the Tar Heels this week had five men on the field who were members of the outstanding Wolverine football club last fall. Dominic Tomasi, starting guard, was on second base, Fullbacks Jack Wisenberger (three for three yesterday) and Bob Weise played shortstop and right field respectively, and right halfbacks Paul White and Bumps Elliott performed in the outfield . . . Coach Bunn Hearn, veteran Carolina baseball mentor who suffered a heart attack last winter, was both happy and sad yesterday. His Tar Heels lost a tough one, but he was there in the dugout where his heart always resides . . . And his companion in the dugout yesterday was our old friend from Greensboro, Mace Brown, relief hurler for the Boston Red Sox for the past several years and currently a member of the Bosox scouting crew. Mace has been touring several of the Boston farm camps in the South and plans to be in Chapel Hill this week.

Chandler Bars 'The Lip' From Baseball for Year

Cincinnati, April 9—(UP)—Lippy Leo Durocher has spoken once too often. The colorful manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers has been suspended from baseball for the period of one year by High Commissioner Happy Chandler, it was announced here at noon today.

Chandler in making the announcement said that the suspension came as "the accumulation of unpleasant incidents in which Durocher has been involved and which the commissioner considers detrimental to baseball."

In Brooklyn the comments of Dodger officials were not available. Those of the fans were not printable.

Racquetmen Tangle With Cornell Today

By Roy Holsten

Taking all the gameness out of the South Carolina Gamecocks, when they smothered the Columbia lads 9-0, Coach John Kenfield's Tar Heel netters copped their seventh consecutive victory and first Southern conference win yesterday before a small crowd.

Taking advantage of the Gamecocks' weak offense, Coach Kenfield gave a well-earned rest to Jim Nicholson, Clark Taylor, Charlie Rice and Charlie Kenfield, dependable first stringers. Juggling his squad, the diminutive mentor gave the nod to several newcomers who proved their worth admirably.

At 3 o'clock this afternoon, the Tar Heel Terrors clash with the Big Red of Cornell in what promises to be one of the best encounters of the season. The Ithicans boast a power-laden squad, one of the finest in the east. Today's tilt will be the first of a two day schedule.

Powerful Vic Seixas played his usual well-rounded game and pounded out a 6-2, 6-3 win over tall Ben Turner, South Carolina ace. Turner, who possessed a very erratic style, turned in quite a performance when he aced Seixas on five different occasions; however, during the two sets he batted into the net no less than seven double faults; a series of errors not often seen in a match of this type. Weak in all other departments, Turner was easy prey for the bronzed Carolinian.

Stan Gruner played one of his best games of the season when he trounced the number two Gamecock, Garlon McLaurnin in straight 6-1 sets. Gruner forced his man all the way with his deep returns to the base line.

Alexander Impressive

The most impressive performance of the afternoon was turned in by flashy Heath Alexander, freshman star, who topped his opponent Wilton McKinney 6-1, 6-1. Alexander then teamed with Duke Wilder to beat the number one Gamecock doubles team 6-1, 6-3. Both Alexander and Wilder played steady ball and exhibited brilliant teamwork at the net.

Dick Swigart, moved up to number four spot, sported a powerful serve and a steady backhand to bat out a lopsided 6-1, 6-1 win over Harris Todd while teammate Bert Ingram, playing for the first time this season, swamped A. J. Smith in two 6-2 sets. Both Tar Heels displayed a strong offensive style.

In the other matches, Duke Wilder beat Don Barton 6-0, 6-0; and Carolina duos of Johnson and Ingram and Minnaugh and Swigart topped McLaurnin and Todd and Barton and Smith 6-2, 6-2 and 6-2, 6-0 respectively.

In today's encounter, the Kenfield crew runs into some tough opposition in the Big Red from Cornell. The squad from Ithaca has an abundance of powerful reserves and is expected to give the Carolinians the stiffest opposition to date.

Ranson Pessimistic About Tech Contest

Track Mentor Expects Tough Opposition In Weekend Meet Against Yellow Jackets

"In order to live up to the potentialities that we have on the team, the boys will have to perform better in competition than they have in practice or meets so far," Coach Dale Ranson declared yesterday afternoon while his boys were going through sessions in preparation for the Georgia Tech meet at Atlanta this weekend.

"All boys should be able to turn in better marks in competition than they do in drills, but so far this year this has not been true," he explained, adding, "I hope the times improve before the weekend."

Georgia Tech is a strong outfit and the coaches, after looking at the results of the Yellow Jacket win over Florida last Saturday, think that the meet may be decided in the last event, the one-mile relay.

Three Firsts

Buddy Fowlkes of Tech copped three first places and a second in the meet with the Gators. He took first in the 100-yard dash in 9.9 seconds, first in the 220-yard dash in 22.2 seconds, another in the 220-yard low hurdles in 25.1 seconds and finished a close second in the broad jump.

Mike Nolan of the Engineers captured first in the javelin throw with a toss of 198 feet. He also was third in the shot put and discus.

Freshman Bobby Coons took first in the high hurdles and was second in the low hurdles and 220-yard affairs.

Fred Cady showed that he is ready to go in the 440 by turning in a winning mark of 51.1 seconds.

With this much talent stacked against the Tar Heels, Coach Ranson is hoping for an all-out effort by every member of the squad in order to start the dual meet season off on the right foot.

Locals Encounter Cornell Nine Today

By Bob Goldwater

Carolina and Michigan took turns in giving away a ball game in Emerson stadium yesterday afternoon, and when the dust finally cleared after a hectic ninth inning the Wolverines were walking away with a 6-5 triumph that gave them an even break in the two-game series.

The Tar Heels engage in their third tussle of the week here this afternoon at 4 o'clock when they face Cornell's touring diamond outfit. Monk Whiteheart will be on the mound for the locals, seeking his third straight triumph of the campaign.

Going into the wild-and-wooly ninth frame, Carolina was riding on the wings of a 5-3 lead as a result of a three-run eighth stanza. Frank Robinson, who had already hurled one successful inning of relief after taking over for Tommy Andrew in the eighth, got off to a good start by letting pinch-hitter Morrison loft to center for the first out. But then the sky began to fall in!

Second Homer

Leadoff-batter Paul White leaned against one of Robinson's offerings and clouted Michigan's second homer of the contest, a long smash to left-center field. Bumps Elliott followed with a single into left and that was all for Robinson. Les Couch coming in to relieve. He lasted for two batters, allowing a single to Bob Weise that scored the tying run and a walk to Hank Weisenberger that loaded the bases.

That brought Monk Whiteheart on the scene and the mound-staff mainstay, with hardly any warmup session, walked Dom Tomasi to push Weise across with the winning tally. Whiteheart set back the next two batters but the damage was done and the Wolverines led, 6-5.

In the Tar Heel attempt to even the score, Dub Johnson was safe on an infield error. Buster Stevenson went in to run for the Carolina third-baseman, who strained a leg muscle in the top half of the inning, and Stevenson made his way around to third base on a successful theft of second and a sacrifice by Whitey Black.

With one out and the tying run at third, pinch-hitter Bo Hackney laid down a bunt in an attempt to squeeze Stevenson home, but the substitute runner was cut down at the plate.

The Tar Heels scored their runs in bunches of two and three. They picked up a pair of tallies in the second on walks by Black and Gregory, a single by Rip Ryan, and a long fly by Andrew.

After Michigan forged ahead on two markers in the sixth and a single tally in the seventh, Carolina regained the lead with three runs, all unearned, in the eighth. They payoff blow came when Gregory circled the bases when his attempted sacrifice was thrown into left field in an effort to nab Red Fahey going into third.

DIAMOND DUST: Fielding gem of the contest came in the top of the fourth when Black pegged a perfect pitch home to double Weisenberger.

NEWS BRIEFS

Casualty Rate Climbs Higher In Panhandle

More Tornado Victims Found in Five Cities

Woodward, Okla., April 9—(UP)—Five towns in Texas and Oklahoma are mourning their dead. Their streets are piled with the wreckage and debris left in the wake of last night's tornado. The death toll now stands at 7[illegible]. More than 600 were injured, some critically.

There are predictions that the death toll will be as high as 160 when the last pile of rubble has been cleared away.

Towns Wrecked

Woodward, Oklahoma, was hit hardest but only because it was the biggest of the five towns in the path of the twister. In that town of 7,000, 50 are dead, 500 injured, 3500 are homeless and more than 350 homes and business buildings are reduced to splinters.

The other towns most affected are all in Texas—White Deer, Canadian, Glazier and Higgins.

End of Phone Strike Is Still Under Debate

Washington, April 9—(UP)— The end of the phone strike seems farther away than ever tonight. Strike leaders have rejected a management proposal to arbitrate the dispute with long distance operators—key unit in the walkout. Union President Joseph Beirne says the policy committee has approved a counter offer which will be made public at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning. Informed sources say the strikers will demand an entirely new approach to the negotiations with all future bargaining sessions open to newsmen.

Gigantic Fire Wrecks Treasure Island Base

San Francisco, April 9—(UP)—A spectacular five-alarm fire has broken out in the heart of the Treasure Island navy base in San Francisco Bay. Flames and huge clouds of black smoke were sent rolling hundreds of feet into the air. The Twelfth Naval District headquarters in San Francisco says the fire broke out in a galley on the island that was the site of the 1939 Golden Gate Exposition. Fire equipment has been called from both San Francisco and Oakland to fight the roaring flames.

Senate Votes to Pass Amended Mid East Aid

Washington, April 9—(UP)—The Senate has unanimously adopted an amendment to President Truman's plan for aid to Turkey and Greece. The amendment, passed unanimously by voice, would give the United Nations limited veto power over the program to check Communism in the Middle East. Its unchallenged passage is interpreted as pointing to overwhelming approval of the entire aid program when it reaches a final [illegible].

Shutdown Might Cost Miners Rebated Fine

Washington, April 9—(UP)—Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough indicates that the safety shutdown may cost John L. Lewis and his union the near-$3,000,000 fine rebated by the Supreme Court. The high court cut the union fine by $2,800,000 provided it kept the men at work. Goldsborough today indicates he considered the present stoppage a strike and granted a government request for two weeks time to study the question before deciding on the fines.

UP, CP Name Moffitt for Yack Editor

Candidate Has Staff Backing

By Chuck Hauser

According to a statement released yesterday afternoon by Alex Davis and Johnny Jones, chairmen of the University and Campus parties, respectively, Bill Moffitt, rising senior, has received a co-nomination by the two parties for the editorship of next year's Yackety-Yack.

Aside from the co-nomination, Moffitt, has the staff endorsement of the 1947 Yack. Gene Johnstone, editor of this and last year's annual, released the following statement on Moffitt's qualifications:

Ability and Experience

"Selection of the editor of the Yackety-Yack should be on the basis of proven ability and experience. This candidate has those qualities that will be necessary to edit next year's publication, which will be larger than ever before."

Bill Moffitt came to Carolina in September, 1945, after his discharge from the Army Air corps in July. Although residing in Aqueboque, Long Island, for the past few years, he is a native of Greensboro. At present he holds the assistant editorship of the Yack and is a member of the Student Legislature.

Moffitt made the following statement for the Daily Tar Heel:

"I am very glad to have the nomination of both the UP and the CP, but I have not made and will not make any political concessions as to staff positions.

"I expect to work for broad contact with all students, to present a complete, representative yearbook of which every student can be proud, and which is not limited by politics or staff members chosen along party lines.

"We'll have a long way to go to improve on this year's Yack, but with the cooperation of the student body and a hard-working staff, I think we can do it."

UVA Will Select Officers Tuesday

The University Veterans association has completed plans to hold an election to fill all offices next Tuesday evening at 7:30 in the UVA clubhouse.

Nominations will be made from the floor, and newly elected officers will assume the club reins immediately. They will serve until next November.

President Roy Moose urges all UVA members to attend this important polling. "It is to the advantage of the veterans to come and install the men they desire to represent them. This is especially true at this time, when strong leaders capable of handling important affairs should be elected."

Present officers besides Moose include: Hugh Wells—vice-president; Patricia Connelly—secretary; and John Temple—treasurer.

Pianist Loses Score; UNC Comes to Rescue

The University helped the State Symphony orchestra and its guest pianist, Miss Carroll Butler, out of a tight situation yesterday afternoon.

Miss Carroll, scheduled to play Haydn's D Major Concerto at a children's concert in Leaksville, was depending on the Symphony to furnish her a copy of the music. However, on Wednesday the Symphony had not received the score they had on order from a publishing company.

Desperate, Ben Swalin, Symphony director, made a last minute appeal to the University Music department's pianist, Dr. William S. Newman, who is the only person in these parts to own one of the rare copies of the concerto. It was a foreign copy, and Dr. Newman's only one, but he gladly sent the irreplaceable manuscript to the Symphony, enabling Miss Butler to appear before her youthful audience.

Senior Week Plans Are Almost Ready, Announces Tietjen

Plans for the annual senior week celebration are almost complete, according to an announcement made yesterday by Charlie Tietjen, program chairman.

The program, which will be held from May 7-9, will feature a barefoot day, saddle shoe stomp in the Y court, a senior class banquet, and a semi-formal junior-senior dance.

One of the features of the week will be the saddle shoe stomp, an informal affair for all seniors and their dates. Music will be provided by a loudspeaker system and the Y soda fountain will be kept open throughout the evening to supply refreshments.

The last chance of the quarter for all seniors to get together will be furnished by the banquet to be held in the Carolina inn Thursday evening, May 8. Some of the seniors' favorite professors will be on hand as guests.

The social event of the week and the highlight of the seniors' program will be the yearly junior-senior dance. The Duke ambassadors, considered one of the top bands in this area, will furnish the music for the semi-formal affair in Woollen gymnasium. The dance will be open to the campus, with Bill Halsey of the senior class and Ed Early of the junior class in charge of the ticket sale. Tickets will go on sale in the near future.

Tietjen expressed the hope that all of the seniors will get behind the program, which is slated to be their last big fling together before graduating.

Dr. Wilson to Leave Press; Takes Position at Harvard

Native of Chapel Hill Has Been Director Since January, 1946; Successor Not Named

Dr. Thomas J. Wilson, III, director of the University Press since January, 1946, has resigned to accept the directorship of the Harvard University Press, a joint announcement from President Graham and Chancellor House disclosed today. The resignation becomes effective July 1.

Dean Wettach, chairman of the board of governors of the Press, said, "It will be difficult if not impossible to replace Dr. Wilson. He was peculiarly fitted for the job, and under his supervision the Press has seen its most successful year of operation." There is no immediate prospect of appointing a successor, according to Wettach.

"The Harvard Press is getting a good man," said local Author Noel Houston. "Tommy Wilson leaves the University Press at its high level, I sincerely believe."

A native of Chapel Hill, Dr. Wilson was a French professor at the University before entering the publishing business. He was vice-president and chairman of the executive committee of Henry Holt and Co., and vice-president and director of Reynal and Hitchcock before returning to the University. He was a member of the U. S. Naval reserve and was released from active duty with the rank of commander.

Eighteen months ago, William T. Couch resigned as director of the Press to become head of the University of Chicago Press. This led Dean Wettach to observe, "At least we at Carolina have the pleasure of knowing now that we have supplied the directors for the two most important university presses in the nation."

Five Men Attend IRC Conference

John Bristow, president of the International Relations club, will lead a five man Carolina delegation to the Southeastern IRC convention opening today at Randolph-Macon college in Ashland, Va.

Bristow will act as vice-president of the conference and will lead the forum on the Far East. This will be the first such convention since 1944.

Kenneth Cruse, will address the delegates on "The Quest for Oil in Iran." Stuart Lucas, James Burwell and Peter Gerns will also represent the University.

Bristow will report on the convention at Monday evening's regular IRC open meeting at 7:30 in the Graham Memorial Roland Parker lounge.

DTH Staff Issues Cry To Solve Mystery Man In Yesterday's Paper

Dr. W. Raymond Taylor, head of the Woman's college dramatic art department in Greensboro, didn't recognize himself when he saw his picture on the front page of yesterday's edition of the Daily Tar Heel. In fact he said that he didn't even know the character that was tagged with his name underneath.

The mistake was not a fault of the DTH, as is usually the case of mistakes appearing in the issues. The mat, which was supposed to be that of Dr. Taylor, was obtained from the Greensboro Daily News by the University News bureau. In good faith the News bureau sent the mat out to all parts of the state for release with Dr. Taylor's appearance on campus, in charge of the Carolina Dramatics association.

It's still a mystery who the man that was tagged as Dr. Taylor is. If anyone knows his identity the Daily Tar Heel and the News bureau would appreciate it if they would notify us and solve the puzzle.

Group Allocates Funds for Three Other Activities

By Bookie Jabine

In an unexpected move Speaker Charlie Warren postponed consideration of the publications item of the $109,500 campus budget, and the Student Legislature last night moved with rapidity through some other less expensive sections.

Until the assembly got entwined with the request of the Carolina Political union for $250, money was appropriated to the executive, legislative, and judicial branches of the student government and to the Men's Interdormitory council.

Of the above items, only the appropriations to the Coed senate and the Men's council met with opposition and finally were tabled. But the Carolina Political union budget brought sharp debate which eventually resulted in the scuttling of consideration of the remainder of the budget recommended by Bill Mackie's Finance committee.

The reason for the omission of the publications funds was the need for more time and the item will be debated next week.

The mixup over the CPU budget began with an amendment proposed by Basil Sherrill which would earmark student fees to be put in a speaker's fund.

The CPU section finally was passed, however, when $40 was knocked off, reducing the CPU appropriation to $210.

Election Codified

Following the ending of the budget discussion, a bill introduced by Johnny Clampitt which recodifies the elections bill was being considered late last night.

At press time only two articles of the measure had been passed by the assembly.

They provide that the elections shall be held on the first Tuesday in May with the exception of the Freshman elections. The other article was the limiting of campaign expenditures. This section drew considerable debate. An amendment was proposed that limits be hoisted $5 over what the bill provides, which was $15 for the three major offices, ranging down to $5 for lesser posts. The amendment lost, and the bill passed. Under the measure, candidates for President, Vice-president, and Editor of the Daily Tar Heel may spend $15. Editors of the Mag and Yackety Yack are allowed $10, while others can spend the minimum, $5.

Other business originally slated for last night were two new amendments to the constitution regarding the Coed senate, the Audit board, and a precinct bill to redistrict the town electorate.

Conditions Limit Law School Quota

At present, there are on file in the Dean Wettach's office at the law school over 225 applications for admission to the law school for the fall semester of 1947. Because of crowded conditions, the number of new students to be admitted will be limited to around one hundred.

Applications are now being carefully checked and evaluated and will be passed on as quickly as possible. Applicants are requested to refrain from making inquiries at the Dean's office, as that causes further delay and no answer can be given at the present time. Each will receive individual notice concerning the acceptance or rejection of his application.

In case there are any students now in the University who have been planning to enter the law school in September and who have not formally applied, Dean Wettach urges that they file applications by April 15.

No new applicants will be considered who have less than three years of approved college work, with a C average or better. Preference will be given to applicants with superior records.

A Rosy Tint

The troubled world has a complexion tinged with the blush of a rose this morning with the Associated Press announcement that David E. Lilienthal, balding former head of the Tennessee Valley authority, has been confirmed by the Senate as chairman of the Atomic Energy commission.

With a vote of 51 to 30 the Upper House dignitaries swept aside faint-hearted efforts to place the subject of Atomic Energy in the hands of the myopic military and entrusted it to a visionary believer in the rights of man.

Other commissioners approved by the Senate are Dr. Robert F. Bacher, 41, Cornell university physicist; W. W. Waymack, 58, winner of the Pulitzer prize as editor of the Des Moines Register and Tribune; Sumner T. Pike, 55, Lubec, Me., former member of the Federal Securities commission; and L. L. Strauss, 50, retiretired New York rear admiral.

The duties of the commission include the following:

1. Own in the name of the United States all this country's atomic production plants and fissionable materials.

2. Control virtually all U. S. research and development in atomic energy—medical, industrial, and scientific, including atomic weapons.

3. Have the power to force any American to stand trial for his life if he discloses atomic energy information this commission thinks should be kept secret.

This constitutes a big order for a commission.. Fortunately, the commission is composed of capable men.

Mr. Lilienthal's confirmation is a major step forward.

Of Leo and Happy

All high, omnipotent Commissioner A. B. (Happy) Chandler Wednesday shook the very foundations of the Federal Bill of Rights contained in the Constitution when he punched Leo (He Lost His Lip) Durocher with a suspension for the 1947 season.

This suspension resulted because Durocher and "club officials" of the New York Yankees and Brooklyn Dodgers "engaged in a public controversy damaging to baseball."

In the words of Gayle Talbot, Associated Press sports writer, Chandler has slapped an "embargo on sound."

Even the late and highly esteemed Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis never took it upon himself to overrule the individual rights of man laid down in the nation's highest organ, the Constitution. Certainly, he had more provocation for such a move when Jerome Hanner (Dizzy) Dean, the talkative mound genius of a decade ago with the St. Louis Cardinals, called National League President Ford Frick a crook.

Durocher and Dodger President Branch Rickey have expressed themselves as "stunned" over Chandler's decision. An apt adjective which when combined with "confused" describes the probable reaction over the baseball universe.

For without a doubt one must wonder how Larry MacPhail, red-headed Yankee prexy, escaped with a reprimand while Leo caught the proverbial book.

Could it be that the iron-fisted Chandler used kid gloves simply because MacPhail is a more important official.

And what about American equality?

Conduct detrimental to baseball. You said it, Mr. Chandler. When are you going to resign?

Elections Platforms

With the spring elections approaching rapidly, the time has come to pause and wonder when two of the University parties—the Campus and the University—are going to step forward with their platforms.

As yet only the Student party has declared its platform. The quality of its timber has been closely analyzed by the Daily Tar Heel, it is hoped by the student body also.

Such a study is planned of both the Campus and University party platforms to determine their worth.

The Campus party has revealed a platform, but it is undergoing revision; the University platform has remained silent.

If interest in elections is to be pricked, platforms are necessary. The Daily Tar Heel and the student body are waiting. Let us hope that it will not be a long session.

Men's Honor Council Report Lists Action on Some Cases

The following report represents cases held recently before the Men's Honor Council that have not yet been presented through the Daily Tar Heel. The size of each report is small here, although it may represent days of tedious fact-finding and hearings. In fairness to those involved, no names are printed, but the Council feels that all students have the right to know what cases appear before it and the resulting action. Only through acquainting yourself with these violations of our Honor and Campus Codes and showing your interest in them and all others that might occur are you living up to the school's expectations.

The few cases shown here are by no means all that have been heard since our last report, but they are indicative of the variety which come before the Council. You are invited to call on the Council at any one of its Tuesday evening meetings to discuss all aspects of Student government and especially the interpretation of the Honor and Campus codes—the very heart of Student government.

* * *

A student in a language class was reported by another student for reference to pages in a notebook during an exam. Upon questioning, his professor stated that he would have noticed an irregularity had the case not been reported because of the superior brand of work and the seemingly literal book translations. The student admitted having referred to his notes, claiming that he was merely checking on what he was doing. He said that he thought it would be all right since they were allowed to use the vocabulary in the back of the textbook. It turned out that the notes included a literal translation of one of the paragraphs on the test that the student had "spotted" his instructor on. He claimed he knew the work but was checking up, not realizing it was an honor offense.

ACTION: The student was failed on the course and put on indefinite probation.

Two students were reported by their instructor for possibly having violated the honor code. The basis for the case was similarity of papers. The students sat diagonally from each other on consecutive rows. The rear student admitted that it was possible to see the other's paper but claimed that he didn't. These two students were the only ones in a class of 130 to put down identical wrong answers on one part of the test and to change the same two true-false answers after having put them down once. Both claimed innocence of either giving or receiving aid on this exam.

ACTION: The case was dismissed due to lack of sufficient evidence and proof of guilt. Although evidence did point toward a possible violation, the Council felt that any conviction in this case would result in a miscarriage of justice, for there was an equal chance of no cheating having taken place. The Council feels that it is always better to allow any number of guilty persons to go free than to convict one innocent man.

A student employed by the University was reported for being drunk and throwing a party in one of the University buildings. He admitted being a little tight and that beer was spilled on the floor. He realized that he was on University property and shouldn't have been. By the time he arrived to clean up the place the next day, it had already been taken care of by the Building department.

ACTION: The student was given a severe reprimand and had to pay all costs for cleaning up, etc.

* * *

A student who had been suspended several years ago requested readmittance. After reviewing his case and his actions since being expelled, the Council felt that this student had served sufficient punishment and was ready to prove himself capable of living up to our standards.

ACTION: He was allowed to reenter whenever he so desires. (A student once suspended automatically reenters under indefinite probation).

Several weeks ago a student entered a plant in a nearby town while quite intoxicated. After finally being escorted out and being told to "forget about it" by an employee, the student was given a ride back to Chapel Hill by a police car. The student had not forcibly entered the plant nor was any arrest made by the police—they merely offered him a ride. Yet, the nxt morning this student felt obligated enough to report himself as having possibly violated the Campus code.

ACTION: The student was given a severe reprimand for his actions of the previous night, but he was also commended for being aware of his responsibilities and cooperating so fully with Student government.

A student doing some research work in the stacks in the library walked out with a book without checking it out. Later on, downstairs, he was found with the book and asked to explain his possession of it. He said that he was late for class the day he walked out with the book and since the desk was busy he just went on. He had no stack permit but received permission to enter from someone on duty. He claimed he was going to return the book.

ACTION: The student was put on indefinite probation. The Council feels that this was a lenient sentence, especially in view of the great amount of publicity concerning the handling of books in the library. However, to "make an example" of the first offender apprehended in such a case with no previous warning having been given would seem unjust. In the future, any student misusing the books in the library may expect a much more extreme penalty.

* * *

More cases will appear in the Daily Tar Heel in a few days. Watch for them.

Favors Increase

To the Editor:

There is at present a bill in congressional committee that, if passed, will increase the subsistence of former G.I.'s attending college.

If this bill is not passed, I believe that veterans will leave school in increasing numbers or be forced to lower their present standard of living.

Just for those who do not realize the situation I would like to present a factual illustration of the need for additional subsistence for married veterans.

A married veteran gets $90 a month. Suppose he is lucky and has found a place to live requiring an expenditure of $40 per month for rent. Then suppose that he and his wife each eat two hot dogs every meal three times a day each month. At ten cents per hot dog this amounts to 40 cents per meal or $1.20 per day—a total of $36 per month. The veteran has now spent $76. If we allow him and his wife to wash the dogs down with one pepsi-cola each a meal, this is an additional expense of $9 a month, leaving a net of $5 for laundry, tooth paste, doctor bills, insurance, entertainment, clothes, haircuts, etc.—and remember, this veteran doesn't have any children!

The problem was briefly discussed by Mr. Earl Heffner some days ago in the Daily Tar Heel, and those who want to see veterans' subsistence raised should refer to the April 8 issue for a list of the right congressmen to contact.

JACK LASLEY.

IRC Forum....

Writer Analyzes Feature Of Truman Foreign Policy

By Harold F. Elkin
International Relations club member

With the lapse of three weeks since the President's pronouncement of the "Truman Doctrine," some of the emotionally confused reactions to the speech have been cleared away. We now can examine the "Doctrine" rationally as applied to Greece, Turkey or perhaps other "weak nations."

First of all, what is the reaction to the European nations, whose futures are intimately involved in the consequences of the policy?

The British greeted Truman's speech with mingled feelings. While rejoicing at our willingness to carry on in Greece where English means were exhausted, they were disturbed at the strenuousness of the President's words.

The British are wary lest the seeds of a new world conflict be sown. Another war would wipe out the British Isles. Furthermore, the English suffer from the commonest of human frailties—jealousy. They are concerned over their obvious weakness, in contrast to our strength, in dealing with the current Balkan crisis.

The only unanimity of thought to be found in a survey of European opinion is the sincere questioning of our bypassing the United Nations in formulating the new policy.

Russian officialdom has been strangely silent since our projected aid to Greece and Turkey was announced. It is not difficult, however, to picture the animosity behind the Kremlin walls.

It is too early to predict accurately what counter-measures the Russians can or will employ in contesting western aid to "border" countries.

Out of this maze of obscurity and miasma of doubt, some far-reaching questions stand forth:

1. Is our proposed aid to Greece and Turkey merely a step of the moment, a matter of solitary necessity?

2. Is the proposed aid rather a symptom of the active development of American foreign policy? In other words, is the "Truman Doctrine" really a doctrine?

Congressional reaction would seem to answer the second question in the affirmative—our foreign policy has incorporated a new doctrine.

The financial and material aid to these two countries marks only the initial step of a plan designed to build and strengthen the tottering nations of Europe and Asia into a major bulwark against the rising power of Eastern Europe.

Finally, the question of our acting outside the framework of the United Nations still remains unanswered. Does expediency condone our swiftness? Is our action a breach of faith with the U.N.?

These are the questions that face us today. Meeting them squarely will bring understanding. Understanding alone will create the weapons for decisive action in this crisis.

* * *

The following first-hand appraisal of the situation in Greece was written for the IRC by Apostles Koskinides of Thessaloniki, Greece. He is a public health expert, recently arrived from his home country, for advanced study at the University.

In 490 B.C., at Marathon, a handful of men from the democracy of Athens met the Persian "barbarians" of King Xerkis. They gave the world one of the brightest victories for democracy.

When Mussolini's Italy brandished her eight million bayonets and attempted to invade the country, a small Greek army with the support of the people pushed the Italians back into Albania. Every nation, including Russia was lavish with its praises, in those days.

BUT WHY ARE GREEKS FIGHTING TODAY? The answer is simple. They are fighting for the same cause for which they fought at Marathon.

The Communists form the smallest party in Greece, not exceeding 6-10 per cent of the population. With the aid of Greece's totalitarian neighbors, Albania, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia, this minority is trying to establish a Communistic dictatorship.

These northern neighbors and the anarchist leaders inside Greece are receiving aid from Russia.

Thus, Greece finds itself once again in the front line of another battle for Freedom.

The decision of the American government is hailed today by the Greek people because it will provide them with th right weapons to fight for a just cause—Freedom.

Tar Heels Score Twin Victories Over Cornell

Netters Annex Shutout Win

Big Red Combine Here Again Today

By Roy Holsten

The Big Red of Cornell turned to a light pink yesterday afternoon when the power-laden Tar Heel racquet squad shutout the vaunted visitors 9-0 in the first meet of their two-day engagement.

Featuring some of the best tennis of the year, the spectators were treated to no less than four close matches, none of which was decided until the last game.

This afternoon the Carolinians grapple with the Ithica crew in a return engagement that should draw a large crowd. The Cornell netmen, who were impressive despite the onesided score, will be out to avenge their first day defeat.

The No. 1 singles match featured the brilliant work of Dick Savitt, who was pitted against competent Vic Seixas. It continued for an hour and twenty-two minutes of grueling play and spotted some brilliant work by each opponent before Seixas won 9-7, 3-6, 9-7.

In the first set, play was very close and Seixas was forced to use his impressive pass shot several times when he caught Savitt at the net. This was a big factor in his win. The games were tied at 5-5, 6-6, and 7-7 before Seixas took the last two games.

Clark Taylor pounded out a 6-1, 6-4 win over his opponent Len Steiner but in doing so fell and injured ? ? ? but in doing so fell and injured his ankle. Taylor, who was racing for a deep shot, fell on a loose ball and twisted his right ankle late in the second set. He recovered and went on to beat the National junior indoor champion with excellent backhand drives.

In the number three match Jim Nicholson overpowered John Riihiluma after a tough foray 6-2, 3-6, 6-3. Riihiluma who captained the Hill prep school squad last year, wilted early in the third set and Nicholson overcame the freshman to take the all-important match.

The results:

Singles: Seixas (NC) defeated Savitt, 9-7, 6-3; Taylor (NC) defeated Steiner, 6-1, 6-2; Nicholson (NC) defeated Riihiluma, 6-2, 3-6, 6-3; Rice (NC) defeated Young, 7-5, 4-6, 9-7; Gruner (NC) defeated Goldstein, 6-1, 6-4; Morris defeated Penn, 3-6, 9-7, 6-1.

Doubles: Seixas-Taylor defeated Savitt-Steiner, 6-3, 7-5; Nicholson-Skakle defeated Riihiluma-Young, 6-4, 7-5; Kenfield-Morris defeated Smith-Penn, 6-1, 6-2.

Golfers Face Michigan Today

Local Links Crew Risks Undefeated Record Against Powerful Mid-Western Titleholders

By Billy Carmichael

Carolina's sharp shooting golfers will find their unbeaten record of three straight wins in grave danger when they tee off against the powerful Wolverines of Michigan this afternoon at Hope Valley Country club.

The first foursome will go out at 1:30 o'clock.

The visitors come South with one of the strongest aggregations ever seen in this area. The Wolverines are at present Big Nine champions and like the Tar Heels, unbeaten in season's play.

They are paced by the National intercollegiate champion in the presence of Dave Barclay who captured the honor last May. Assisting Barclay will be a quintet of the Midwest's top golfers, who hold all kinds of titles from the California junior crown on down.

The local golfers, though, seem in top form for the engagement. Coach Chuck Erickson's charges spent yesterday afternoon on the club practice tee sharping up their game for the all-important encounter.

Dick Doeschler will probably get the nod to hold down the No. 1 position for the Tar Heels as he did so admirably in the Georgetown meet on Tuesday. Playing with him at No. 2 will be Joltin' Junie Bailey, the local long ball hitter, who also turned in a top flight round in the last outing.

Little Harvey Ward will be in the No. 3 berth, touring the course with Ray Taylor who will start at the No. 4 slot. At No. 5 will be Big Bob Cox, of football fame, whose game seems to be improving daily.

The No. 6 spot is still in doubt. Mike Nolan who didn't play Tuesday because of an academic holdup, has now fallen victim to a hand injury and will be a doubtful starter. If he is unable to compete his position will be taken by Durham's Ed Ashby who played his first match this week.

Coach Erickson expressed the feeling that the match may go either way, and stated that it will probably be the outstanding exhibition of collegiate, if not amateur golf to be seen in the state this season.

The Hope Valley course is constantly improving under the warm sun that has prevailed during the past week and will be in good shape for the match.

Old man weather has predicted a fair day and a large gallery is expected to follow the linksmen around the scenic 6,700 yard layout.

The course par of 70 seems sure to be broken once, twice and possibly more times as the nation's top collegiate golfers clash in this much-talked-of meet.

Beason, Hayworth Lead Way In 16-3 Runaway Encounter

By Bob Goldwater

Unleashing their greatest offensive punch of the season, the Tar Heel baseballers registered eight quick runs in the first inning and went on from there to coast to an easy 16-3 victory over Cornell in Emerson stadium yesterday afternoon.

The locals had a field day against four Big Red hurlers, knocking out 12 hits of assorted sizes. Leading the way were Harry Beason and Jim Hayworth, each with a triple, double and single in four trips.

Carolina plays its first game away from home this afternoon when the Tar Heels journey to Burlington to engage that city's professional club in the Carolina class C league. Rookie pitchers John Sharpe and Dean Caswell will handle the mound duties for the locals.

Yesterday's tussle was settled before two men were out in the initial stanza. After an infield out by Whitey Black, who later in the contest garnered two hits, Buster Stevenson singled over short and Beason strolled. An error on Frank Jones' infield grounder and three straight walks resulted in three runs and Hayworth then exploded his three-bagger into right-center field to drive another trio across.

Monk Whiteheart, who twirled the first seven frames to chalk up his third success of the campaign, made three bases on another infield miscue that scored Hayworth with the seventh marker. The Tar Heel moundsman tallied a moment later on Black's single into center and Carolina led, 8-0.

The Blue and White scoring was held in check for the next four innings but again broke loose in the sixth, when the Tar Heels registered two runs on one hit. Carolina racked up another three tallies in the seventh, with Hayworth's double and Beason's triple producing the damage.

The Tar Heel attack was worth three more runs in the eighth when, with the sacks loaded, Beason cleared the basepaths with a triple along the left-field line.

DiLorenzo Finishes

In the meantime, Cornell was pushing across its tallies one at a time. The Big Red batters collected one in the fourth on three successive singles and finished off with runs in the seventh and eighth. Vinnie DiLorenzo hurled the last two frames for Carolina.

DIAMOND DUST: John Gregory came up with the defensive gems in the contest with several brilliant plays around first. The other infielders kept lanky John busy all afternoon, with the Tar Heel co-captain recording 17 putouts. . . .The Tar Heels play their fifth game of the week tomorrow against the Rex Mills semi-pro outfit of Gastonia.

Local Cindermen Leave For Tech This Morning

By Morty Schaap

The varsity track squad, 31 strong will take to the road at 8 o'clock this morning and headed for Atlanta to engage the strong Georgia Tech team in a dual meet Saturday afternoon.

The itinerary for the trip calls for a stop late this afternoon at the University of Georgia at Athens for a light workout. After the drills the squad will move on to Atlanta.

All hands were in good shape and the meet at Grant field should prove to be one of the toughest that the Tar Heel cindermen will face all season.

Coaches R. A. Fetzer and Dale Ranson, late yesterday afternoon had not decided the events that some of the men will compete in, and there is a strong possibility that some of the distance men will double in the mile and two mile.

Simmons in Three

Chunk Simmons will probably be in the 120-yard high hurdles, 220-low hurdles and the javelin throw. Bob Seligman, returning to his V-12 almamater will be out to show the lads of Norris Dean how to put the shot and toss the discus.

Coaches R. A. Fetzer, Dale Ranson and Joe Hilton are also making the trip.

Snavely To Conduct Scrimmage Saturday

The Tar Heel candidates for the 1947 football team will hold a full-length scrimmage in Kenan stadium Saturday morning at 10 o'clock, Coach Carl Snavely said yesterday as he shifted his drills into high gear.

Yesterday afternoon's practice session was spent in work on defensive signals and formations and position assignments on offensive. The offensive work was particularly for the centers.

Carolina's center position appeared to be shaping up a considerable bit better yesterday according to Snavely, who said that his big four in the pivot spot would be Al Bernot, Dan Stiegmen, Bobby Weant and Dick McDonald. He added, however, that reserves Billy Baise and Joe Neikirk are showing improvement and might be in the running by the end of the drills.

Snavely indicated that he planned to keep using Jack Fitch at tailback, but that he would like him to serve in a dual position capacity.

Tennis Reservations

Due to the large number of tennis enthusiasts and the limited number of courts reservations will have to be made for space between 10 o'clock and 6 o'clock starting Monday April 14, it was announced yesterday by the physical education department.

Courts may be reserved for one hour only by checking at the basket room of the gym or by calling 9426. Players must pick up their reservation cards at the basket room before going to the courts.

Basketball Clinic To Be Conducted For UNC Students

Coach Tom Scott, White Phantom basketball mentor who just last week returned from a visit in Missouri and Kansas, announced last night that he was beginning a cage clinic for student novices and experienced players alike starting next Wednesday night.

"We are going to meet two nights a week," said Scott, "and each night we will divide the sessions between lecture and participation. We hope in this way to promote interest in basketball and provide valuable aid to prospective coaches at the same time."

Scott revealed that he understood that all physical education majors in school would be present and serve as a nucleous for the clinic. He also stated that a few of his varsity members would more than likely be present to act as demonstrators and gain experience as well.

"I want to stress," continued Scott, "that this is open to all students, whether they know anything or everything about the game. Our sessions are going to be informal, and we hope in that way to make it a really interesting and valuable affair."

All participants will have to furnish their own gym equipment, but it is hoped that the basket room will be open to take care of them. The clinic will begin at 7:30 o'clock and last for approximately an hour and a half to two hours at first.

Coach Scott also announced last night that he was planning additional clinics next fall to be held at various high schools over the state.

AT&T Officials Await Answer From Strikers

Response Doubtful Says Joseph Beirne

Washington, April 11 — (UP)— President Joseph Beirne of the National federation of telephone workers has made a response to tonight's ultimatum by the telephone company which stated that if the striking long lines workers did not accept their so-called "final offer" by midnight, the offer would be withdrawn.

Beirne, in a radio broadcast (ABC), said he doubts if the union will reply before the midnight deadline. They will not reply, he says, "because the company and union did not agree to the midnight deadline."

At 9 p.m. (E.S.T.) Federal conciliators may have something to say about the company ultimatum.

If the conciliators fail to come up with a solution in time to prevent a complete collapse of negotiations, it is considered possible that the White House may step in. President Truman could shift the negotiations to the White House. Or, as a last resort, he could order government seizure of telephone properties and direct the strikers to work for the government.

GOP Schedules Caucus For Anti-Strike Bill

Washington, April 11— (UP) — House Republican leaders have scheduled a caucus Monday morning in a move to line up solid party support for a drastic anti-strike bill. Democrats on the House Labor committee have been resisting GOP efforts to rush the measure through.

Washington, April 11—(UP)—The 11-nation Far Eastern commission has forbidden the teaching of military subjects and emperor worship in Japan. A directive to this effect has been sent to General MacArthur.

Wallace Flings Charges Against Truman's Plan

London, April 11—(UP)—Former vice president Henry Wallace charges that President Truman's new Greek-Turkish aid program is leading the world down waht he calls "A one way road to war." Wallace made his charge before a sell-out audience of three-thousand in London in the first of a series of speeches he is making in western Europe.

Washington, April11. 11—(UP)— Assistant Secretary of State William Benton says he is glad to welcome Soviet writer Ilya Ehrenbourg to the audience of American broadcasts to Russia. Much Voting Strength Rests In Women, Says Mrs. Tillett

By Sigsbee Miller

Mrs. Charles Tillett, vice-chairman of the National Democratic committee, Thursday night set down Harry Truman as the "very likely" choice for the Democratic presidential nominee in the 1948 race and pinned hopes for a Democratic victory on an expected record turn-out of voters.

MRS. CHARLES TILLETT

On a YWCA-sponsered visit to the campus during which she spoke in Graham Memorial Thursday night on "Women in Politics," Mrs. Tillett made no effort to conceal her optimism for a Democratic victory in 1948.

"Democratic strength," she declared, "is shown when there is a sizeable vote. We are now working toward having 60,000,000 voters registered for the 1948 election. The static, more conservative vote, which is already registered, accounted for the Republican victory last fall, along with a general apathy on the part of all voters. Many potential Democratic votes lie in the unregistered voters."

Women's Votes

The votes of American women, however, are Mrs. Tillett's chief interest. As vice-chairman of the national committee—a post she held since 1940—hers is the task of herding the women into the party's corrals and seeing that they are supplied with information on issues of the day.

"The smartest politicians," she said, "now realize that at least 50 per cent of the voting strength rests with the women."

Mrs. Tillett, a native North Carolinian who was drafted into politics when she demanded—and got—admission of women to Charlotte's precinct committees, is a pioneer in the fight for women's equality with men in politics.

String Quartet To Play April 22

The Gordon String quartet, under the direction of its founder, Jacques Gordon, will present the fourth in a series of special programs when they play in Hill hall Tuesday evening, April 22.

The quartet has played over three thousand concerts, and established the famous music festivals which it holds at Music Mountain, Falls Village, Conn., each summer.

The program will include compositions by Brahms, Turina, Schubert, and Beethoven.

Guest tickets are free and will be available in Hill hall office any time after next Wednesday, April 16. On the evening of the concert, tickets will be honored until 8:20, after which the general public will be admitted.

Art Exhibit Attracts Widespread Attention

"Modern Art in Advertising," now on view in Person hall under the auspices of the Container Corporation of America, is enjoying a very successful run and has attracted the attention of many visitors.

J. S. Daughty of the sales research department of the Corporation was present at the opening of the show. Last week classes in marketing and advertising met in Person hall to hear Daughty speak on the important role of modern art in advertising. He was enthusiastically received by the students who expressed an earnest interest in the exhibit.

Department heads in the schools of Commerce and Journalism have urged their students to take advantage of the exhibition which will close April 27.

Ned Reap and his Dream Serenaders will play for Graham Memorial's informal free dance of the quarter tonight. The hop will begin at 9 o'clock and end at midnight.

30 Unusual Prints Featured in Exhibit

The most ambitious exhibition of photographic art in recent months at Chapel Hill will go on view at Person hall starting Monday afternoon. Sponsored by the members of newly-organized Carolina Photographic Guild, the showing includes more than 30 prints.

It was also learned from Carolina Magazine Editor Fred Jacobson that the outstanding photographs, approximately the top third of the exhibit have been chosen for reproduction in a special "Speaking of Pictures" section in the April issue of the monthly publication.

From Top Negatives

Pictures are from the Guildmen's "top negatives" and represent work in both theaters of the recent war, as well as many shots taken in the United States. "The wide diversity of subject matter and techniques should make the exhibition particularly interesting to campus cameramen and photo followers," predicted Guild President Wallace Patterson.

In a pre-showing review of their work, the Guild nominated several outstanding prints in the group. Among these are the study in light-and-shadow "Dawn Solitude" by Stan Cromer, Bill Webb's rhythmic "Reflections" and the minutely detailed "Moths and Gladiola" taken by Wallace Patterson.

Other shots range from a picturization of Chapel Hill in last quar-

Dance Tonight Will Feature Ned Reap, Dream Serenaders

Graham Memorial leads off the spring frolic calendar with a free dance tonight from 9 until midnight in Woollen gymnasium. Open to the campus and informal, the dance will feature the music of Ned Reap and his popular 15-piece Dream Serenaders.

Tonight's frolic will be the first big dance this quarter. It is the first informal hop open to the campus since Graham Memorial presented the Duke Ambassadors last Fall quarter.

"I think the time is ripe for an informal dance," says Martha Rice, student union director. "I hope the students will shake winter from their bones and have plenty of fun tonight. There will be no bids to bother with; just come to the gym and come on in."

The Ned Reap band was organized last year and is the only student union-backed dance band in the south. Moffatt Sherard, ATO who formerly sang with Freddy Johnson, handles vocals for the GM band. Many new arrangements will be heard tonight.

Legislature to Discuss Publications Thursday

Assembly Passes Almost Half of Budget; Smother Idea of Providing for Humor Mag

By Bookie Jabine

Although publication appropriations were unexpectedly omitted from the Student Legislature agenda Thursday night, political spokesmen are of the opinion that a goodly volume of business nevertheless was handled at the meeting.

Considered to be a highly controversial item the $70,000 section is due to come up for debate next Thursday.

More than half of the $109,500 campus budget, however, was disposed of by the lawmakers Thursday, besides the passage of a bill introduced by Johnny Clampitt that recodifies the elections regulations with respect to the constitution.

Elections Regulations

Consisting of more than five typewritten pages, the tedious, but necessary, bill in essence sets the date of the campus elections for the first Tuesday in May, and generally provides for the conduct of campaigns and ballot counting.

After this bill passed, Bill Miller announced that his Ways and Means committee would hold a hearing Monday evening in Graham Memorial at which Edwin S. Lanier, Central Records office director, and J. S. Bennett, head of the Buildings department will testify on registration and janitorial service respectively.

The assembly also heard another plea for action on a humor magazine by Publications board member Tookie Hodgson.

Asks May Election

Urging quick passage of a law to provide for the election of an editor in May, Hodgson asked the body not to wait any longer since "time was getting short." His proposal, however, was spurned. The Legislature decided not to act until they had seen the trial issue on May 20.

Special Board Pronounces Blame For Mine Blasts

Chicago, Ill., April 11—(UP)— A special Illinois fact-finding board has affixed the blame for the Centralia mine explosion on the Centralia Coal Company management, the State Mines and Minerals department, Mine Inspector Driscoll Scanlan, and the miners themselves.

The committee recommends that the State General Assembly amend the State Mining laws, where necessary, to prevent similar disasters.

Still more miners returned to the soft coal pits today—in defiance of the "safety" work stoppage ordered by John L. Lewis. As a result, the production of soft coal is mounting steadily.

The coal mines administration says production will go well beyond yesterday's output of one million, 198-thousand tons. That amount, by the way, is little more than half of normal.

Duke Coaxes Students To Enter Dice Games For Advancing Science

New York, April 11.—(UP)—It's nothing new for college students to throw dice. But at Duke University, in Durham, a group of college students have been rolling the galloping dominoes with the full approval, and even the encouragement, of the University officials.

They're throwing dice in the interest of science.

Duke University has been conducting research for years in a field known as Parapsychology. It's designed to test scientifically many of the popular ideas which science has previously dismissed as superstition.

For example, the Duke para-psychologists have long sought to determine whether there's, anything to what is commonly called "mental telepathy." Now, they are trying to determine whether some people actually can control dice with their mental powers—in other words, whether its possible, as many a non-scientist claims, to persuade the dice to come up with a seven, 11 or other desirable number.

Today, a report on the dice-throwing experiments was published in the Journal of Parapsychology, which is prepared at Duke.

The article written by Doctor Betty Humphrey says the dice-throwing Duke students would concentrate hard on that number—as gamblers say, they would "pull for it to show." Doctor Humphreys reports that in 600 rolls of the dice, the teams scored hits on an average of more than four dice out of six. That's far above the law of chance.

Dr. George C. Taylor Learns Human Nature In Varied Career as 'Jack of All Trades'

By Mildred Derieux

Dr. George Coffin Taylor, Kenan Professor of English at the University, calls himself a "jack of all trades, master of none." It is true that his varied career includes such occupations as farming, law, newspaper work, and of course teaching; but he is a recognized authority on Shakespeare.

Having taught English in "some women's college in Asheville—I can't remember the name," Dr. Taylor was head of the English department at the University of Colorado from 1900 to 1909. "This was an early coeducational school," he remarked, "in a state where women voted long before the suffragettes started campaigning. I had to come back East to hear that women didn't have enough sense to vote."

On and Off

On the way back from Colorado to Lexington county, South Carolina, where his farm is located, Dr. Taylor managed to get on and forcibly off the staff of the Kansas City Journal. "My editorials were too revolutionary for them," he chuckled; "I was still young then."

For about the next 10 years, Dr. Taylor raised hogs, practiced law, wrote editorials for The Columbia Record and The State, and was a trustee of the Columbia city schools. He recalls three "fights" during this time, probably the best known of which were his campaigns in the role of school trustee for medical examination of school children and for enforcement of the compulsory education law.

DR. GEORGE C. TAYLOR

Buzzards and Hogs

The other "fight" occurred when cholera killed 100 of Dr. Taylor's hogs within a month. There I was in the field every day, brandishing a shotgun, trying to shoot or scare away at least a few of the buzzards that flocked around." Smiling, Dr. Taylor added, "A couple of murderers I defended in court were worse off than my dead hogs."

One of the best-known courses on the University campus now is Dr. Taylor's Shakespeare class. Students often marvel at his clear understanding of the characters. "All my experiences," he explains, "have been the kind that help me to know human nature—especially the contact I had with ignorant country people. I found, by the way, that they are just as happy and probably a little more honest than educated city folk."

Dr. Taylor calls North Carolina "one of the most interesting schools I know of," but he won't stand too

In Memoriam

"The true goal we seek is far above and beyond the ugly field of battle."

The above statement was made by a tireless leader, a very human personality, and a great American who did not live to see the true goal of which he spoke realized on this earth.

Today, on the second anniversary of the death of Franklin D. Roosevelt, it is only fitting that we pause and re-dedicate ourselves to seek even more intensely the lasting peace towards which he gave his life.

The faith, courage, and ability of Franklin D. Roosevelt will long stand as an inspiration to all Americans, present and fature. Brilliant in war, brilliant in peace, he and the ideals for which he stood, will stay forever in the memory of a grateful people.

Joe Colleges Are Not Like Their Cinema Counterparts

By Jud Kinberg

With another school year racing away to beat hell, I took stock of my first brace of quarters since returning to UNC and realized just how great a failure they have been. There is no denying it, I haven't lived the way I should. The unfortunate part about it, the thing that makes me want to find a stray beer and curved shoulder—for crying purposes only—is that I fear just about everyone on campus has piddled away their time.

Leave us face it, brethren and sistren, we haven't measured up to our movie counterparts. Who among us can say that he's "lived dangerously?" Stop and think about that next time you meekly surrender to closing time at Aggie's or Brady's. Will we have any scars to show for our collegiate careers, any whopping big police fines to tell the kiddies about in firesides to come?

The usual filmusical—they always sing—having to do with the smart set at an institution of higher learning is scenarioed something likka this:

Joe Grant, III, is a snotty kid who's had everything his way. He had chocolate bars when there were none, even his kiddie car had hydromatic drive.

Our Joe finally gets through prep school and is packed off to college. Old Tank-up U is one of these places where they have ivy covering the ivy. There's some decrepit rat-race runner holding down the plush cushion on the prexy's chair. He's a right guy, but we're not supposed to know that until the end.

Well, Our Joe is no sooner in town the first day than he piles up his convertible Duisenberg against the school's favorite statue. Since it is of Venus de Milo, many of the male campus bigwigs put the fishy eye upon Po' Joe. From here on until the final fadeout, he is much misunderstood. With that as a start, our hero proceeds to alternate getting caught with women in his rooms and smashing up Duisenbergs. At times, the action gets so rapid that there is no time for changing scene and Joe is seen having women in his Duisenberg and smashing up his room.

For some reason, this doesn't endear him to one and all. Oh yes, lest I forget, he is really an "A" student, but is flunking a few courses just to show his "don't give a damn" attitude. All this is changed by "the girl"—generally the decrepit top man's daughter—just back from serving an extended sentence in Radcliffe or some other woman's penitentiary.

There it is, except for the quarts of liquor that slosh their merry way through the film. And damned if Joe doesn't come out with the highest average in the institution's 375-year history, marry the girl and take over the president's job. (It seems the new father-in-law was just waiting for such a live-wire as Joe, much like the High Llama and Ronald Colman in "Lost Horizon.")

What I'm getting at, is that most of us never experience any of this with the possible exception of that flunking part. And with us, it's not "don't give a damn," but malignant "je ne sais pas." We have all the ingredients. The only thing I question is whether one of the major deans has an eligible daughter. However, if this idea of mine to "live dangerously" catches on, I'd be very happy to poll the tenants of South building and find out which one of them is secreting a young beautiful up at a no-male reform school.

For those in lower-bracket incomes, I would suggest substituting a jeep for a Duisenberg and possibly corn liquor for scotch. Otherwise, everything else goes as is. If we're going to collect memories, there is not a moment to lose.

Last man in the cooler is a sissy!

(Editor's Note: Next week, Dan the Dog. Dan returns to take over his column, being run in the interim by Jud Kinberg, with a scathing reply to a recent article about the "Doctor to Mentally Sick Dogs.")

President Truman

It behooves all of us today to consider also the man who was suddenly called upon to replace the late President Roosevelt, to consider the job he has done, and to support him in his present policy.

Harry S. Truman assumed the greatest, most important job in the world without any preparation at one of the most crucial periods in our nation's history.

Mr. Truman started slowly, feeling his way along in a job he had not wanted, a job that was new to him, a job the importance of which he realized more than any other American. He made many mistakes, he drew much deserved and much undeserved criticism. But he carried on as best he knew, and best he could.

Today, with two years experience in the White House behind him, President Truman is not the same soft-treading, groping man who took over the country's leadership in 1945. His grip on the reins has tightened, he has become firm, is fighting for and making people believe in what he wants.

He has taken a stand on the United States foreign policy that requires great courage and belief in its righteousness. The fact that he has taken such a stand proves that Harry Truman is our president in every sense of the word. As such, his policy deserves the support of the American people. We feel that he will get it.

Severe Loss

The University has suffered another great loss.

Dr. Thomas J. Wilson, director of the University press since January 1946, has resigned to accept the directorship of the Harvard university press.

This marks the second time in two years that the University has lost a capable director, Dr. William T. Couch leaving the position to accept one as head of the University of Chicago press 18 months ago.

Dean Wettach, chairman of the board of governors of the Press expressed the sentiments of everyone connected with the organization when he remarked, "It will be difficult in not impossible to replace Dr. Wilson."

There is no immediate prospect of appointing a new director, according to Wettach. Wilson's loss comes right at the time the Press is enjoying its greatest success, celebrating its 25th anniversary this year.

Carolina can ill afford to lose men of the calibre of Dr. Wilson.

To make friends, be one. To get teamwork, give it.

Linksmen Drop Michigan Unit

Ward and Doescheer Pace 17-10 Victory

By Billy Carmichael

Despite the wind, rain, and lack of a large gallery, Carolina's hard-hitting golfers annexed their fourth straight win yesterday afternoon while they defeated the high-touted linksmen of Michigan over the rolling fairways of Hope Valley Country club. The score was 17 to 10.

Harvey Ward was the leader for the locals as he turned in another fine round, coupling a 37 on the first nine with a handsome 35 on the back to register the low tally of the day with a 72. Right behind him was "The Major," Dick Doescher, who continued to play his ever-steady golf to hang up a creditable 72.

Another fine Tar Heel performance was that of No. 5 man, Mike Nolan, who overcame the effects of academic and physical injuries suffered this week to register a 75.

The rest of the Tar Heel sextet were not at the top of their form. The usually powerful Junie Bailey found his shoots going in all directions to finish with a stumbling 80, while Bob Cox suffered the same fate in tallying an 81.

Taylor Tumbles

With the Carolina's No. 4 man Ray Taylor, it was somewhat a different story. Not only was the local linksman not on his game, but he ran head on into the National intercollegiate runner-up for the past two years in the person of Dave Barclay. The Michigan lad played the outstanding round of the day for the visitors, in closing with a 73, which was a nice performance considering his unfamiliarity with the layout.

The summary:

Doescher (NC) defeated Kessler, 2½ to ½; Schalon (M) defeated Bailey, 2½ to ½ Best ball, NC, 2½ to ½.

Ward (NC) defeated Jenswold, 2½ to ½; Barclay (M) defeated Taylor, 3-0 Best ball, NC 2½ to ½.

Nolan (NC) defeated Ludolph, 3-0; O'Hare (M) defeated Cox, 2½ to ½ Best ball, NC, 3-0.

Track Squad Meets Georgia Tech in Atlanta Today in First Dual Competition of Season

Atlanta, April 11—North Carolina's track squad, 31 in number, arrived here this evening ready to engage the strong Georgia Tech team tomorrow afternoon in the first dual meet of the sason for the Tar Heels.

The meet is scheduled for 2 o'clock in Grant stadium and the competition is expected to be close all the way through to the final event, the one-mile relay. The two teams finished one-two in the Southern Invitational Indoor Games at Chapel Hill in February and both appeared equally as strong outdoors in the Florida Relays two weeks ago.

The Carolina team stopped in Athens, Ga., and went through a light workout before continuing on to Atlanta. The squad members looked in good shape after the 500-mile bus trip.

In addition to the team competition, the meet shapes up as an individual scoring dual between Carolina's Chunk Simmons and Tech's Doug Fowlkes. Both are expected to perform in three events, with a possible clash against each other coming in the 220-yard low hurdles.

That some of the distance runners might double in the mile and two-mile events is a definite possibility, according to Coaches Bob Fetzer and Dale Ranson, both of whom accompanied the team. Probable candidates for such an assignment would include Jimmy Miller, Jack Milne and Sam Magill.

Also among those making the trip are Assistant Coach Joe Hilton and Daily Tar Heel scribe Morty Schaap.

The Play Day will consist of a full program of competitive sports among the various women students. In addition to Carolina coeds, participants will come from Meredith college, Woman's college of the University, Duke, St. Mary's college, Guilford, Queens, Eastern Carolina Teachers' college, and Peace Junior college.

Mrs. J. G. Beard, head of the Women's Physical Education department, has announced the following tentative schedule of events:

Tennis Outfit Gains 7-2 Win

Downs Cornell Crew In Return Contest

By Roy Holsten

Crushed in their attempt to avenge their previous shutout, the Big Red of Cornell fell once again before the strokes of the potent Tar Heel netmen yesterday as the Carolinians gained a 7-2 victory, their eighth in a row.

The blue and white racqueteers were forced to display excellent form as they clashed with the Ithaca crew. No easy target, the Cornell lads copped two singles..

After five straight days of tennis, Coach John Kenfield's charges will get a well-deserved rest for three days before they tangle with the Duke Blue Devils on Tuesday.

Bronzed Vic Seixas, for the second time in as many days, was forced to play 25 games before he took the measure of Len Steiner, national indoor junior champ, by a score of 9-7, 6-3. Vaunted Vic tapped out a similar win over Cornell number-one man Dick Savitt the day before.

Set Point

With the games knotted at 5-all, Steiner flashed a potent net attack and took the game to lead 6-5. Steiner was serving set point with a 40-15 lead in the following frame when Seixas displayed his prowess as a backhander and took the next four points and the game. Seixas broke through at 7-7 to capture the final two games and the all-important first set. On the long end of a 6-2 score in the second set Seixas trapped the Ithacan freshman repeatedly at the net.

Dick Savitt, flaunting a steady volley of deep shots, took the measure of colorful Clark Taylor, 6-2, 6-3, on the second court in a game that featured brilliant net play. Taylor who was hindered by a weak ankle incurred in the previous day's contest, was limited in his court coverage and his attack was definitely weakened.

Other Singles

Jim Nicholson ran into trouble in the first set where he was forced into overtime, but finally toppled Dick Young, 7-5, 6-1. Teammates Stan Gruner and Ray Morris beat Ed Gilbert and John Smith respectively by similar 6-2, 6-3 scores.

In the last of the singles, Charlie Rice tumbled before the powerful racquet-wielding of John Ruhiluma, former captain of the highly touted Hill prep school squad. The 19-year old freshman beat Rice 6-2, 4-6, 6-2.

The doubles, all won by Carolina: Seixas and Taylor over Savitt and Steiner, 1-6, 6-1, 6-4; Kenfield and Morris over Penn and Goldstein, 6-1, 6-3; Skakle and Nicholson over Young and Ruhiluma 8-6, 3-6, 6-4.

Coleman Ineligible To Play at Carolina Before Turning Pro

Hamp Coleman, who had been counted on as one of Carolina's mound mainstays this season, gave up college ball to join the professional ranks because he was scholastically ineligible to play this year, it developed here this week.

Coleman passed all of his work last quarter and by Southern conference standards was eligible to play, the records office pointed out, but he narrowly missed having sufficient eligibility credits to meet Carolina's own requirements, which are higher than those of the conference.

The lanky Red Springs twirler recently signed a contract with the Louisville club of the American association, a link in the Boston Red Sox farm chain. He made the move only after ascertaining that he definitely was ineligible to play for the Tar Heels.

Boston club officials have pointed out that they would not have negotiated with Coleman if he had been eligible to play for Carolina.

The meet will be a regular intramural sport to take place each spring and the winning team will be presented a swimming plaque. No competition has been held since 1943, when Pi Beta Phi sorority swam off with the award.

During the meet, members of the club will present several swimming formations.

Tar Heels Hitless In Six-Inning Tilt

Elon Park, Burlington, April 11—Two Burlington Bee hurlers pitched an abbreviated no-hitter against the Carolina baseball crew here this afternoon before the contest was halted by rain with the class C professional club ahead by 5-1 in the bottom of the sixth inning.

The game, which goes on the records as an official affair, was the third loss of the campaign for the Tar Heels and gave them a season's record of 3-3. Carolina hits the road again tomorrow when the team travels to Gastonia to oppose the Rex mills semi-pro outfit of that city.

Outclassed by Bees

Coach Walter Rabb's charges were simply outclassed in today's tussle, with the Bees jumping off to a two-run, first-inning advantage that provided them with the margin of victory. The home club combed two Carolina moundsmen for seven safeties, including a homer and two doubles. Dean Cassell started for the Tar Heels and clouted two innings, enough to be charged with the loss. He was followed by Les Couch.

After Burlington took a two-run lead in the first frame on a double, two singles and one error, the Tar Heels came back in the top of the second to make up one tally without picking up a hit. Catcher Jim Haywerth started the proceedings by working his way to third via a free pass, a miscue by the Bees' hurler, and a wild pitch. After Lefty Eoff had fanned two Carolina batters to ease the situation, Haywerth finally tallied when the shortstop bobbled Cassell's grounder.

That was the final Carolina threat of the tussle. The Blue and White batters went down in straight order in the next three stanzas and did get a pair of runners on base in the sixth inning. But no runs were forthcoming and hits proved to be just as scarce.

Veterans Bureau Grants Approval For Medical Care

Veterans taking institutional or on-the-job training under Public Law 16 may obtain medical treatment at government expense for injuries received while in training, according to the Peabody hall office of the Veterans administration.

Public Law 16, under which the training program for disabled veterans is administered, provides that those who are injured or suffer an aggravation of an injury as a result of their training may be awarded medical benefits on the same basis as if their ailments were service-connected. Veterans must apply for such benefits within two years after their injury.

In institutional or on-the-job training under Public law 346 (G. I. Bill), however, veterans are entitled only to such benefits as are available at the institution or establishment in which they are training, and which are regularly provided for other students or employees.

British Movie Fans Prefer Own Pictures According to Survey

London, April 11—(UP)—A survey completed today indicates that British movie fans now prefer local talent to Hollywood's offerings.

The survey, which has tremendous implications for the movie industry, was conducted by a British theater chain. It marked the first time in 20 years that British fans have given top honors to their own British film stars and directors.

The 600,000 British fans interviewed in the survey picked a movie about the RAF, called "The Way to the Stars," as the best post-war film. Only one Hollywood production "The Lost Week-end" placed in the top six favorites.

The fans also selected a local girl, Margaret Lockwood, as their most popular actress, leaving Ingrid Bergman and Bette Davis as runners up. Only two other American stars placed in the top twenty, they were: Barbara Stanwyck and Claudette Colbert.

Among the male stars, James Mason, who currently is appearing in New York, took top honors. Two Americans, Alan Ladd and Gary Cooper, appeared in the top twenty, as they did in the last poll.

may seem small but actually it is large and encouraging in view of the fact that women have had the vote for only 25 years," she said. "Those women who have been in public office have made outstanding records; they have had to, because they have been on trial and the future of other women in politics has rested with them. Mrs. Roosevelt is one of the outstanding workers on the UN today; the success of Frances Perkins as secretary of labor is just now beginning to be realized fully.

Start in County

"Women have a place in politics and they should start at the county or precinct level. Then, if they like, they may go on to the bigger posts. We have had some outstanding examples of the effectiveness of women in Congress. Too, the women can best exercise their influence on the precinct level. Elections are not won in the national or state headquarters but in the precincts."

Mrs. Tillett was wary about committing herself to any very definite predictions as to the 1948 election. She did say, however, that President Truman has gained the support of most of the country's powerful Democratic leaders and will "very likely" win the 1948 nomination.

UNC Graduate

Mrs. Tillett, daughter of a former State Supreme court jurist, is a graduate of Carolina and her daughter, Sarah Tillett, is now a student here. A vivacious, middle-aged woman, Mrs. Tillett speaks rapidly and with enthusiasm, seldom relaxing as she talks —about everything from politics to a young diplomatic friend serving a depressing apprenticeship in South Africa. Soon after her graduation from Carolina, Mrs. Tillett was instrumental in securing the first women's dormitory.

Mrs. Tillett left yesterday with her daughter to spend the weekend in Charlotte. She plans a speaking tour through northeastern states soon.

State Beginning Navy By Buying Two LCT's For Off-Coast Work

April 11—(UP)—The State of North Carolina has run a Navy of its own for some time. It has leased or operated ferryboats along the coast. But now it is really making a Navy out of it. The Highway Commission has bought two LCT's from the Maritime Commission.

An LCT, that's short for landing craft tank, is a shallow draft vessel 120 feet long. One will hold 20 cars.

One of the vessels will operate on Croatan Sound between Mann's Harbor and Roanoke Island. The other will run across the Alligator River from near Fort Landing to East Lake. They will be converted to civilian use and be placed in operation sometime this summer.

Only last February, the State bought the two ferries which have been operating across Croatan Sound. The Highway Commission paid $20,000 to Mrs. Baum of Manteo for the two vessels. But one of them needs repairs and the other, which is now operating, will handle seven to 10 cars.

The Highway Commission paid $10,000 apiece for the LCT's. They were purchased from the Maritime Commission at Norfolk, Va.

Governor Gregg Cherry this afternoon confirmed reports that Ward was considering turning in his resignation, and although Ward has made no official move, the Governor indicated he would not be surprised if it comes through.

Ward was appointed to the commission of motor vehicles by former Governor J. Melville Broughton. Cherry re-appointed the Wilson businessman. The Governor says Ward first mentioned quitting his state post last fall but was persuaded to stay on during the Legislature because of the large highway safety program which was being worked up at the time.

CRIL to Sponsor Speech By Hartt this Evening

Tonight's Sermon is Seventh in Series Featured by University Religion Group

Dr. Julian Hartt, professor of theology and philosophy of religion at Yale Divinity school will deliver the seventh in a series of University sermons this evening in Hill hall at 8 o'clock. The subject of his address will be: "The Church." As both teacher and pastor he is well qualified to speak on this topic.

DR. JULIAN HARTT

Before coming to Yale Dr. Hartt was professor of philosophy at Berea college, Kentucky, having come there after graduate work at Garrett Biblical institute, Northwestern university, and Yale Divinity school. Between 1932-34 he served as pastor of a Methodist church in South Dakota.

These sermons are being presented by the Council for Religion in Life and are organized around the Hazen books on Religion. The CRIL, now under the direction of Ben Perlmutter, has presented many able speakers in this year's series. The organization has attempted to get, in so far as possible, the authors of this series of books. That failing, it has gotten substitutes as competent and engaging as possible.

Auto Workers Wage Demands Taking Shape

Pay Hike not Enough, Declares Union Head

Detroit, April 12—(UP)—The new wage demands on the auto industry are beginning to crystalize.

Earlier today, General Motors offered a temporary ten cent per hour cost of living increase to 265,000 hourly rate employes. The United Electrical Workers union was the first to reject the GM offer, on the ground that it was unsatisfactory.

Reuther Statement

Then Walter Reuther, President of the United Auto workers, said the increase fails to meet the higher living costs. The UAW is demanding a 23 and a half cent increase. However, Reuther said the offer will be presented to GM workers for a decision. The third union involved in the offer, the United Rubber workers, has made no comment on the proposal as yet.

At the same time, the Auto Workers union also has filed strike notice against the Chrysler corporation. The union has been negotiating with Chrysler since last October over a 23 and a half cent hourly pay hike.

Return to Work Move Ordered by Mine Chief

Washington, April 12—(UP)—John L. Lewis is reported to have authorized each district president of the United Mine Workers Union to order a back-to-work movement to pits they consider safe. The move would clear the way for an early end to the mine safety strike.

Anti Closed Shop Bill Passed by Labor Group

Washington, April 12—(UP)—The house Labor committee has approved by an 18 to 4 vote a drastic strike control bill which, among other things, would outlaw the closed shop. Chairman Hartley predicts house passage of the measure by next Friday.

New Efforts Underway In Telephone Strike

Washington, April 12—(UP)—The labor department says new efforts are underway to break the deadlock in the telephone strike. The Labor department says that what it calls "exploratory discussions" are being held with union and company officials.

Truman Praises F.D.R. In Missouri Address

Local 'Mr. Hush' Mystery Solved by Telephone Call

The mystery of "Mr. Hush" has been solved. But the lady who identified the Daily Tar Heel's now infamous picture will not receive a trip to New York with all expenses paid.

However, she does have the thanks of a bewildered staff whose members had sought vainly all week long to find out whose photo the newspaper had run over the name of W. Raymond Taylor of the Woman's college.

Eager beaver DTH reporters and headline writers vied for the honor of solving the riddle, but none came close. The University news bureau was also in the dark. Just as one of the DTH night editors was being credited with "the perfect crime," the phone rang.

A very pleasant-voiced lady was on the other end. One sentence later the mystery had been solved.

The man in the photo was L. P. McLendon, prominent Greensboro attorney and member of the Board of Trustees. "Mr. Hush," or rather Mr. McLendon, who at present has a son registered in the University, has made no comment.

The DTH staff, still slightly confused, apologized to both Messrs. Taylor and McLendon.

Graham Memorial to Present Famed Imitator Wednesday

Harry Welch, 'Man with Thousand Voices,' Called Greatest One-Man Show on Earth

By Dave Owens

The character whom Walter Winchell called "the greatest one-man show in all the world" will be presented in the main lounge of Graham Memorial on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock in the person of Harry Foster Welch, the man with a thousand voices.

Welch is the original and exclusive voice of Popeye, the spinach-eating salt in Paramount's zany comedies and often doubles as Olive Oyl, Wimpy, Pluto and incidental Goons. He was the Big Bad Wolf in "The Three Little Pigs" and six of the Seven Dwarfs, and can be Donald Duck, Mickey Mouse and any of the chattering creatures of the Silly Symphonies.

King Gustave Laughs

"King Gustave of Sweden never laughed so much in his life," says Popular Science, "as at Harry 'Popeye' Welch doing the opera Carmen. Because of an amazing sound organ, he is able to imitate every instrument in a large orchestra, ranging from the French horn down to the steam calliope." Martinelli Swarthout, Tibbets, the famous bulls, and conductor Toscanini will be performed by the Man with a Thousand Voices.

Welch and his amazing voice range have appeared on programs with many celebrities. Besides being guest star at the Press club's banquet for President Roosevelt in Washington's Mayflower hotel, Welch has been seen with Mark Hellinger, Dorothy Kilgallen, Robert Ripley, Gene Tunney, Jack Dempsey, Bill Tilden, Harry Hershfield, Chic Young and Otto Soglow, among many others.

Entertains Royalty

During the first World War, when he was serving with the Fifth Infantry in France, he was much in demand as an entertainer. Once he went from the front lines to Paris for two weeks to entertain Albert, King of the Belgians, and Generalissimo Armando Diaz of the Italian army. Back at the front, he suffered a sharpnel injury in his left hip, but he explained, "I entertained all the fellas in the hospital." Just 15 years later he did the same thing for King George V of England at Buckingham Palace.

Aquinas to Sponsor Father O'Callahan

Father Joseph T. O'Callahan, S. J. Congressional Medal of Honor winning chaplain, will speak this evening at 8 o'clock in Gerrard hall under the joint auspices of the Aquinas club and the Duke university Catholic club.

Termed "the bravest man I have ever seen" by Captain Leslie Gehres, commanding officer of the aircraft carrier Franklin, Father O'Callahan received the country's highest military award for service when his ship was struck and set afire 60 miles off the coast of Japan in March, 1945.

Navy Citation

His Navy citation read, "When the carrier was turned into a floating inferno by the aerial bomb and the explosion of her own ammunition and bombs, Chaplain O'Callahan left his battle station on the island bridge to go to the blazing flight deck. There he administered to the wounded and dying of all faiths, organized and led fire-fighting crews, braved already burning ammunition magazines, jettisoned live ammunition and manned a hose to cool hot bombs rolling dangerously on the listed deck. Though wounded in action, he continued his life-saving efforts in spite of suffocating smoke and searing heat."

Speaking to a graduating class at Georgetown university, Father O'Callahan said, "Almost everyone intends to take life seriously, but too often this resolve degenerates into a case of self-delusion. Many who think that they are taking life seriously are actually only taking themselves seriously. Who takes himself seriously is over-conscious of his rights; who takes life seriously is fully conscious of his obligation."

World Affairs Association To Debate Truman Doctrine

With a forum on the controversial "Truman Doctrine" the Association of the Study of World Affairs will open its program Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock to bring to the campus the most accurate information available on international relations of the present day. As yet the site of the forum has not been determined but announcement will be forthcoming.

Campus Leaders Participate

Participating in the forum will be leaders of campus affairs who can give an opinion of student opinion on the subject. Bill Miller, former president of the Debate council and a candidate for the presidency of the student body will join with Jimmy Wallace to give opinions and facts in favor of the American foreign policy while Ben Rounte, chairman of the Chapel Hill chapter of AVC and Blount Stewart, former chairman of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare will speak against it. Herb Bodman, secretary of ASWA, will moderate.

The ASWA was formed this winter with the purpose of taking active action to bring to the campus, and later to the state as a whole, all information available on present world problems. It is a non-partisan organization designed to present all sides without discrimination.

Magill Speaks

Preceding the forum, ASWA Chairman Orrin Magill, will speak on the objectives of the group and outline its program for the spring quarter, while after the forum there will be opportunity for students to interrogate the members of the panel.

YMCA Will Elect Officers Tomorrow

Tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock the YMCA will elect officers and board members for the coming year. All members are urged to attend this meeting which will be held in the main lounge at Graham Memorial.

The following have been nominated for positions: President, Charles Foley; Vice-President, Robert Purdue; Freshman Secretary, Ed Hamilton; Secretary-Treasurer, Meade Deggs.

Don Broad, President of the YMCA has asked all members to attend this important meeting.

Julian Hartt to Talk To Wesley Foundation

Dr. Julian Hartt, professor of theology and philosophy of religion at Yale divinity school and CRIL speaker, will address Wesley Foundation at 7 o'clock tonight on personal religion.

Wesley's Sunday evening program will begin at 6 o'clock with a supper and fellowship period. All students are invited to participate in all or a part of the activities.

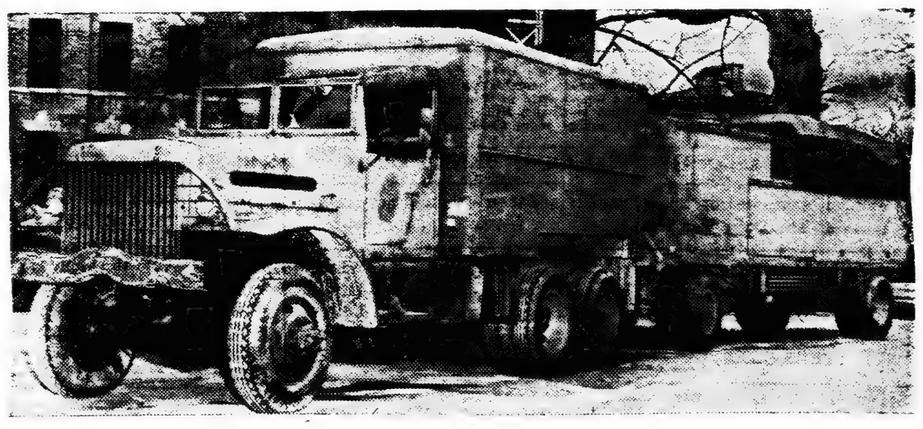
18-Wheeled Unit Has Generators



By Raney Stanford

Director Earl Wynn and staff members of the University's recently organized Communication center, which is badly in need of funds to carry on an ambitious program, have come to a conclusion that there must be a Santa Claus after all.

At an estimated cost of only $150, the Center has secured a gigantic 18-wheeled truck and trailer, valued at $106,000, from the United States Army Signal corps, to be converted into a radio strength field testing unit. This means, explains O. W. Hungerford, technical director of the Center, that the new equipment will be used to test the strength, range and coverage areas of ordinary radio stations, and of new frequency-modulation and television transmitters.

Fit in Well

With the high output possible in the portable generators (25,000 watts), Hungerford said, the truck and trailer will fit in well with Center motion picture production, being able to run cameras, lights, and sound-recording equipment in any place not served with power outlets of sufficient strength to do this type of work.

Valued at $106,000 and secured at a cost of only $150, the truck and trailer pictured above will add valuable equipment to the University's newly organized Communication center. They will provide a radio strength field testing unit and valuable equipment for the Center's motion picture production program.

"We obtained the vehicle, and all the technical equipment contained in it, through the government disposal of surplus military properties," Director Wynn explained. "They told us if we could get it from Baltimore to Chapel Hill, it was ours."

During the week's vacation between the winter and spring quarters, four student veterans, George Aycock of Richlands, Robert L. Dewar of Fuquay Springs, Clyde K. Brooks of Ware Shoals, S. C., and Jesse H. Meredith, Chapel Hill, all ex-GI drivers, took the train to Maryland at the expense of the University and drove the massive truck back from Proof of What?

A recent editorial in the Greensboro Daily News concerning an attempt to ban the AVC discusses the problem and arrives at the only logical conclusion. However, in doing so, the writer has mixed up a few facts.

First, speaking of an attempt by Forsyth county's Representative James M. Hayes, Jr. to ban AVC from certain concessions conferred on other veterans organizations, the editorial confuses AMVETS with AVC, uses them interchangably, something which would undoubtedly displease both groups. Certainly, the two groups are not similar.

The paper quotes from a letter written by Representative Hayes in which he points out that the Daily Tar Heel contained an item showing that the local AVC chapter had adopted two resolutions, one opposing the outlawing of the Communist party, the other opposing President Truman's program to assist Greece and Turkey.

The Daily News says, "Our advice is not to take the Daily Tar Heel too seriously, especially around April 1."

We would like to point out to the editors of the Greensboro paper that the Daily Tar Heel is also a daily newspaper, and as such, tries to live up to all the standards and codes of journalistic ethics. The news stories appearing in the DTH are attained by competent student reporters and can be accepted as factual.

It is widely-known that the DTH customarily produces an April Fool issue, which is plainly that to any reader, and is taken seriously by none. All other issues of the newspaper, however, may certainly be taken seriously and accepted as a true, unbiased account of campus events.

The article in question actually appeared in the April 3 issue of the Daily Tar Heel. And as for the resolutions adopted by the local AVC chapter, Representative Hayes is caught far off base if he calls them proof that the AVC is a red organization. As the Daily News points out, many prominent figures and some of our leading foes of Communism have openly come out against the same two proposals refuted by the AVC.

Perhaps if Mr. Hayes had read the April Fool issue of the Daily Tar Heel, he would have had further "proof"—of something.

Raising A Racquet

Unquestionably the most popular spring sport in which the majority of the students here participate is tennis.

And it is unfortunate that 7000 students have only seven courts on which to play, which means that many students can't play. None of them can play as often as they'd like to play, and some find it well-night impossible to get a chance to play.

Before the war, with only half of its present enrollment, the University had about five times as many courts as it has now. Most of them have succumbed to the growing construction of additional buildings and quonset huts. Students cannot play on the varsity courts.

We have received several complaints from students about the shortage of courts. We do not know that anything can be done about it. However, it might be possible to clear away some of the wooded area behind Woollen gym and erect additional tennis courts there. Perhaps such a move would be worthy of consideration.

One thing is sure. As matters stand now, the supply can't come close to coping with the demand and our many tennis fans find themselves without a place to play. Recreational facilities should not be overlooked in our rapid expansion.

American Citizens Must Help If President Is to Be Great

By Manny Margolis

There is a relationship in American democracy between the people and their President, which only too rarely is what it should be. We who are American citizens, we who are sovereign, must help if any President is to be great in our time.

Yesterday, the world recalled with fearful sorrow the passing of a great President. But his greatness was directly reducible to the articulate intelligence of the American people. He never lost their confidence, nor they his.

"Just a guy in pitching for the bunch of us
For all of us, the whole people.
A big guy pitching, with America in his heart."

New Dealer? Sure. Democrat? With a small "d." American? As ice cream. Internationalist? Lots of that.

He made mistakes, both at home and abroad. But they were mistakes which were engulfed in the positive results of his tremendous efforts. He repudiated isolationism and killed it permanently; he demanded that this nation once more assume her proper place and responsibility in the community of nations; he unified the American people on the major issues of aid to the democracies at war; he furnished a bold, energetic, and resourceful military and diplomatic leadership when war came.

"And sometimes you've struck out and we know it,
But we know the batting average, too."

Here was a man who could state, even in the darkest hours of the war, that "the vast majority of the human race are on our side."

Yet now, in the brighter days of peace, such support from the little peoples of the world is lacking. Why? Because a great leader is dead? Or is it because the ideals he fought and died for are being carefully scuttled, one by one?

A new crusade has been ushered in. The "hatriots" are closing their ranks.

"The professional dispensers of snakebite and poison ivy
In syndicated columns . . . are 'viewing with alarm'."

There are Earles and Bullits and Burnhams. There's a Richard Patterson and an Arthur Bliss Lane. There is John Foster Dulles. They tell us that we "quarantined" the wrong aggressor. We treated the wrong patient. We cured the wrong disease. Can they be right? And F.D.R. wrong?

We've gotten our values mixed, human and dollar. We've scrapped the Four Freedoms for Truman's three—freedom to suppress political minorities at home, freedom to intervene abroad, and freedom to bypass the United Nations everywhere! Oil is thick and scarce. Blood is thin and abundant.

All this in the name of crisis, in the name of emergency. Facts are withheld. Debate is limited. Speed is demanded. The spectre of Winston Churchill rises as that of F.D.R. fades. We have become a nation gripped by hysteria and fear.

"Till one man said (and we listened)
'The one thing we have to fear is fear'."

That voice has been stilled. And the people are not meeting the test which that untimely death has thrust upon them. It is a test which will measure how well his work will endure, a test of how well he led his people.

His was a work founded in reality. It MUST endure.

Chasing Lamour Is Favorite Pastime, According to Hope

By Bob Hope

I'm supposed to get out of character and do a serious piece for your newspaper . . . all about interesting sidelights on life in Hollywood, dodging Colonna, making movies and records with people like Dottie Lamour.

No kidding, that's what they asked for. Make it unemotional, they said. Give us the straight dope. Tell us how it's done.

Imagine!

Did you ever try being unemotional with your favorite brunette taunting you all over the set? Did you ever try singing over Dottie's shoulder and keeping your eyes on the sheet music?

It can't be done.

And anyway, who wants to be unemotional about a thing like that?

Take our last picture, for example. I could have won Dottie in the first ten minutes. That didn't make sense when all I had to do was insist on a script re-write so I wouldn't get her until the end.

That made it easy to stretch our shooting time—and rehearsals with Lamour. You really have to sneak up on these things or they'll happen and be over before you have a chance to enjoy them.

The last record we made could have been made from two songs we knew well. But that meant I'd only have a few minutes singing with Lamour.

So what did we do?

Somebody wrote a tune we had to learn. Of course they stole the title from the name of the picture (My Favorite Brunette), and that was silly because the tune didn't even turn up in the film.

But it gave me an excuse to take more time with Dottie. . .time to sit and stare and try to hold my hands steady. . .time to keep from lunging across the studio. . .time to hold back the growls welling up in my throat. . .time to hang over her shoulder and rub cheeks like it was the singing I was interested in.

Believe me . . . it's hard to subdue the beast in me. I'm such a man.

Somehow I have the feeling this whole thing is beginning to sound like a scriptwriter's nightmare for Colonna.

But I couldn't resist their pleas for the record song.

Now they're sorry about the picture . . . in one way or another.

Anyway, everybody who hears the record says I ought to trade radio shows with the Metropolitan Opera.

Now . . . that's really getting too serious.

Come to think of it, I'm not going to do that calm and unemotional article for your paper after all.

I'd rather chase Lamour!

THE CPU ROUNDTABLE

THE PRESS: INFORMATION, MORE OR LESS

By Jerry Davidoff
Chairman, Carolina Political Union

A highly integrated democracy requires two qualities, among others, in order to serve effectively. The first is responsibility, which is the highest honor a free nation may bestow upon any man, and secondly, a public fully informed.

The press in our nation has failed to meet the necessary standards for full development of a society theoretically organized to be magnificiently sensitive to the direction of public opinion.

The Roosevelt elections to the contrary, the press forms public opinion, plagues it, raises collective blood pressures and in large has an influence where it should be a servant.

Morris Ernst has pointed out that in the majority of American cities one corporation owns all the newspapers, when there are more than one, which is infrequently, and the radio station, too. Until recently, this was true in Durham, where the Herald-Sun Corporation also controlled WDNC, the only local radio outlet. Thus both sides of a question are sometimes not only not heard, but are incapable of being heard through existing channels of mass communication.

In Colonial times a journeyman printer, with a few dollars of capital could set up his own publication, and thereby send out his own point of view. Today mass communication of any sort is big business. Indeed, so tells Virginius Dabney, eminent Richmond editor, the vast majority of newspaper owners today consider their papers as "property" rather than as "public service utensils."

A free press is vital to a democratic society. But this means to regulation by self-monopolizing as well as lack of governmental interference. But a fair publication of the facts concerned must be accomplished. Instances of big advertisers directing not only editorial interpretation but also news presentation policies are not so rare as to be discounted. Business is business, and there is a lack of responsibilness on the part of the press as well as business where things economic are involved.

Provincialism, such as the Pacific Coast's primary concern with the Orient as opposed to eastern concern with Europe must be broken down if the national opinion is to function in it's preferred way. This is the task of newspaper chains and the large news agencies.

On the whole, the press is concerned with the scandalous and the morbid. The publication of Arnold Toynbee's history recently, although played "big" by Time, was almost overlooked by the front pages of the nation's press. Yet, here was a work which would leave it's impress on the world when Leo Durocher or a two headed baby were but clippings in the dead space of a newspaper's morgue. News of things which seem "heavy" must be given better play, and the newspapers must persue a policy of leading taste and educational standard, while maintaining impartiality in presentation. A difficult task, admittedly, but one whose results would help strengthen a democratic way of life which we have stated we believe to be the best existing.

The job for the press, as for all of democratic humanity, is to awake from complacent dreams of Nash-Kelvinator refrigerators and Merry-Go-Round Bras which bring love to all women, and face the fact that the world may be on it's last legs, and that in order to save anything of the wonderfulness of the civilization which has developed in the past two thousand years, decency, honor and sacrifice must take the place in large measure of selfishness, nearsightedness and undue bias. Only through a better press can we have a better democracy, only through better men can we hope to survive this coming crisis which may be our last.

Pittsburgh, Pa. — (I.P.) — Major changes in the academic tenure of professors at the University of Pittsburgh, during the last decade, have erased the black cloud of censure imposed on the university administration in 1936 by the American Association of University Professors.

At a recent conference, the association voted unanimously to reinstate the university to the list of accredited universities. Dr. M. R. Gabbert, chairman of the university senate committee on academic freedom and tenure represented the university at the annual meeting, held in Boston.

The university was "blacklisted" in 1936 for violation of the "principles of academic freedom." At that time it was charged that the university was not offering the academic freedom set up in the standards of the AAUP. Upon its recommendation, changes were made in the school administration which resulted in lifting the 11-year ban.

New Orleans, La.—(I.P.)—A significant step in raising the general standards of graduate work in southern universities is now being taken, according to a report issued by Dean Roger P. McCutcheon of the Tulane university graduate school and retiring secretary-treasurer of the Conference of Deans of Southern Graduate Schools.

Dean McCutcheon pointed out that a recommendation of the Conference of Deans calling for a program of accreditation for master's degrees to be set up in accordance with recommended minimum standards has been tentatively approved in principle by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

The need for some accreditation of graduate schools has long been recognized, Dr. McCutcheon said, although he called the recent action the first definite move in this direction by any important educational agency.

For Fourth Loss:

Tar Heels Drop 7-6 Verdict To Rex Mills Gastonia Crew

Gastonia, April 12.—North Carolina's diamond Tar Heels ventured outside of collegiate opposition for the second straight day here this afternoon and the result was their fourth setback of the youthful season. Gastonia's Rex Mills squad was on the long end of the verdict, 7-6.

Yesterday the Chapel Hill crew was held hitless and went down before the Burlington Bees. Previous to that encounter, in college frays, Carolina had chalked up five triumphs against two defeats.

Four Run Rally

The Tar Heels on the strength of a four-man rally in the top frame of the ninth, had taken a 6-5 margin going into the final half for Gastonia. Two hits and an error, however, netted Rex Mills two tallies and the game.

Carolina scored their first two runs in the top of the seventh on singles by Hackney, Ryan and Andrews and a long fly to deep left by Varney. The four runs in the ninth came on singles by Hackney, Ryan, Kelly, and Black. The cause was aided by a base on balls and a bobble of Beason's grounder.

Rex Mills outhit the Chapel Hill team, 11-8, and the Tar Heels, playing poor defensively, were charged with five errors against two for Gastonia.

Hackney, Ryan Lead

Hackney and Ryan led hitting for Carolina, each being accredited with two safeties in four trips. Blair started on the mound for the Tar Heels but was relieved in the sixth by Andrews. The latter was given credit for the loss.

Carolina returns home Monday to meet Davidson in a Southern conference clash. Contests are scheduled Wednesday and Saturday with Duke and Wake Forest, both to be held on opposing fields. The University of Cincinnati invades Chapel Hill Thursday to round out the week's program.

Hamp Coleman, Tar Heel hurler who left school two weeks ago to join the professional ranks, has been optioned by the Louisville club in the American association to Roanoke in the Piedmont league, it was learned here yesterday.

For the Red Springs mound star, the change means a switch from a triple-A circuit to a class B loop. Coleman will join his new outfit at its training site at Bennettsville, S. C.

Coed Athletes Hold Play Day In Five Sports

Top Honors Gained By Woman's College

By Cathy Rankin

One hundred and thirty-four coeds from nine colleges in North Carolina ruled the local tennis courts and athletic fields here yesterday in the Carolina Olympic Play Day held under the sponsorship of the Women's Athletic association and the Women's Physical Education department.

Women's College from Greensboro rolled up a total of 45 points to cop top honors in the competition. The Carolina delegation, the host team, finished second with 15 tallies and Meredith college of Raleigh was third with five.

The Play Day got off to a fine start at 9:30 a.m. with welcomes from Dr. O. K. Cornwell, head of the University Physical Education department, Mrs. J. G. Beard, director of Women's Physical education and Jeanne Driscoll, president of the Women's Athletic association. Competition lasted until 3:30 p.m.

Scores of the different final-round events: Softball—Women's college 7, Meredith 1; Tennis singles—Carolina defeated Woman's college, 6-0; Tennis doubles—Carolina defeated Eastern Carolina Teachers' college, 7-5; Archery—Meredith first, Woman's college second, Duke third; Swimming—Woman's college first, Carolina second, High Point third; Track—Woman's college first, Carolina second.

Capturing top honors for Carolina were Judy Swain in the tennis singles and Joyce Fowler and Jane Morrison in the doubles.

Colleges participating in the affair in addition to the top three in scoring included Duke, St. Mary's, Guilford, Peace Junior college, High Point, and Eastern Carolina Teachers' college.

Third Week Ends:

Five Grid Teams Go Through Rough Scrimmage in Stadium

Five teams knocked heads in a rugged scrimmage in Kenan stadium yesterday as the North Carolina Tar Heels wound up their third week of spring drills.

Spectacular defensive play was feature of the scrimmages. Conspicuously absent from participation were the Tar Heels' outstanding offensive backs, Charlie Justice and Walt Pupa, and extra-point specialist Bob Cox. Pupa injured his leg earlier in the week while Justice and Cox are out for spring sports.

In the feature operation yesterday, the tentative second string "blue" squad scored against the first combination when tailback Bill Maceyko tossed a 17-yard pass to wingback B. K. Grow to end a 40-yard drive. Mike Rubish added the extra point. The first string's best offensive maneuver was a 50-yard pass from tailback Jack Fitch to end Dan Logue, but it failed to account for a score.

The first stringers went over on the third team, however, with a 61-yard march opened by a 17-yard pass from Fitch to Max Cooke. Hosea Rodgers' line plunging stood out until Fitch finally bucked it over. George Sparger, playing blocking back, added the point.

The second squad scored on the fourth string aggregation a little later with fullback Bob Kennedy, who did some of the best running of the day, going over from the three with Rubish converting. Kennedy scored again in a drive in which Purcell passed to Fred Bauer for 20 yards.

Coach Snavely had the teams split in this manner:

First teams: Cooke, Weiner, ends; Fowle, Mareyzk, tackles; Roberts, Mitten, guards; Bernot, Steigman, centers; Sparger, Rodgers, Fitch, and Camp, backs.

Second team: Powell, Logue, ends; Smith, Hazelwood, tackles; Spurlin, McLain, guards; McDonald, center; Wright, Kennedy, Grow, and Purcell, backs.

Third team: Rubish, Pritchard, ends; Cospito, Plunkett, tackles; Shay, Hendrick guards; Weant, center; Clements, Maceyko, Hartig, and Flamish, backs.

Fourth team: Stoiff, Bilpuch, ends; Rywak, Boss, tackles; Berry, Perry, guards; Baise, center; Brasington, Brannin, Sutherland, and Kosinski, backs.

Spring Squads Set to Travel

Out-of-Town Action Tops Week's Slate

Strikingly successful on the home front in the season's early engagements, North Carolina's spring sports teams journey to the playing fields of their opponents next week for most of their activity.

The Tar Heel diamond squad swings back into the Big Four circuit with contests scheduled at Duke Wednesday and at Wake Forest Saturday. Carolina enters these tilts with only one league play on record, an 8-2 victory over Duke. Activity opens Monday with Davidson here in a Southern conference setup. Also carded here Thursday is a clash with the touring University of Cincinnati.

Carolina's unbeaten racket team, adding five wins to its record during the past week, will entertain Duke Tuesday and travel to Annapolis for a match with Navy on Saturday. Yesterday's scheduled contest with Davidson was postponed.

The Tar Heel linksmen, led by Harvey Ward, Dick Doeschler, and Junie Bailey, journey south on a week's excursion in which they battle South Carolina and L.S.U. before competing in the Southern Intercollegiate tourney at Athens, Ga. The Gamecock match is scheduled for Tuesday with Carolina tackling L.S.U. on the following afternoon.

The track outfit, unscheduled during the entire week, will spend time preparing for the Penn Relays and Carolinas AAU championships the following week.

Simmons Cops Two Victories For Tar Heels

Seligman and Miller Take Two Wins Each

Grant Stadium, Atlanta, April 12.—North Carolina's trackmen opened their dual meet competition in fine fashion here this afternoon by scoring a mild upset over previously unbeaten Georgia Tech. The score, close throughout the affair, was 66½-64½.

The meet was not decided until the next-to-the-last event, the 220-yard low hurdles, in which a first place by Chunk Simmons and a third by Ted Shultz provided Carolina with a seven-point cushion with only the one-mile relay, worth five points to the winner, remaining. Simmons led the Tar Heels in their triumph, tallying 11 points with firsts in both hurdle events and a third in the high jump.

Two other Tar Heels turned in double wins to rank right behind Simmons in the Carolina scoring parade. Bob Seligman scored his double in the shot put and discus events while Jimmy Miller ran off with the one-mile race and later figured in a three-way tie in the two-mile event along with teammates Jack Milne and Sam Magill. Milne also finished second in the mile.

Other Tar Heels to score in more than one event included Jack Moody, who copped first in the high jump with a leap of six feet, four inches, and also captured second in the broad jump, and Shuler, who garnered a pair of thirds in the low hurdles and 100-yard dash.

Other Carolina firsts were registered by Norm McLeod in the pole vault and Don Nelson in the 440-yard run. Nelson also ran a fine anchor leg on the one-mile relay quartet that the Engineers won by one yard.

Doug Fowlkes was the meet's individual high scorer, gaining one first place and three seconds for a total of 14 points.

Taft Measure Is Toned Down By Committee

Rebelling Members Change Provisions

Washington, April 14. — (UP) — Rebelling members of the Senate Labor committee have toned down several more drastic provisions of Chairman Robert Taft's strike-control bill.

Using the same tactics of last Friday when they forced revisions in the Taft measure, several Republicans joined forces with the Democrats to rewrite provisions dealing with jurisdictional strikes and secondary boycotts.

Outlaw "Racketeering"

Taft would simply outlaw such practices as "racketeering" and empower U. S. district attorneys or private employers to obtain injunctions against them. But on an eight-to-five vote, the committee substituted a plan by Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon to make them "unfair practices" under the Wagner Labor act and to limit injunction procedures to the National Labor Relations board.

Lake Success, N. Y., April 14. — (UP) — Russian delegate Andrei Gromyko has charged that the so-called Vandenberg plan to give the U. N. a limited veto over American aid to Greece and Turkey merely displays American contempt for the United Nations. Gromyko told the Security council that the United States is trying to dictate how the U. N. must act.

Supervisor Says Present Filters of Plant Are Incapable of Processing Enough Water

By Ed Joyner

The possibility of a water shortage this summer has been forecast by J. S. Bennett, supervisor of operations for the University. Bennett said yesterday that the present filter plant, which has a capacity of two and one-half million gallons each 24 hours, is not capable of processing the volume of water required to meet the anticipated needs of the University, Chapel Hill, and Carrboro during the dry months.

"We have plenty of water, plenty of pipes and plenty of pumps," Bennett said, "but no filter to handle the anticipated need."

Need Wet Summer

He pointed out, however, that a wet summer will greatly alleviate the expected shortage. Even in the event of a dry season the shortage will be only inconvenient rather than serious, with such water-using activities as lawn watering and car washing having to be curtailed.

Sufficient water will be kept in the reservoir at all times to meet fire emergencies even if all water has to be turned off for an hour or so each day.

Draw Up New Plans

At the same time Bennett said that the University trustees building committee would this week appoint an engineer to survey the water needs here and draw up plans and specifications for a new $400,000 filter plant now provided for in the permanent improvements appropriation recently approved by the legislature.

Construction of the new filter plant will not start for at least two years under the provisions of the appropriations bill.

AVC Will Select Officers Tonight

Election of new officers will be the main item of business this evening when the Chapel Hill chapter of the American Veterans committee meets at 7:30 in the Presbyterian church.

"We would like to see a large turnout at tonight's meeting so that the men elected will be representative of the group as a whole. It is particularly urgent that underclassmen attend because the majority of our membership is on the verge of graduation," said Chairman Ben Rouzie.

Tryouts for Macbeth Will Be Staged Today

Tryouts for the Carolina Playmakers outdoor production of "Macbeth" will be held this afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Forest theatre. In case of rain tryouts will be moved to the Playmakers theatre.

John Parker, professor on the Playmakers staff who will direct the production of "Macbeth," announces the cast includes parts for 32 actors, including roles for two teen-age boys. He invites all who are interested to attend tryouts.

War Gassing Brings Fortune To Imitator 'Popeye' Welch

By Dave Owens

To many men who were put out of commission by being gassed in World War I, a life of misery has followed. But to Harry Foster Welch, the original and exclusive voice of Popeye the Sailor Man, coming to Graham Memorial's main lounge tomorrow night at 8 o'clock, it meant the launching of a new and strange career.

Welch was serving with the 29th Division at St. Mihiel when he was gassed. Evacuated to the American base hospital at Nevers, he made a rapid recovery. A strange thing happened, however. As his health returned he found that the gas had changed the shape of his wind pipe and created a most amazing sound organ.

Had Immense Range

Amusing himself by trying out his voice, Welch found he had an immense range. The more he practiced the more startled he became. He reached two octaves above C and four below, a range of six octaves.

Not only could Welch imitate all the people around him in the hospital, but he learned to make sounds like 19 musical instruments. It was inevitable that when Welch appeared at a police benefit several years ago in Madison Square Garden, Robert Ripley, who was among the 25,000 people to hear him, should dub him "The Man with a Thousand Voices."

JIM VOGLER

Vogler Nominated To Enter Campaign For Student Post

With spring elections not a month away, the Campus party, continuing activity along the political front, recently nominated Jim Vogler for secretary-treasurer of the student body.

A rising junior who hails from Charlotte, Vogler is a member of the University Veterans association, the Charlotte-Carolina club and is a pledge to the Delta Sigma Pi commerce fraternity. He was a member of the Army Air forces for 56 months.

When informed of his nomination Vogler stressed two points which he advocates regarding University student government. "I want to help make our government a student government in fact as well as in name, and I want to see a student government that is representative of the student body as a whole."

Completion of the Campus party roster of nominations is to be made tomorrow afternoon at 4:15 in the Graham Memorial Candlelight room. Also to be considered at that time is a statement of the party's platform, Johnny Jones, party chairman, announced.

Two Members Added To ASWA Program

Completing its arrangements for its forum on the "Truman Doctrine" the Association for the Study of World Affairs has added two more members, Manny Margolis and Bill Patterson, to the panel which will meet tomorrow at 8 o'clock in Gerrard hall.

Herb Bodman, moderator of the forum, stated that in addition to Margolis and Patterson, the following students have agreed to appear: Bill Miller, Jimmy Wallace, Ben Rouzie, and Blount Stewart.

Patterson, treasurer of the IRC and Margolis, DTH columnist on world affairs, have often opposed each other over the CPU roundtable, and in the columns of this paper.

UNITED WORLD FEDERALISTS

The Student Chapter of United World Federalists will meet tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock in Roland Parker No. 2, Graham Memorial. Margaret Healy will lead the study of the United Nations charter.

Legislature Meets Tonight In Brief Special Session

The Student Legislature will meet in special session this evening at 7:30 o'clock in Di hall with elections, past and future, as the main items of business.

Jabie Heyward, head of the Elections board, will deliver his report on the recent Freshman-Sophomore elections. Biggest flare-up is expected on the condition of the Freshman polling which saw Steve Nimocks named class president after many protests from the losing faction.

Tonight's report according to many legislators will bring to light much behind-the-scenes activity which is porported to have taken place.

The recodifying of the elections laws, as introduced by Johnny Clampitt last Thursday will again be brought on the floor. The bill, in effect, brings voting regulations up-to-date with regard to the constitution.

Last week the assembly passed the first sections of the proposal, and tonight's session, which Speaker Charlie Warren emphasized will be "a brief one," is hoped to clear the bill off the table.

State legislature outlawing the Communist party, this evening at 7 o'clock in Phi hall, fourth floor, New East. Both issues have been subject to bitter attack, the tenure bill being termed a repudiation of President Roosevelt after his death while the bill passed by the N. Race Incidents Arise After Bus Seating Arrests

Four Booked on Disorderly Conduct Counts After Negroes' Refusal to Move to Rear

By Bill Sexton

An attack upon an unidentified white man by white taxi drivers at noon yesterday marked continued racial tension following the refusal Sunday afternoon of two Negro bus passengers to reseat themselves in a Carolina Coach company bus in the Chapel Hill station.

Witnesses said the unidentified man had just finished conversing with a colored woman in the bus station and was about to board a bus for Durham when a group of taxi drivers accosted him. The drivers reportedly asked him what he was doing, and he replied that it was his concern only.

Fist Fight

A fist fight, with three drivers engaging the unidentified man, resulted. It was ended only when bus company officials pulled the man aboard the Durham-bound coach and signalled it away.

The affray yesterday apparently was only one indication of violent tempers which grew out of the Negro seating incident Sunday.

The two Negroes and two white companions, who identified themselves as representatives of the Brotherhood for Reconciliation, a national organization opposing racial discrimination, seated themselves together in the front section of a Greensboro-bound Carolina Coach company bus and refused to move when so ordered by the driver, Ned O. Leonard. They were arrested by Chapel Hill police on complaint of the driver and charged with disorderly conduct.

Names of Four

The four gave their names as Andrew S. Johnson of Cincinnati, and Bayard Rustin of New York City, both colored; and Igal Roodenko of New York City and Joseph A. Felmet of Asheville, both white. The latter said he was a graduate of the University.

The four arrested were accompanied by other members of the Fellowship for Reconciliation, who immediately put up bond for their companions. They were released pending trial set for April 29 in Chapel Hill Recorders court.

One member of the Reconciliation group who did not attempt to board the bus was struck by an unidentified person near the bus station while the release of the four arrested was being arranged. The reported assault was not reported to police by the group, Chief W. T. Sloan said, and no charges were made.

On release the group was driven by the Rev. Charles M. Jones of the Chapel Hill Presbyterian church to his home. Jones told police he was followed home by several cars.

Received Warning Call

Shortly after arriving, the minister said, he received a telephone call warning that there would be "trouble" if the Fellowship group did not leave town immediately.

On the advice of police officers, who were sent to Jones' home after the minister received the anonymous warning, Jones drove the Fellowship members to Greensboro.

The group's departure did not end the disturbance. Other warnings were reportedly telephaned to the minister's home. The assistant pastor of the Presbyterian church, Hilton Seals, was reported to have been the target of a group of stone throwers as he left Jones' home later Sunday evening.

Pan-Americana

Yesterday was Pan-American Day, a day dedicated to "Co-operation—Keynote of the Americas." Yesterday, we took another look at the Monroe Doctrine, the Pan-Amreican and Lima conferences, stepping stones to Pan-Americanism, to see if we had progressed on our way toward hemispheric solidarity since President Monroe made his famous announcement.

An original intention to keep foreign nations out of our back-yard has prompted us to adopt a paternal attitude toward our Latin-American neighbors. We have permitted our children to play when we wanted them to play and have until now disregarded their protestations of manhood. Soon, the straw will break the camel's back. Slowly, these countries are pulling out from under our covetous grasp.

In 1945, when the Act of Chapultepec came into being, binding the hemisphere nations to help each other out in case of aggression, when all nations clamored for "Conferencia en Rio" to negotiate and make permanent the peace-keeping features of Chapultepec, the U. S. proudly assumed the role of monitor: she could not sign until Argentina had complied with her demand to oust all fascists, she, too, wanted to realize Pan-American freedom, but . . .

Many charges have been made against the state department reprimanding its idealistic attitude. Mr. Braden, under-secretary in charge of Latin-American affairs, represents an ideology in direct opposition to many of our more realistic ambassadors such as George Messersmith, who have been able to get on the good side of our neighbors, have tried hard to understand them, thus meriting their confidence.

At present it may be said that we are losing ground. Constantly antagonizing by word or action we have failed to help let materialize a wholesome spirit of cooperation and are now taking the consequences. Due to un-businesslike practices we have cautioned our neighbors to think twice before dealing with us.

In search for different economic outlets for their products they have invited other nations to trade on very favorable terms or to invest in their home-industry. Several examples can be cited: Peru, owner of tremendous potential water power, has recently contracted Motor Columbus, a Swiss engineering firm, to build a new country wide power development; Argentine and Bolivian officials are in a hush over comprehensive trade and economic agreements which will include a customs union between the two countries similar to the Argentine-Chilean accord of not so long ago; Mexican Oil Company, a subsidiary of Gulf Oil Corporation, is the only U. S. company left in Mexico after Pemex, Mexican governmental oil monopoly, has bought out the four Cities' Service subsidiaries, while Brazil signed a six-year bilateral trade pact with Argentina, Chile, and Paraguay specifying that these three countries will buy definite amounts of cotton textiles which will close many markets to U. S. exporters. The inauguration of Chile's communistic President Valdera was a stab-in-the-back to the U. S. just as much as Peron's tight grip on the Argentine press.

So far the initial steps toward inter-American cooperation have been made mostly by Latin-Americans. The U. S. is the biggest, most industrialized and wealthiest nation in the hemisphere. Let us for once fall in with rank and file of our brother nations with active demonstration of sincere, willing cooperation. Let us join in deed with the spirit expressed by President Truman's statement made not so long ago in Mexico: mutual self-respect among nations, without distinction of size, wealth or power; inter-American cooperation based on respect for state sovereignities.

We have a task ahead. The first steps will be the hardest.—P.G.

I'd Rather Be Right

Future of UVA in Balance As Veterans Elect New Heads

By Earl Heffner

To the veterans on campus will go the honor of firing the first ballot broadside in the Spring elections when members of the University Veterans association run into a major policy election tonight at 7:30.

At first glance, the election would appear to be a mere change of guiding lights. Were this the case, there would be no reason for veterans to fear for the safety of their organization. But this isn't the case.

For there is a distinct undercurrent, a vicious swirl which belies the complacent waters observable to the casual eye.

And it is my prediction that if veterans fail to rally to the cause of their organization, they will be able to watch the UVA deteriorate into a leaky canoe of the social swim.

Tonight is a policy election. When the final votes are counted the University Veterans association either will continue in its present status or will be a social organization for tea dances and/or beer brawls. This latter I hope will remain a figure of speech.

Since last summer when the UVA was on verge of disbandment, the organization has surged from this brink of oblivion into a commanding position as one of the most active and honored organizations on campus.

The credit for this belongs to a few capable leaders and their lieutenants—Jim Chesnutt, Roy Moose, Hugh Wells, John Temple, et al.

Under the guidance of these men, the UVA has sponsored programs for Fourth of July and Armistice Day celebrations, has stimulated Student government at every opportunity, has fought for the rights of students, has co-sponsored the local drive for increased GI subsistence.

While promoting these admirable policies, the able leaders have found time to move into the new club house, to give open houses once each week.

Tonight they must throw the torch to another set of leaders. And, unfortunately, a block of veterans seem intent upon packing the meeting.

If they succeed, and only members of the organization may stop them, the University Veterans association will unhitch itself from the ascending star, will ride an inglorious chute-the-chute to campus oblivion.

And the veteran who fails to attend the meeting to exercise his duty, right, and privilege of voting will deserve the loss of his most unselfish and most powerful champion.

The question is clear. Shall there be a University Veterans association serving all needs, including the social, or shall there be a University Veterans Social Calendar?

Boys Will Be Boys....

Restriction of Fraternity Initiations Is Ban Against Clean, Harmless Fun

By Eddie Allen

Boys, so it seems, can no longer be boys. At least that's the tone of a directive of the Interfraternity Council, which has decreed, with obvious outside impetus, that all "public forms" of fraternity initiation be henceforth kept from the sensitive eyes of other students, faculty members and townspeople.

Feeling, or being asked to feel, that good clean fun has been carried too far, the council has thus ordered all pledgeship pranks to be kept in the frats' own backyard—that is, if said backyard has a high enough fence to safeguard the visual virginity of outsiders.

If the move is a temporary measure, in punishment of what the IFC calls "stunts of questionable taste" of recent orientation weeks, it may be in a sense justified. If, on the other hand, it is a semi-permanent ruling issued at the horrified behest of some single indignant housemother, then the IFC might well ask itself whether fraternities are organized for student enjoyment or for the spiritual uplift of others not concerned.

"As part of the 'reaction' (writer's quotes), the Faculty Committee of Fraternities," says Council Prexy Whit Osgood in his ultimatum, "will meet with this group on Monday, April 14." At press time yesterday, the faculty's ideas on the subject had not been aired, but it is hard to see how even they could be humorless enough to take offense at harmless activities of the campus' male social organizations.

Fraternities at UNC in recent years, to say the least and most, have been only tolerated. They have been treated in most cases as a necessary evil which existed publicly only because they would exist anyway sub rosa. Opponents of the so-called "caste system," on which basis some believe fraternities are founded, have been vehement in their denunciation, not only here but nationally. At some schools their bitterness has borne fruit; Greek Letter groups have been outlawed. It would be most unfortunate if such should become the case here.

I do not suppose that the IFC ruling in question is in any way even a minor step towards dispensing with fraternities. Yet I do believe that the IFC is becoming too excited, with the aforementioned aid of six others, over a situation which like the art of Picasso, is not as bad as some paint it.

Probably the immediate stunt which caused the clampdown was a frat which sent pajama-clad pledges into women's dorms, ostensibly to spend the night on parlor sofas. Reportedly all housemothers, save one, took the matter as the joke that it was, and ejected the willing rats with one frown, one inner smile and one ounce of understanding.

However outrageous it might have appeared to complaintants in question, this incident, and others harmlessly like it, can scarcely be called valid grounds for such a stern order as the IFC's.

So long as the whims and possibly silly yet traditional practices of fraternity initiations do not actually interfere with outsiders, why take seriously something which is lightly conceived and is usually un-noticed part of every college town?

Boys WILL be boys. Let them, as long as their pranks do not excede the moderate limits of the past.

TRUMAN'S ECONOMIC COUNCIL WARNS OF DEPRESSION UNLESS PRICES DROP; CABINET GETS BLUNT WARNING UNLESS PRICES AND PROFITS DROP; SECRETARY SNYDER DEFENDS STEEL INDUSTRY

Washington.—Those who sat in on President Truman's highly secret meeting with the Cabinet and the Council of Economic Advisers considered it one of the most important sessions in the history of the Truman Administration or of any administration, for that matter. Never before had a President and his Cabinet come together with the nation's outstanding economists to chart the economic future of the country before, not after, trouble starts.

Inside fact is that the 3-man Council of Economic Advisers gave the Cabinet a gloomy report on the economic outlook of the nation.

The President had invited the Council to familiarize his Cabinet members with the national price crisis, and they pulled no punches.

Dr. Edwin G. Nourse, Chairman of the Council, did most of the talking.

"If something isn't done and done soon, we're riding for a fall," he declared bluntly. However, he didn't limit himself to the dangerous price situation, but gave a stethoscopic analysis of the nation's entire economic health.

Here are the high points of what he told the all-important closed Cabinet meeting:

DR. NOURSE'S WARNING

1. Prices have increased about 70 per cent on all commodities since last July 1. Foodstuffs have gone up about 80 per cent, raw materials about 55 per cent on an average.

2. In some fields, wholesalers and retailers are pricing themselves out of the market. The demand for certain goods—clothing, women's apparel and shoes—has dropped to the danger point. Even in lines recently scarce, such as radios, refrigerators and higher-priced automobiles, Nourse reported, demand is going way down.

3. While prices have increased, consumers' wages have dropped. This disturbed Nourse greatly. Secretary of the Interior Krug and Secretary of Commerce Harriman backed him up regarding this.

The figures used by Nourse for his conclusions show that wages dropped about five and one-half billion dollars between the first quarter of 1945 and the last quarter of 1946.

However, while wages dropped in 1945, profits soared. During 1945 net corporate profits were nine billion dollars. In 1946, with wages dropping, profits climbed to 12 billion. However, that was only part of the story. During the last quarter of 1946, profits were mounting at the rate of $14,900,000,000 for the year, and during the first quarter of this year they increased at an even higher rate.

During this same period wages were tumbling from a 1945 high of 111 billion to 106 billion in 1946—and still going down in 1947. That was why Mr. Truman made his statement the day after the Cabinet meeting that if prices don't come down, wages must go up.

INDUSTRY ENDED OPA

4. Nourse pointed out that industry had asked for a chance to make free enterprise work without price controls, and that with OPA gone, prices would find their natural level. This level, Dr. Nourse said, was a new high in history and hardly natural.

Someone raised the point that businessmen were worried about getting together to cut prices for fear of anti-trust prosecution, which caused Attorney General Tom Clark to report that he was looking around for means of avoiding this danger.

"I don't think the Justice Department would prosecute any groups that got together to help the public," Clark said.

Perhaps the most important part of Nourse's candid Cabinet talk was about the future of American economy. Nourse reported that he did not consider a recession necessary, though it was becoming more and more likely because of high prices.

The country has reached a point, he said, where its productive capacity is so great that the nation can have almost any kind of prosperity it wants. He explained, however, that if we are to have continued full employment, industry must raise its sights, plow profits back into expansion and continuously strive to produce abundantly at low prices for the widest possible consumption.

Nourse cited steel as one industry which would have to expand if we were to keep prosperous and if the national income were to pass the 200-billion-dollar mark. With steel the big bottleneck in industrial expansion, Nourse contended, it is up to the steelmakers first to bring prices into line, then expand their production.

STEEL MUST EXPAND

Secretary of the Treasury Snyder took issue with this and set off a flurry of Cabinet debate.

"It isn't fair to ask the steel industry to expand at this time," Snyder argued. "If they do, their profits will be wiped out by glutted markets in the future. We haven't had much steel for civilian purposes for five years so naturally everybody is demanding a lot."

Snyder added that demand for steel exports from the United States by countries whose industry was crippled during the war would not continue. It was not fair, therefore, he contended, to ask American steel companies to build up their plants and have them idle later.

Both Secretary of Commerce Harriman and Secretary of the Interior Krug disagreed.

"This modern world cannot compromise with the past," Harriman commented tartly. "It is foolish to talk about what we produced in former years. But it is very important to consider what we can produce now, especially in the light of how that production will serve to equalize prices and purchasing power.

"We have an economy wherein about 58 million people are employed with higher standards of living than anywhere else in the world. However this can lead to disaster if we do not have more equality between buying power and goods produced. We can't have production outrunning buying power, and in my opinion industry must face the fact that prices will have to come down."

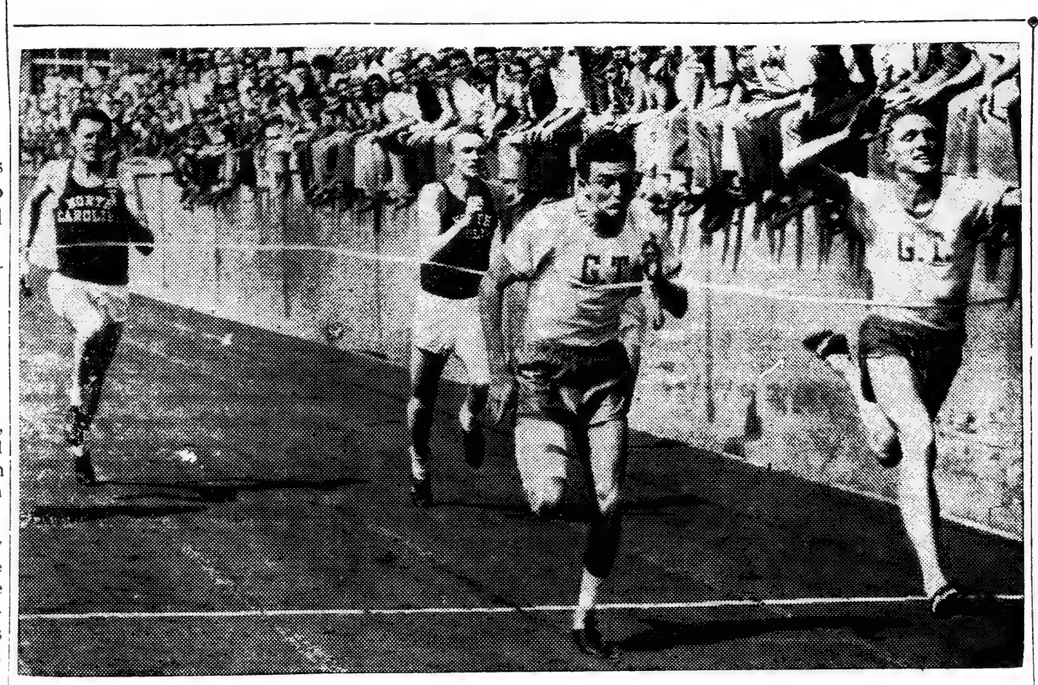
Rain Cancels Davidson Encounter; Tar Heels Battle Duke Tomorrow

Another game, the third thus far, was washed off the Carolina baseball slate yesterday when the Southern conference clash against Davidson was rained out.

Although the encounter is officially listed as postponed, little chance exists that it will be rearranged due to schedule conflicts and travel difficulties. The Davidson team meets N. C. State in Raleigh this afternoon before returning home.

The rain gave the infielders and outfielders an added day of rest while the batterymen went through indoor session in the Tin Can. Three games, including the second battle of the season with Duke, still remain on the week's card and Coach Walter Rabb is anxious to have his hurlers in top condition.



The present mound plans call for Monk Whiteheart to twirl tomorrow's tilt with the Blue Devils, Tommy Andrews to work the Cincinnati tussle on Thursday, and Vinnie DiLorenzo to oppose Wake Forest Saturday. Whiteheart already holds a triumph over Duke and will be seeking his fourth success of the year.

Yesterday was also the occasion for a slice in the Tar Heel roster, with the squad being cut to 23 players. The outfit now consists of seven pitchers, two catchers, eight infielders and six outfielders.

In cutting the team, Coaches Rabb and Henry House placed special emphasis on hitting ability, the most acute weakness of the team so far.

Carolina Netmen Meet Duke Here Today

Tennis Crew Seeks Ninth Win in Row

By Billy Carmichael

Carolina's undefeated netmen will probably receive as much competition from old man weather this afternoon as they will from the Blue Devils of Duke when the locals attempt to take the courts against the Durhamites at 3 o'clock on the Carolina flats.

Come what may, Coach John Kenfield is not taking the match lightly. "Duke is always tough," the genial mentor warned his charges yesterday in preparing them for their first meeting of the season with the Dukesters.

Vaunted Vic Seixas will be in the top singles berth for the Tar Heels, with clowning Clark Taylor at No. 2, Jimmy Nicholson at No. 3, Charlie Rice at the No. 4 slot, Stan Gruner at No. 5, and Ray Morris at the No. 6 spot.

In the doubles, Taylor and Seixas will probably be teamed at No. 1, Jack Kenfield and Morris at No. 2, and Nicholson and Don Skakle at No. 3. Other locals who may see action are Sam Daniels, Duke Wilder, Dick Swigart and Heath Alexander.

The locals will be seeking their ninth win of the current season and their second triumph in Southern conference play. They are at present sporting two wins each over Yale and Cornell and single victories over Colgate, Kalamazoo, Michigan and Haverford.

The Blue Devils have been a hot-and-cold team all season, and can give the Kenfield crew trouble if they are at their best for the match.

On To Navy...

Tech Topped, Trackmen Turn Efforts Toward Middie Duel

By Morty Schaap

The track team returned from its victory over Georgia Tech at Atlanta last Saturday and immediately settled down to work for probably the toughest meet of the season with Navy at Annapolis this weekend.

Carolina came out of the Tech meet in good physical condition, and with a week of hard work they are given a good chance to take Navy's vaunted Middies into camp.

The winning point in the Jacket meet was scored by Ted Shultz in the 220-yard low hurdles. Due to the fact that only four flights of hurdles were available, four men ran in the first heat with first and second place being decided. The second heat put the third man from each school into competition for the all-important third place point and Shultz emerged victorious by about a yard . . . Chunk Simmons participated in five events and took first places in the hurdles, a third in the high jump and was unplaced in the javelin and shot put . . . the Atlanta papers billed Simmons after the meet as a definite Olympic prospect . . . The distance boys turned in the saving points by countering the Tech sweeps in the dashes by taking 17 out of 18 points in the mile and two mile . . . Bob Seligman made a fine showing in returning to his old haunts by capturing the shot put and discus firsts .

Linksmen Leave For Tournament

Loaded down with their links paraphernalia and a string of four straight wins, Carolina's high-riding golfers set sails southward yesterday afternoon in the direction of Athens, Ga., and the Southern intercollegiate golf tournament.

Coach Chuck Erickson took a full squad of six along together with an extra for good measure as the locals started out on their toughest test of the season. For prior to the big tourney, the Tar Heels will face the reigning Southern champions, LSU, Wednesday afternoon in what will constitute somewhat of a warmup test over the University of Georgia layout.

Making the trip is "the flying foursome," composed of Harvey "the Wonder" Ward, Dick Doeschler, Junie Bailey, and Ray Taylor, to be ably supported by mighty Mike Nolan, Bob Cox, and a newcomer to the ranks, Mason Rankin.

Monogram Club Holds Big Meeting Tonight

There will be an important meeting of the Monogram club this evening at 7:30 o'clock at the clubhouse, President Jim Camp announced yesterday.

Plans for the spring football game will be made and voting on the coaches' trophies will take place. All members are urged to attend.

RACE

Members of the group said the incident was merely to establish a case to test the legality of the bus company's seating of passengers. They said they were on a tour of the entire upper South with the single purpose of setting up similar cases.

Bus company officials declared that the same group had been stopped in Durham Friday in exactly the same circumstances, but that no charges had been filed. They said the same situation had taken place in other Virginia and North Carolina localities.

M. W. Durham, clerk of the Chapel Hill court, said there was a possibility that the trial of the four might be postponed for several weeks at the request of the defendants. But he added that no definite action had been taken as of late yesterday afternoon.

Disputed Election Battle Postponed by Legislature

Speaker Warren Says Group Will Discuss Freshman-Sophomore Elections Tomorrow

By Bookie Jabine

Action on the disputed freshman-Sophomore elections failed to materialize last night as the special session of the Student Legislature was canceled due to lack of a quorum.

Speaker Charlie Warren stated that the underclass polling problem would be placed on the agenda for tomorrow evening's meeting. But, the chairman explained, "I will urge that debate on this issue be limited to a half-hour, since the Legislature has so much business on the table."

Election Committee

Johnny Clampitt's Election committee met late yesterday afternoon to discuss the problem, but so far no statement has been issued by the group.

The trouble evolved after Steve Nimocks was declared president of the Freshman class by the Elections board over the protest of the losing factions and other interested parties.

Will Be Settled

It is believed by Speaker Warren, however, that "the whole thing will be settled tomorrow."

Also facing the assembly at tomorrow evening's Gerrard hall meeting, the last regular one of the current session, are three constitutional amendments, a bill to re-precinct the town district, and the remainder of the budget, including the $70,000 pubilcations section.

Publications Meet

The Finance committee will meet tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock to discuss publications. Expected to testify at the meeting is Bob Morrison, chairman of the Publications board.

NEWS BRIEFS

Officials Fail In Plan to End AT&T Strike

Both Sides Reject Government's Plan

Washington, April 15—(UP)—An all-out effort by the government to settle the nine-day-old national telephone strike has failed. Both sides tonight rejected the government formula to settle the walkout by arbitration.

However, the company and the union qualified their rejections. The American Telephone and Telegraph company recommended 13 revisions that would make the government formula acceptable while the National Federation of Telephone Workers listed five more proposed changes. The 2 main objections to the formula (with the union pro and the company con) is arbitration on a regional basis.

Schwellenbach Broadcast

The replies to the government formula for ending the telephone dispute obviously angered Labor Secretary Schwellenbach. He immediately called a news conference to announce the failure of his peace efforts. Said the secretary, "Neither of the parties to the dispute has shown any recognition of the public responsibility they have." Schwellenbach said he would elaborate on the situation when he goes on the air over two national networks tonight.

Marshall Tells Stalin Case Against Russia

Moscow, April 15—(UP)—Secretary of State Marshall has taken his case against Russia straight to Premier Stalin. The American statesman arrived at the Kremlin tonight, for his first audience with the Russian leader. There was no advance warning of the Kremlin conference that came after Marshall had blamed the Soviet Union for primary responsibility of the Moscow conference to reach any agreements.

Truman Tries to Ban Shipment to Enemies

Washington, April 15—(UP)—President Truman has asked Congress for drastic new powers to ban shipments of war materials to any nation which may later upset the peace or attack the United States. In a long message to Congress, Mr. Truman calls for sweeping changes in the neutrality law.

Wallace Gets Criticism For European Comment

Washington, April 15—(UP)—There has been diverse criticism of Henry Wallaces' comments in his European tour. Senate Democratic leaders discussed a proposed resolution which would hold the former vice-president guilty of misconduct for his attacks against President Truman's Greek-Turkish aid program. Attorney General Tom Clark by direct implication in a speech delivered in Philadelphia tonight accused Wallace of lying and with having an utter lack of understanding and appreciation of the American way of life.

The meeting followed the anniversary party-dance held last night honoring members of the Party and the candidates the Party will support in the coming election.

Garden Club Members Will Tour Chapel Hill

Several hundred State-wide members of the Garden club will come to Chapel Hill tomorrow in the form of a Garden Pilgrimage, to go on conducted tours through the beautiful spots of the city, announced Mrs. R. W. Bost, president of the Chapel Hill Garden club.

An appeal by the Garden club is being made to John H. Hinson, town manager; to Alfred Pickard, in charge of University grounds, and to all students, to cooperate in the clean-up campaign. The students are urged to keep paper and other trash off the campus and streets of Chapel Hill.

UVA Will Entertain Spencer Dorm Coeds

The University Veterans association will entertain the residents of Spencer dormitory at a weekly open house beginning at 8:30 this evening at the clubhouse.

Feature of the floor show will be the Gordon twins with selections on the harmonica accompanied by the guitar of Jim Peace. Plans also call for a best-dressed contest sponsored by the Phillip Morris company and a carton of cigarettes will be given the winning veteran and coed.

All veterans are invited to attend the affair. The association's escort committee will meet at the clubhouse at 7:30.

YMCA Elects Charles Foley; Wells Elected UVA President

Perdue, Hamilton Gibbs also Chosen

Charles T. Foley, rising sophomore, was elected president of the YMCA to succeed Don Broad at a meeting of the entire membership Monday evening. Other officers are Robert W. Perdue, vice-president; Edward H. Hamilton, freshman secretary; and Richard Franklin Gibbs, secretary-treasurer.

Fred Weaver, dean of men, spoke on the significance of the Y's activities at Carolina, and Don Broad presented a survey of the group's program during the past year.

The Advisory board for the next year, also elected at Monday's meeting, consists of the Rev. Charles Jones, Prof. Warren Ashby, Mr. Bill Plemmons, and Mrs. Agatha Adams.

James Dean Chosen New Vice-President

In one of the largest attended and hotly contested elections of the year Hugh Wells was chosen president of the University Veterans association last night at the UVA club house. A rising junior who served 38 months in the armed forces, Wells has been very active in the association in the past, serving as secretary one term and as treasurer one term.

James A. Dean, rising senior from Oxford, was elected to the post of vice-president. Dean is a former air force member who has been serving as head of the club house board of governors in the past term.

By acclamation, Patricia Connelly was selected to succeed herself as

'Popeye' Welch to Appear In Memorial Hall Tonight

So great is the interest in Harry "Popeye" Welch, "the man with a thousand voices" being presented tonight by Graham Memorial, that director Martha Rice announced today that the performance would be switched to Memorial hall this evening at 8 o'clock. "The main lounge of the student union just wouldn't hold the people," she said.

When Welch turns loose his many voices tonight, one of the main attractions will be his unusual rendition of the opera "Carmen." Besides recreating the music of the entire orchestra with his amazing sound organ, Welch will sing the parts of Swarthout, Martinelli, Tibbett and even the famous bulls.

Welch has given command performances for King George V of England and his Queen in Buckingham Palace and for King Gustav of Sweden. He has appeared on programs with many celebrities and to mention Bugs Baer, Mark Hellinger, Chic Young, Dorothy Kilgallen, Robert Ripley, Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney would be naming only a few.

Impossible, You Say?

It couldn't happen here in Chapel Hill.

But it did.

An unbelievable, but true, story of a series of race incidents has given the town of Chapel Hill a temporary Columbian-colored hue.

Assault, threats, rock-throwing, mysterious phone calls and cruising taxi-cabs have played major roles in weaving this pattern of hatred and prejudice that has dimmed the light and liberty for which this University town stands.

A University student, a disabled veteran, was attacked by three taxi drivers Monday noon. He had committed no crime—unless he be condemned for talking to a colored woman prior to boarding a bus for Durham. Yet these sons of freedom and democracy attacked him.

And this attack was but one of a series of incidents resulting from the Negro seating incident of Sunday reported in this paper yesterday. A group of Negroes and white men, identified as representatives of the Brotherhood for Reconciliation, a national organization opposing racial discrimination, seated themselves together in the front of a Greensboro-bound coach. Upon their refusal to move at the driver's request, police arrested them on charges of disorderly conduct.

They paid bond and were driven by Rev. Charles M. Jones of the Presbyterian church to his home. Jones reported that several cars followed him home.

Then, repeated phone calls warned the minister there would be "trouble" if the group did not leave his home. As a result, the minister drove the group to Greensboro.

But the Klan-like activities did not cease. Jones received additional phone calls Monday. Thinly veiled threats were made against him, his wife, his home. But no further violence occurred.

Shameful and disgraceful are mild words to describe the above-mentioned pages from the never-ending story of racial discrimination. Regardless of whether or not the actions of the Brotherhood group were well-timed and executed, no excuse can be given for the group of proud "white men" who formed their own committee of vigilantes to attack a disabled veteran, to threaten one of the University's leading citizens and best-liked minister. The group responsible for such actions—for the prevention and destruction of which we recently fought a war—can only be looked at in the same cruel, wildly-emotional light as their spiritual brothers—the Columbians.

In Georgia, yes. In South Carolina, sure. But in Chapel Hill—widely-known as a stronghold of liberalism—impossible! Impossible, you say. We thought so, too. Yet out of the impossible movements of the world have come some of our most chaotic threats to the future of civilization.

Probably only a few are responsible for these atrocities on Americanism. But originally, the Ku Klux Klan was but a mere handful of wild-eyed maniacs.

All of which makes one wonder. In what direction are we going?

Martin Walker Files Assault Charges Against Local Cab Driver Assailant

The "unidentified" white man who was attacked Monday by a group of taxi drivers has identified himself to police, and Chapel Hill officers are now completing an investigation of the incident to establish the identity of the assailants.

Martin A. Walker, a disabled war veteran struck by three cab drivers after he had been seen conversing with a colored woman in the local Trailways station, filed charges yesterday against one driver who admitted striking the first blow in the brief incident. Warrants for arrest will be issued, Chief of Police W. T. Sloan said, when the identity of the other participants is established.

Walker Attack

The attack on Walker Monday afternoon was the latest in a series of disorders following the refusal Sunday afternoon of three young negro men to reseat themselves on a Carolina Trailways bus when ordered to do so by Driver Ned H. Leonard.

Walker told police he had stopped for a moment Monday to "kid" a negro waitress who more than a year ago accidently spilled coffee on his coat. When he refused to explain the momentary conversation to a group of taxi drivers who accosted him as he was about to board a bus, the brief battle ensued.

Disabled In War

Walker, a former resident of High Point, now resides in Carrboro and is a student at the University. Nine years ago, he said, he was Golden Gloves champion of High Point and later was disabled during wartime military service.

As a result of a reported incident of stones being thrown at the Presbyterian manse, the Board of Elders of the Presbyterian church met unofficially Monday night. The rock-throwing occurred after the Rev. Charles M. Jones drove the three Negroes involved in the reseating episode Sunday afternoon out of town at the request of the Police department.

Derby Planned For Saturday

Sororities, CICA Set to Participate

Girls, games, and fun galore will feature the annual Sigma Chi derby to be held on Fetzer field this Saturday afternoon, starting at 2 o'clock.

Coed entrants from the five campus sororities and the CICA will participate in seven different competitive events. Coed interest is running high and a big afternoon of stiff competition in the many humorous events is expected, according to Jack Thompson, chairman of the Derby committee. No admission price will be charged.

Pick "Modern Venus"

A "Miss Modern Venus" bathing beauty contest will be the big event of the afternoon. The informal funfest will precede the Sigma Chi "Sweetheart Ball" in Woollen gymnasium at 9 o'clock.

Also on the afternoon racing card are an egg and spoon relay, a pie-eating contest, a potato sack race, a domestic handicap and the Sigma Chi claiming (two events about which little has been revealed except that they are highly comical) and a series of five-minute humorous skits presented by each sorority in competition for first place honors.

Wear Different Colors

Fetzer field will be set up for the event and a colorful afternoon is planned. Coeds representing different groups will all wear different colors and be quartered in separate sectors of the field.

ASWA Stages Forum Tonight To Argue 'Truman Doctrine'

The Association for the Study of World Affairs will open its program of disseminating information on world problems with a forum on the controversial "Truman Doctrine" this evening at 8 o'clock in Gerrard hall.

With its emphasis on impartial presentation of all sides of the problem, the ASWA has arranged a panel of speakers with widely differing opinions of the present American foreign policy. Speaking generally in favor of the policy outlined by President Truman will be Bill Miller, candidate for the presidency of the student body, and Bill Patterson, treasurer of the IRC.

Opposing the opinions of these men will be Manny Margolis, active member of the CPU and of the IRC. Ben Rouzie, chairman of the AVC chapter of Chapel Hill; and Blount Stewart, former chairman of the Southern Council of Human Welfare.

It was stressed, however, by Herb Bodman, moderator of the forum, that the speakers will be voicing their own opinions, and that there were no strict teams on the forum, but that each member of the panel would speak for himself.

Prior to the forum, Orrin Magill, Chairman of the ASWA, will give a short talk on the objectives of the organization this quarter.

There will be an opportunity after the forum for members of the audience to ask questions of the members of the panel.

Oddly Clad Grail Initiates Amuse 'Y' Court Gathering

By Pat Kelly

Have you met Rip Van Winkle in the Y Court recently? Or Miss America of 1903? Or Senator Claghorn?

These illustrious personages plus nine "beautifully" costumed characters all gathered in front of the YMCA, yesterday to entertain the students there and to announce to all concerned that they were being inducted into the Order of the Holy Grail, student honorary organization.

First to arrive on the scene astride a gallant (slightly moth-eaten) steed was the Town Crier, Bill Miller, clothed only in newspapers and magazines. Lustily wielding a Halloween noisemaker, the big, flame-thatched Miller spread abroad the news of the Grail initiation and called his colleagues to the court.

Chief Kirkland

Responding to the call was Indian Chief Bob "Party Blanket" Kirkland, shielding his dignity behind his famous blanket and one feather. Then came white-togaed Julius Casar, alias Len Szafaryn, leading his peerless charger, Slue Foot.

Clean for Spring

Those many students objecting to the way in which construction of temporary buildings is marring the beauty of the campus are among the many who realize and appreciate the great natural beauty that exists here.

But, while the construction is for a good purpose and will continue despite protests from many, another menace to a clean, pretty campus exists. And this other menace can be combatted and eliminated.

It consists of the ever-present empty cups and old papers strewn about the campus. Particularly at this time of the year, when the scenic beauty of our campus is beginning to blossom forth in its prettiest dress, it is disheartening and distracting to notice the campus constantly littered with trash.

The time has come to start a campus clean-up campaign. The hardest workers in this campaign must be the individual students. They should make special efforts to deposit their empty cups and used papers in receptacles. It is a fact that our campus has become less clean in recent months. Warm weather naturally brings out more people and these students congregate and loaf on the campus. They tend to discard various bits of junk on the spot, and these papers blow all over the campus.

Then, too, we must not overlook the ever-present spring infection that prompts students to walk on the green grass. An annual "Keep off the Grass" campaign has always been necessary to keep students from walking on the grass. One of the simplest and prettiest attributes of a beautiful campus is that it be covered by green gress. Carolina has the grass, and it looks good if allowed to grow.

Therefore, it is not asking too much to ask a student to refrain from walking on the grass. By staying on the walks and letting the grass grow, each student can contribute towards making the campus a prettier place.

A few seconds of thought and consideration for the cleanliness and appeal of our campus will help keep it clean and attractive. A clean campus will add much to its natural beauty. Let's clean it up.

On Losing Refuse

While we're on the subject of a campus clean-up campaign, we would like to suggest also that the University set up additional receptacles on the campus. At present, receptacles are few and far between, and students tend to throw refuse away rather than carry it with them.

We feel that the University could place several receptacles about the grounds and build brick or cement containers in which to place them so that they will not look like eyesores. Then the receptacles could be removed and emptied daily, students would have a place to throw empty cups without casting them on the ground, and a step towards a cleaner campus would be a reality. No great expense would be involved in building the permanent containers at various points and the receptacles could be obtained eaisly.

It would be a simple move of lasting value.

Eyes of Texas

It is with a deprecating, albeit crimson blush of modesty that the DTH takes this space for a little early-morning crowing. The reason, thank you, is a full-length editorial in the Daily Texan, our brother publication at the University of Texas, in praise of the DTH's April Fool issue of The Daily Comrade. The Texan singles out what it terms our "well-red" effect as the best of a flood of April capers by collegiate organs of the nation. Which proves to our satisfaction at least that the "red" in question is spelled two ways.

Psychiatry Going to Dogs Growl of Victimized Dan

By Jud Kinberg

— "Slam the door, pal. Slam the door, she's after me."

It was Dan the Dog, slightly the worse for wear and tearing around, who had whipped into my office, upsetting a beer bottle which I place on the floor convenient to my right-no-type hand. He was shaking from his blue beret to the tan-and-white Edmund Clapp shoes, truly a frightened figure nothing like his usual dapper Runyonesque self.

"Dan, I haven't seen you like this since your candidate lost the Carrboro election for dogcatcher. Pull yourself together, man. The sniff upper snout and all that sort of rot."

"Can it, columnist. There is some mad female bow-wow medic sniffing out my trail at this very time. That Jane is war for my brain."

"Come now, Dan," I scoffed, "you make her sound like a dog psychologist."

"You name it exactly, friend. This jane, as you would hear me say was you not six bottles under, is hot for my head. A few weeks ago I am perusing a copy of a magazine digest—the kind where they compress a four page article into eight pages for easy reading—when what should I see but "Dogs Open Their Minds to Mrs. McKell—Doctor to Mentally Sick Dogs.

"Now this seems like a juicy racket to me, on account I have a friend in New York who is recently turned psychologist and currently makes more dough than when he is tail machine gunner for Capone."

"That explains why you haven't been up to write your columns these past weeks, eh?"

"Exactly. I am making my way to the Doc's house some states distant in order to case the joint for a possible muscle-in. The first thing after I enter, I'm surrounded by—excuse the expression—dogs."

"Mrs. McKell's patients?"

"It ain't the fire-plug convention. One joker comes up and starts to sell me the black and red spots on the wall. Another one is making the red spots, knocking his head against the plaster because he feels so good when he stops.

"I'm out there for about two minutes when a tall one in white grabs me with a half nelson and ushers me before a middle-aged humpty-dumpty dame. Before I can even bark, I'm in a chair with a spotlight. It's like the old days with the New York bulls. I try to explain my position, but they are certain that they have hold of a maniac depressive—it's really just the cigars I am smoking."

"How did you get away, Dan?"

"It is a long story revolving about one guard with an itchy palm—I scratch it for him with my claws and I'm sprung. But now there is a four-state alarm out for me and just this hour I see this jane hotfooting up the main street. That's why I come to you, pal."

I was about to stuff Dan into an unobtrusive empty beer bottle when a middle-aged spinster opened the door, looked about the place with a well-gimleted. eye

"It's her, pal. I'm sunk. Your old pal is being railroaded to the booby hatch on a bum rap."

The Dog Freud doesn't even look at Dan. She points to me and says, "That's the hotair dale I'm looking for."

So Dan will be taking the column for the next few weeks until I can get off the leash and away from the woman who "Dogs Open Their Minds To." Ruff, ruff. Just call me Redheart.

Today's Question

What do you think the chances are of the United Nations being able to achieve a lasting peace and, if so able, by what means?

Answers

Unless the member nations place the welfare of the world's peoples above national interests the United Nations cannot achieve any of the goals for which it was organized.—Thano Cotsis, Chapel Hill.

At present the UN does not have power to carry out its decisions. Unless this power is obtained the UN will fail as did the League of Nations, and no peace came from the League.—Gene Layman Jr., Charlotte.

I believe a lasting peace is achievable provided the present policy of international suspicion and distrust is replaced by a spirit of cooperation and understanding on the part of the countries of the world.—Vic Seixas, Phila., Pa.

The United Nations can bring to the world the same peace that our United States brought to us, by the support of all the major nations, if not by all the nations of the world.—Earl Fitzgerald, Pelham.

Under the present circumstances the possibility of achieving a lasting peace is nil. It appears that none of the groups, especially the Russians, are willing to get together on major issues.—Miles Smith, Salisbury.

Success by the United Nations can only be achieved by full cooperation and understanding of all those involved. Until this status is reached and the underlying antagonisms of the leaders disolved success of the organization is impossible.—Mary Louise Hasty, High Point.

Council Advances Reasons For Initiation Clampdown

In order to clear up any questions which Mr. Eddie Allen or any other students may have concerning the recent action taken by the Interfraternity Council whereby it banned all public forms of initiation, I would like to make the following statement.

This action was not the result of any one incident during the past few weeks of initiations, but the outgrowth of several. The matter has been in the consideration of the Men's Council for some time now, and action was taken by the Interfraternity Council at the former's request since it was primarily a fraternity affair. A brief resume of the events bringing this on will, I believe, cause all doubts to be removed from any thoughtful University of North Carolina student—fraternity member or not.

Several weeks ago a fraternity required some of its pledges to obtain a varied assortment of things on a "treasure hunt," among which were some articles that could be found only at the infirmary and medical school. Instead of seeking the proper authorities who, as has been demonstrated in the past, would be only too willing to cooperate, the students took matters into their own hands and broke into both of the buildings, taking an exposed X-ray plate and several animals used for experimental purposes If those students had been shot entering or leaving the infirmary, no one could have been held responsible—entering a building in which there are sleeping occupants is a capital offense in this state. Only the fraternity which gave the instructions would have its conscience to bother it.

As for the animals taken, there was absolutely no way of knowing whether or not they had been innoculated with any one of a score of contageous diseases. Most fortunately, no epidemic nor any individual cases were started by this thoughtless action, but it could have been so different. Moreover, the animals taken were not ones involved in lengthy, costly experiments, but it was only by chance. Years and years of extensive research could have been undone by this one thoughtless deed. The fact that a violation of the law was taking place didn't seem to matter either. Good, clean fun!

Another incident, not so much a matter for the Honor Council as the Interfraternity Council, was the untimely game period that took place in the Y court during the last convocation. In the very midst of our guest's speech a group of pledges entertained a throng of students with its games of "leap frog," "drop the handkerchief," etc. At some other time, all right. But not during an hour when all students have been excused for the explicit purpose of attending convocation. Aside from the noise created, numerous empty seats were seen throughout Memorial Hall. Is that any way to treat an honored guest, to heighten our national reputation? There was no intentional wrongdoing—just another thoughtless action. A similar episode took place after Rep. Kennedy's speech in Hill Hall when a group of pledges chose that time to jump a few actives in its fraternity and take them for a "ride." This playful action, too, is not to be condemned, in its rightful place. But is creating a mild riot when an invited guest of our University is leaving the scene of his speech the right time? Again, it was just thoughtless action.

You all know from yesterday's article about the group of pledges entering the various women's dorms spreading their sheets on the sofas and undressing (they had their pajamas on beforehand). This wasn't taken as good, clean, harmless fun by many, especially those who were still hostesses to some of the boys an hour after closing time. And would flash pictures taken of a boy putting on his pants over a pair of pajamas while in a girls dorm look so good to an outsider who didn't know the details?

The whole series of events merely shows little thought and discretion on the part of fraternities in general. Many have been completely innocent of any questionable act at all, and are not to be condemned. In fact, the entire action taken by the Interfraternity Council was not to condemn but to make us see the light before it is too late—before some real, definitely positive action is taken by that group which has been "tolerating" fraternities these past few years. No one would hate to see fraternities go from this campus any more than I would. But the events of the past month are foods to thrive upon for those wishing to do away with us, and they must stop. Responsibilities to the University and all the students as a whole come first, and any action making fraternities realize this cannot be condemned.

For Truman

Dear Sir:

I thoroughly enjoyed your editorial today in which you gave credit to President Truman for his skillful guidance of our nation's policies.

Although Roosevelt may have done a better job, I contend that we have the next best man out front.

We often criticize, but we seldom praise.

Tar Heel Nine Battles Duke In Durham Today

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Carolina Netmen Overpower Duke, 8-1

Kenfield Team Takes 10th Win

Seixas and Taylor Lead Way in Win

By Billy Carmichael

Not only outplayed, but outclassed, the Duke Blue Devil netters fell before the might of Carolina's undefeated tennis team by a 8-1 count yesterday afternoon in a match played on the local courts. It was the Tar Heels' tenth straight win.

Vic Seixas started the ball rolling for the home team as he pounded out a 6-1, 6-2 victory over the No. 1 Dukeman Emry Green. Seixas demonstrated his usual top flight game as he extracted a quick and painless triumph from his bewildered opponent.

Clark Taylor and Jim Nicholson then added to the Tar Heel total as they too made short order of their respective foes in decisive two set victories.

Ray Morris playing the No. 4 slot, had a little more trouble than his predecessors, but came through in fine form to register a 6-1, 7-5 win over Bob Taylor of the Dukesters.

Stan Gruner and Heath Alexander then added easy wins to run the locals score to 6-0, and give the home boys a clean sweep of the singles matches.

Seixas and Taylor then returned to the courts to wade through to a 6-2, 6-1, in the No. 1 doubles encounter while Jack Kenfield and Morris were gaining a 6-2, 6-3 triumph in the No. 2.

The No. 2 doubles match turned out to be the top performance of the afternoon as Carolina's usually stellar combination of Nicholson and Don Skakle failed to display the talents of which they are capable and dropped a marathon match to Bob Chapman and Eddy Davis of the Blue Devils.

The local lads lost the first set in short order, 2-6, but then came back in the second to stave off match point at 3-5 and again at 3-9. The end finally came, though, in the twenty-second game when the visitors held their own service after breaking through Nicholson's in the previous game.

Seixas (NC) defeated Green, 6-1, 6-2; Taylor (NC) defeated Banks, 6-0, 6-0; Nicholson (NC) Davis, 6-2, 6-3.

Morris (NC) defeated Taylor, 6-1, 7-5; Gruner (NC) Chapman, 6-1, 6-0; Alexander (NC) defeated Lew McMasters, 6-0, 6-0.

Seixas-Taylor (NC) defeated Green-Priemer, 6-2, 6-1; Chapman-Davis (D) defeated Nicholson-Skakle, 6-2, 12-10; Kenfield-Morris (NC) defeated Taylor-McMasters, 6-2, 6-3.

SPORT SPINS - -

IRWIN SMALLWOOD

THERE IS ALWAYS plenty of room for sports writers to stick their necks out, and the Daily Tar Heel staff will be no exception. This morning we are venturing our opinions as to how the standings will read when the 1947 major league baseball season is concluded. Opinions, mind you, disputable by all but nevertheless made with considerable forethought.

Yesterday afternoon the season officially opened in full fury, and in just a few days the opening stiffness will be worn off and the big leaguers will be running rampant toward respective junior and senior circuit pennants.

Cincinnati, Brooklyn, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia took a momentary lead with opening day victories in the National league, and Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago and Detroit did likewise in the American loop but this, naturally, doesn't mean very much as an indication of things to come.

Starting with the National league, we give the versatile St. Louis Cardinals the nod to win, logically, that is, and we pick the rookie-studded Cincinnati Reds as a dark, dark-horse. Otherwise, we see the Boston Braves finishing a not-too-close second behind the Cards, and the Brooklyn Dodgers pulling into the finish right on the heels of the Braves.

Cincinnati gets our fourth-place pick, and the Pittsburgh Pirates, the Philadelphia Phils, the Chicago Cubs and the New York Giants will finish in that order according to our crystal-gazing. As a counter part to the choice of Cincinnati as the dark horse, we pick Chicago to be the flop team in the Senior circuit.

Turning to the American league, we have a matter-of-fact first place for the potent Boston Red Sox, and we have picked the Cleveland Indians, pardon, Bob Feller, to finish second in the unpredictable American league scuffle. From Cleveland on down, we see the Yankees, Detroit, St. Louis, Washington, Chicago and Philadelphia, in that order.

Cleveland is our choice for surprise in the American league, with Detroit the team to drop, despite Hal Newhouser.

In relation to the majors and their coverage in the Daily Tar Heel, we plan to run the scores, the winning pitchers and the home run hitters each day, and when possible, we will run the score by innings on the games. Space restricts our running a full account every day, but a summary will be carried once a week.

That's all from us, read it and disagree, of course. Below are the tabulated prognostications of four Daily Tar Heel writers:

Basketball Clinic To Begin Tonight

A basketball clinic open to all interested students will hold its first session in Woollen Gym tonight, cage coach Tom Scott announced yesterday.

The clinic will get underway promptly at 7:30 o'clock with the basket room opening at 7 to permit participants to dress for the affair. Drills will consumate two hours with the time being divided between instruction and actual play. Several varsity players will be used for demonstration purposes.

Coach Scott explained that the purpose of the clinic is to develop new material for next year's teams and to further the interest of basketball in the University.

Sessions will be conducted on a two-a-week basis after tonight with the exact dates and times still to be announced.

Whiteheart, Houghton Slated As Mound Opponents for Tilt

Carolina Righthander After Fourth Win; Locals Unbeaten in Big Four Competition

By Bob Goldwater

Victorious in their initial brush with Duke two weeks ago, Monk Whiteheart and his Tar Heel mates seek a repeat performance over the Blue Devils this afternoon in a 3 o'clock tussle at Duke's Coombs Park.

Today's clash will be the first of two Big Four tilts for the Tar Heels this week, with the other coming Saturday against Wake Forest. Carolina currently tops the Big Four standings with one victory while the Devils have a 1-1 record to pull up into second place.

Whiteheart will be making his fourth appearance of the campaign and will be shooting for his fourth straight win. Although the Duke mound choice is not certain, it is expected that Bob Houghton, who also has one Big Four success, will oppose Whiteheart.

As for the other starters, Coach Walter Rabb has juggled his lineup slightly. Mainly through heavier power at the plate, Bo Hackney has earned a regular berth at second base and will open there today. The rest of the infield will consist of John Gregory, Rip Ryan and Buster Stevenson, with Harry Beason, Whitey Black and Jack Hussey, if his injured arm has recovered sufficiently, handling the outfield duties. Jim Hayworth, the leading hitter of late, will take care of the backstop chores.

In another Big Four encounter, last year's loop champions, N. C. State's Red Terrors, invade Wake Forest. The Deacons have a 0-1 record in circuit competition while State is playing its first game.

DIAMOND DUST: Ryan is currently leading the Big Four batting parade, with three hits in four times at bat for a .750 average. . . Red Cochran of Wake Forest is second with .667. . . Houghton hurled a one-hitter against the Tar Heels last season, the lone hit coming after two were out in the ninth inning. . . A schedule for the Carolina junior varsity will be announced later this week.

The probable batting order:

Carolina	Duke
Black, cf	Palmer, 3b
Hackney, 2b	Vann, cf
Beason, lf	D'Alonzo, 1b
Hayworth, c	Smith, rf
Hussey, rf	Ayers, lf
Gregory, 1b	Falwell, ss
Stevenson, 3b	Frye, 2b
Ryan, ss	McCarthy, c
Whiteheart, p	Houghton, p

Larry McPhail Asks Review For Durocher

New York, April 15,—(UP)—President Larry McPhail of the New York Yankee baseball club has asked Commissioner Happy Chandler to reconsider the suspensions placed on Coach Charlie Dressen of the Yanks and Manager Leo Durocher of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

McPhail said that he had no idea that the case he brought before the commissioner would result in such serious penalties.

Branch Rickey of the Dodgers made no statement as to whether he too would ask for reconsideration of the case.

Linksmen Clash With LSU Today

Athens, Ga., April 15—Carolina's undefeated golfers will need all the experience they have gained from their four straight victories of the season tomorrow afternoon when the traveling Tar Heels tee off against the torrid Tigers of LSU on the University of Georgia course here.

The match, which will serve as a warmup to the Southern intercollegiate tournament starting Thursday, is sure to be the toughest of the season for Carolina. The boys from Louisiana are current Southern champions and will field practically the same team that captured the honors last year.

To stem the tide of the Tigers, Coach Chuck Erickson will call upon his top sextet of Dick Doescher, Junie Bailey, Harvey Ward, Ray Taylor, Mike Nolan and Bob Cox—playing in that order—with newcomer Mason Rankin, standing by for possible relief work.

Medal play in the tournament will begin Thursday with the sixteen low scorers qualifying for match play beginning Friday.

UNC Seniors Can Get Commissions in Navy

A limited number of commissions as ensigns in the supply corps of the U. S. Navy are now open to University seniors, 21-25 years of age who are physically qualified, Lt. Comdr. Tynan, USN, announced at the Naval armory yesterday. Accepted applicants will take training at the Naval Supply Corps school near New York for five months following graduation from college and then go on active duty, with full pay and allowances. Assignments will be to naval supply and naval aviation supply activities, and to ships in the Atlantic, Mediterranean and Pacific fleets. Approximately 65 per cent of the duty will be shore-based, while the balance will be afloat.

secretary of the UVA. James Keller received a close vote over John Temple for treasurer of the association.

In accepting the post of President Wells stated that the University Veterans association during the past year has attained heights of activeness and a place of honor among the campus organizations and that it will be his policy to continue the upward trend of entertainment and veterans rights.

Wells is married and now resides in Victory village and was one of the members who negotiated the lowering of rents there for veterans.

A complete reading of the accomplishments of the UVA for the past quarter opened the meeting after which John Temple, retiring treasurer presented a statement of the accounts since July 1, 1946. The floor was then thrown open for nominations, after which a hot verbal battle ensued over the merits of candidates Hugh Wells and A. B. Coleman. Further nominations for the other posts were also close in the final count.

GRAIL

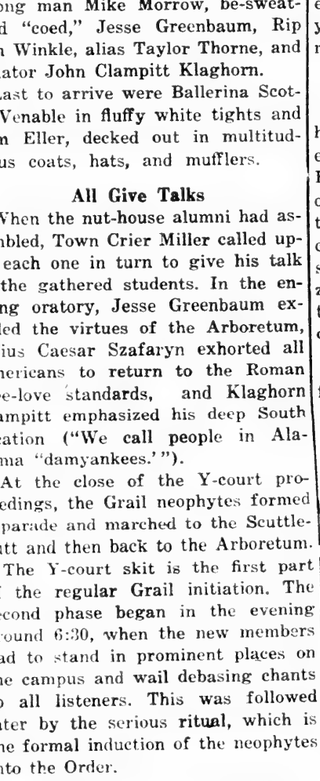
Following close behind the Roman politician was Harry Beason and his new bride, Bob Collins, both wheeling their bouncing, beer-fed baby. These two had just come from their church, double-barrelled wedding. Then in quick succession came Miss America of 1903, Gussie Johnson, strong man Mike Morrow, be-sweatered "coed," Jesse Greenbaum, Rip Van Winkle, alias Taylor Thorne, and Senator John Clampitt Klaghorn.

Last to arrive were Ballerina Scotty Venable in fluffy white tights and Tom Eller, decked out in multitudinous coats, hats, and mufflers.

All Give Talks



When the nut-house alumni had assembled, Town Crier Miller called upon each one in turn to give his talk to the gathered students. In the ensuing oratory, Jesse Greenbaum extolled the virtues of the Arboretum, Julius Caesar Szafaryn exhorted all Americans to return to the Roman free-love standards, and Klaghorn Clampitt emphasized his deep South location ("We call people in Alabama "damyankees.'").

At the close of the Y-court proceedings, the Grail neophytes formed a parade and marched to the Scuttlebutt and then back to the Arboretum.

The Y-court skit is the first part of the regular Grail initiation. The second phase began in the evening around 6:30, when the new members had to stand in prominent places on the campus and wail debasing chants to all listeners. This was followed later by the serious ritual, which is the formal induction of the neophytes into the Order.

the board of Elders and a member of the University chemistry department, said the meeting was called to secure protection of the church property and that Chief W. T. Sloan of the Chapel Hill police department was requested to give protection to the property.

Rev. Jones, who has taken an active part in inter-racial affairs of the community, was not available for comment yesterday because of a previous engagement in Greensboro. However, three student roomers at his home said that the minister would be ready to release a complete statement concerning his part in the affair upon his return to Chapel Hill today. It was emphasized that Mr. Jones' leaving yesterday was not connected with the racial situation.

Graham Talks to Chief

University President Frank P. Graham, a member of the Board of Elders, was attending a meeting of the Harvard club in Raleigh at the time of the board meeting, but talked with the police chief yesterday morning concerning the racial incidents. He said that Sloan assured him as a citizen of Chapel Hill that full police protection would be given to any and all citizens regardless.

Graham said that he had entire confidence in Chief Sloan's assurance.

Research Problems in the Manufacture of Nylon

Last month in this space the development of nylon was traced from a fundamental research study on linear polymers to the first synthetic organic fibers, the superpolyamides. This installment deals with the complex manufacturing research problems that followed.

From the start there were obstacles to the production on a commercial scale of the "66" polymer—so named because the adipic acid and hexamethylenediamine from which it is made have six carbon atoms each.

Although adipic acid was being produced in Germany, it was necessary to develop a new process to meet conditions at Du Pont's Belle, W. Va., plant, where, because of the catalytic technique involved, it was decided to make this intermediate. Hexamethylenediamine was only a laboratory curiosity, and a process for its commercial production had likewise to be worked out. Fortunately it was found that the diamine could be made from adipic acid by new catalytic processes. The results of these investigations may be summarized as follows:

Carrying out experimental autoclave polymerizations of condensation polymers. J. H. Blomquist, Ph.D. Chemistry, Ohio State University '41; O. A. Bredeson, Ph.D. Chemistry, M. I. T. '41; J. E. Waltz, Ph.D. Chemistry, University of Indiana '41.

Studying the distillation of new intermediates for condensation polymers: T. J. Dickerson, B. S. Mechanical Engineering, Virginia '43 and E. E. Magat, Ph.D. Organic Chemistry, M.I.T. '45.

$C_6H_6 \xrightarrow{H_2}$ Benzene $\rightarrow C_6H_{12} \xrightarrow{O_2}$ Cyclohexane $\rightarrow (CH_2)_4(COOH)_2$ Adipic Acid

$\xrightarrow[-H_2O]{+NH_3} (CH_2)_4(CN)_2 \xrightarrow{H_2}$ Adiponitrile $\rightarrow (CH_2)_6(NH_2)_2$ Hexamethylenediamine

$(CH_2)_4(COOH)_2$ Adipic Acid + $(CH_2)_6(NH_2)_2$ Hexamethylenediamine $\rightarrow$

$[....CO(CH_2)_4CONH(CH_2)_6NH....]_x$ A Nylon Polymer

The synthesis of intermediates was only part of the problem. Nylon polymer was an entirely new material with properties different from any previous synthetic product. It provided the first example of spinning fiber from a molten polymer (m.p.263°C) and required entirely different techniques from rayon spinning. Information was acquired only by painstaking experimentation at each step.

Manufacturing Process Outlined

The process as finally developed for the manufacture of nylon and its fabrication into yarn may be briefly outlined as follows:

Nylon salt is heated in an autoclave with addition of stabilizers to control molecular weight and viscosity. A long-chain linear polymer is formed with a molecular weight of 10,000 or higher.

The melt is converted to solid chips that are later re-melted and extruded through a spinneret to form filaments at a speed of 2,500 feet a minute. The filaments are then drawn out to about four times their original length in order to develop the desired textile qualities characteristic of nylon.

These operations sound simple enough, but some of the problems encountered were extraordinarily difficult. For example, a specially designed grid for melting the polymer was necessary because of the poor thermal conductivity of the polymer; pumps had to operate at 285°C with only polymer as a lubricant; special abrasion-resistant steels that did not soften or warp at 285°C were necessary; the spinning assembling required radically new engineering developments to produce the necessary fiber qualities.

All of these chemical, physical and mechanical engineering problems had to be solved and dove-tailed into a unified process before manufacture of nylon could be undertaken. In all, about 230 technical men and eight manufacturing and staff departments share the credit for making nylon the important part of American life it is today.

WHAT ARE THE OPPORTUNITIES FOR ENGINEERS?

Most openings at Du Pont are for chemical and mechanical engineers, but opportunities are also available for industrial, civil, electrical, metallurgical, textile, petroleum and other engineers. Practically all types of engineering are required in the work of the ten manufacturing departments as well as in some of the staff departments. Witness Reports New Blast Heard In Stricken Port

Texas City, Tex., April 25. — (UP)—Latest reports on the fatalities in this city of the dead vary up to 1200.

The disaster resulted from a chain of fires and explosions originating when a nitrate loaded French freighter, the Grand Camp, blew sky high here yesterday.

While rescue crews were working in the rubble looking for the dead, a Texas City telephone operator reported that another "big" explosion had occurred in the stricken city.

City Isolated

With Texas City shut off tight, eyewitness reports tell of twisted bodies lying in the streets. Blood trails dot the sidewalk.

Ambulances and hearses are pouring in and out of the town. Hospitals in Galveston and Houston are choked with victims.

The dead are laid row on row on the floors of garages and other emergency morgues. However, most of the relief workers are too busy trying to reach the injured to bother removing the dead.

Reports from the scene of the disaster say the town of 18,000 was ordered evacuated when violent fires in about 50 oil storage tanks and two refineries began raging towards stocks of TNT and poisonous fumes blew out from the shattered Monsanto Chemical plant.

Sees Bodies

W. H. Lane, research group leader for Monsanto, says everyone in his office was thrown to the floor when the blast occurred. He said he passed scores of bodies as he ran from the scene of spreading explosions and fire.

A reporter of the Houston Press stated that the explosions didn't leave one window unbroken in the town. He told of people running away in every direction, many of them bleeding from injuries.

He further reported he found hunks of the exploded ship five miles from the dock, and that the flames from the burning oil storage tanks singed his cheeks from a mile and a half away.

Smoke, Flames Dense

So dense were the smoke and flames that the marine inspector for the port of Galveston was unable to reach the heart of the town.

Governor Jester stated that two battalions of the Texas state guard at Houston have been alerted for duty. Some 150 guardsmen from La Porte were the first on duty.

Vandenberg Statement Warns of Appeasement

Washington, April 15. — (UP) — Senate President Arthur Vandenberg says this country must serve notice on Russia that the United States will not appease aggressors. Vandenberg took the floor again in the senate debate on President Truman's $400,000,000 program to help Greece and Turkey resist Communism.

Molotov Hopes to End Austria Pact Parleys

Moscow, April 15.—(UP)—Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov announced that it is Russia's intention to try to complete an Austrian treaty during this session of the Big Four. After his statement, the ministers began a paragraph by paragraph study of the treaty.

The warning came after the British army hanged Dov Gruner and three other Irgunists in Jerusalem's ancient Acre prison today. All British civilians have been ordered to stay indoors as a precaution.

Session Tonight Features Report Of Finance Panel

By Bookie Jabine

In its report to the Student legislature on the remainder of the campus budget this evening, the Finance committee will singe budget submitting groups, "notably the Publications board," for poorly organized financial material. Tonight's session will begin at 7:30 in Gerrard hall.

In addition to publications, the following items of the $109,000 budget will be discussed by the assembly; Men's Honor council, Coed Senate, International Relations club, and the Debate council.

Discuss Amendments

Also scheduled for tonight's crowded agenda are three constitutional amendments, including proposed changes in the Coed Senate, the Student Audit board, and the Dance committee. Speaker Charlie Warren stated that the disputed underclass elections will be ironed out by the legislators.

A bill to reprecinct the town district will be reported out by the Elections committee. Introduced by Charlie Long, it provides that fraternity house residents, and other town students vote at separate polling places.

In connection with the remainder of the budget, part of which was approved at last week's session, the Finance committee, headed by Bill Mackie, has been holding hearings during the week, particularly with publication leaders.

Reach Decisions

The panel late yesterday had reached decisions on their recommendations for the Yackety Yack and the Carolina Magazine. A spokesman explained that the annual's request for $39,685 of student fees had been cut $5,000 by the Committee, but he added that the Magazine will get "pretty much what they asked for, $6,303."

Work on the recommendation for the Daily Tar Heel should be completed in time for the committee's report this evening.

No Official Statement

Dewey Dorsett said that he could not give an official statement on the work of the Committee until the report is actually made tonight, but he indicated that he would approve their recommendations, "concerning all

Night Editor Receives Nomination Of University Party for Position

By Sam Whitehall

William "Bookie" Jabine, 24-year-old junior of Baltimore, Md., has been nominated by the University party to enter the race for editorship of the Daily Tar Heel, UP Chairman Alex Davis announced last night.

BOOKIE JABINE

Jabine, a member of DKE fraternity, has been a leading reporter since last spring and night editor since September. Apparently bitten by the journalistic bug at an early age, the writer can boast of professional newspaper experience which includes three years on the Baltimore Sun.

E. H. S. Graduate

A graduate of Episcopal High school in Alexandria, Va., Jabine first came to Carolina in the fall of 1941, but had his initial start at higher education interrupted by Uncle Sam. After one year of general college, during which he worked as a DTH reporter, he enlisted in the Navy and served on a destroyer.

Since rejoining the DTH news staff, he has covered CPU meetings and handled information emanating from South building. In September he joined the ranks of night editors after serving as desk editor throughout the summer session. Also, he began reporting on the student legislature, the Grail, IFC, German club, and other high-ranking campus organizations including the Di and Phi senates.

Tossing his hat into the ring, Jabine said, "I believe that the role of newspapers is to bring all sides of the news to all groups of readers."

AVC Re-Elects Rouzie as Head

Group Passes Bill On Racial Situation

In their semi-annual election of chapter officers held Tuesday evening, the local chapter of the American Veterans committee unanimously re-elected incumbent chairman Ben Rouzie, third-year student from Richmond, Va.

Replacing Junius Scales of Chapel Hill, Gary Fullerton was chosen new vice-chairman. Paul Ramsey was retained as recording secretary, and Henry Saunders and Jerry Hodson were re-elected corresponding secretary and treasurer, respectively.

The group also voted to participate in tonight's fact-finding meeting on the current racial tension in the city.

Publications Members Plan for Staff Party

Tomorrow afternoon at 5:30 the Daily Tar Heel will hold a party at Hogan's lake. The Carolina Magazine and the Yackety Yack have both been invited to this affair. Tickets are $1.50 stag or $3.00 drag and may be purchased from Harry Snowden or the managing editor in the Daily Tar Heel office this afternoon.

The house presidents for the coming year are Lola Mustard, Carr; Miriam Evans, Smith; Mary Ellen Wellons, Alderman; Polly Warriner, McIver; Bootsie McWilliams, Archer house; and Emily von Borries, Spencer.

Sorority house managers are Norma Hotard, Delta Delta Delta; K. D. Durham, Chi Omega; Jean Snyder, Alpha Gamma Delta; Ludie Vance, Pi Beta Phi; and Martha Whittaker, Alpha Delta Pi.

Drama of Racial Violence Invokes Mass Meet Today

"Violence in Chapel Hill" will be the subject of a public meeting to be held this afternoon in the main lounge of Graham Memorial at 5 o'clock. All students, faculty members, and townspeople are urged to attend the session which will be in the form of a panel discussion and a question period concerning the several recent events in the town causing racial tension and serious danger to local citizens and the peace of the community.

Present Complete Facts

The purpose of this meeting will be to present complete facts and details as to what has actually happened concerning disorders, violence, and threats which have characterized the local scene during the past few days. It is hoped that the air may be cleared somewhat, and the rumor-mongering in the community aborted.

Various persons who have been directly involved in these serious incidents will be present and will offer first-hand information on exactly what has taken place.

The discussion will be conducted in

Bids Yet Available For FFC Affair With Coeds of WC

A limited number of bids are still available for the Freshman weiner roast and informal dance to be held Saturday, according to Ed Hamilton, chairman of the Freshman Friendship council, which is handling arrangements for the weekend. Bids may be obtained in the Y today from 10 until 2, and from 7 until 8 this evening at the Graham Memorial office.

Miss Maxine Garner, director of religious activities at the Woman's college in Greensboro, has stated that 160 freshman students will arrive in Chapel Hill at 5:30 Saturday afternoon. A welcoming committee will meet them at Graham Memorial and take them to Battle park for the weiner roast and then to the informal dance being preesnted by the student union in the main lounge, according to Hamilton.

Hamilton urges all interested freshmen to get their bids today since they are quite limited in number.

Pastor Declines to Comment On Sunday's Race Incident

Orange Presbytery Executive Secretary Says No Action Against Jones on Agenda

By Sigsbee Miller

The Rev. Charles M. Jones, pastor of the Chapel Hill Presbyterian church, last night declined official comment upon Sunday's racial incident, in which he has become the controversial central figure, but promised to release a statement clarifying the situation late today.

Back from an overnight trip to Greensboro, the Rev. Mr. Jones spent most of yesterday afternoon and last night conferring with planners on a projected addition to his church. He said he preferred to say nothing on the racial matter until he had had time to think the matter through and prepare a formal statement.

Posted Bond Sunday

On Sunday afternoon Jones, whose liberal attitude toward the racial question has caused a split in his congregation, posted bond for three young Negroes arrested at the Chapel Hill bus station after refusing to reseat themselves on a Carolina Trailways bus. The arrests were apparently part of planned strategy to test the validity of racial segregation among bus and train passengers in North Carolina.

Meanwhile, in Winston-Salem Dr. T. Henry Patterson, executive secretary of the Orange Presbytery, was quoted as saying that no action concerning the Chapel Hill minister was

You Can Help

While the leaders of all nations discuss and plan foreign policies and their respective peoples argue the pros and cons of what should and shouldn't be done to make this a better world, all of us should pause and think about the basic foundation of any world peace—the people.

The rising structure of peace is built on a shaky foundation. This shaky foundation is made up of the millions of people still suffering from the aftermath of war, still faced with prospects of poverty and death.

Last year one out of every six Jewish survivors in Europe had no home, were plagued by hunger and sickness. Today, the dissolution of UNRRA and other relief agencies has put over 1,500,000 Jewish survivors on the brink of absolute disaster, even more complete than that resulting from destructive war.

The future course of these peoples for generations to come is being determined now! Unless emergency reconstruction action is taken immediately to furnish those displaced people with the necessary rudiments of food, clothing, and shelter, it is not difficult to see what will happen in the future.

In an effort to provide these necessities, United Jewish Appeal has launched one of the greatest campaigns in private philanthropic history. It is trying to raise $170,000,000 in order to accomplish its humane program dedicated to the rebirth of a people who have endured too much suffering and too much misery.

No sustained drive is being held on this campus. But all interested students who can contribute any amount, however small, can do so at the Hillel office in the YMCA.

A small contribution will go a long way towards winning the war we are still fighting—against fear and want. Think about it next time you're in the Y.

Know Thy Neighbor

After one has been at Carolina for a few terms, he comes to the point where he can recognize hundreds of familiar faces and always has a hearty "how ya doing" ready for his unknown friends. In the Y Court, Harry's, the arboretum, and many other places one is always running into familiar faces.

We all feel as though we have a great many friends for almost everyone we see is someone that we have seen before and perhaps know slightly. It seems strange indeed to go through college and never learn the names of these unknown friends, never getting a chance to really know them. Those who live in dorms find that most of their friends also live in the same dorm and the same is true of those who live in fraternity houses.

Some of the fraternities are starting a program on this campus to enable those of one fraternity to meet and make many friends in other fraternities by swapping supper guests. Two fraternities enter into an agreement and then exchange visitors at their meals. This enables the two groups to become better acquainted with each other.

Such a move is the first step towards more and better friendships at UNC.

It will be harder for the dorms to work out interdorm functions since most of them don't serve meals, but the Interdorm council might get together and work out some ideas along similar lines.

Book learning is an important phase of a college education, but the knowledge and pleasure we can get from our college friendships is one of the most valuable assets we will ever find in life.—S. D.

I'd Rather Be Right

Today Is Veterans' Deadline To Act for More Subsistence

By Earl Heffner

This morning finds veterans at D-Day minus One.

For tomorrow morning the House of Representatives' Sub-committee of the House Veterans Affairs committee goes into executive session to decide on HR 870, the measure advocating increased subsistence for veterans studying under Public Law 346, popularly known as the GI Bill of Rights.

Information from Capitol Hill which arrived in the Daily Tar Heel office yesterday via the local chapter of the American Veterans committee reveals that the sub-committee favors a modified version of the bill.

Modified? A very loose term indeed! HR 870—the Rogers Bill—can be modified down to little more than its numbers, 870.

Briefly, this means that the deadline for action is today.

Letters are too slow. Telephone calls are expensive, might work. But they can be difficult to get through what with the nation-wide tieup of facilities by the strike.

Hence, one medium is left. It'll cost about fifty cents for each veteran who takes advantage of it. Fifty cents to get subsistence raised about $35.00 a month.

A gamble? Yes. With the odds favoring you 70 to one. Worth it, isn't it.

Here is the sub-committee lineup at present on the bill.

Representative Ramey, Republican of Ohio, favors the bill.

Representative Lusk, Democrat of New Mexico, says "maybe," is noncommittal.

Representative Meade, Republican of Kentucky, is undecided.

Representative Ross, Republican of New York, won't take a public stand.

Representative Wheeler, Democrat of Georgia, is against the measure.

The Capitol Hill communique reports, "Ramey is enthusiastic but can't stand up alone forever. Ross claims that he hasn't made up his mind yet. Wheeler just isn't for the GI Bill of Rights. And fate of HR 870 hangs on his report."

From a glance of the above lineup, it is fairly apparent that Meade is the critical man on the sub-committee.

How will he decide? What will he report?

Unfortunately, the cost of living in Kentucky is notoriously low.

Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of themselves. Speak now or forever hold your stomach hungry.

Time out for Orchids, the ersatz variety. The GI Bill doesn't make me rich enough to buy the real ones.

But, seriously, the University Veterans association deserves congratulations for its elections last night. The quality of the new officers speaks favorably for the men who elected them to their post. They appear to be ableleaders capable of leading the organization to new heights.

Nice balloting, fellows.

Remember the Alamo....

Excellent Texas Daily Shows What Can Be Done in College Publications

By Barron Mills

Repercussions from the Daily Comrade (April Fool issue) of the Daily Tar Heel have been quite complimentary. In fact the Daily Texan sacrificed a large part of the editorial space to praise the issue as one of the best April Fool editions that they had read. To quote the Texan—"The Tar Heel did it up brown—or red that is."

There is more to it than "you-scratch-my-back I'll-scratch yours" if the DTH came back with a reply stating that the Daily Texan day after day publishes one of the best college dailies in the country. It is sheer jealousy.

The Texan went daily some little time before the Tar Heel, according to a letter received from Bill Noble, editor. In fact it was 15 years old when this publication became daily. The Texan uses with pride "The First College Daily in the South" under its masthead. However, the Tar Heel points out that, for sheer antiquity, it takes the prize.

Much more could be learned from the Texan besides the fact that it has continued growing with the increased enrollment while the DTH is at a stalemate.

The Texan has become indispensable on the University of Texas campus. The standard size eight column newspaper appears each morning with never less than six pages. Yesterday's mail brought a 14-page edition of the publication for staff members of the DTH to glare at with envy.

Featured in the columns of the publication is a society page, daily column on amusements, ample room for sport coverage and editorial commentary, space to print more letters to the editor of campus interest and other items. The Texan is rendering both service and enjoyment to the students of UT and has continued growing with its campus and enrollment.

It's not too much of a consolation to get a pat on the back for only one issue out of the year. How much more tasteful it would be to say that the Daily Tar Heel is rendering service and enjoyment to the students of UNC and therefore each issue of it is one of the best in the country.

Consideration of publication's budgets will monopolize a major portion of the Student Legislature tonight. In considering it Legislature members should rephrase the old expression "Remember the Alamo" to read "Remember the Texan."

Art Classes Require Paid Student Models

Models are greatly needed for art classes on Tuesday and Thursday evenings from 7 till 10 o'clock, and on Wednesday and Friday afternoons from 2 till 5 o'clock. The models are paid from $1.50 to $2.50 a day, depending on the type modeling they do. For further information, call Lynette Warren at 8801, Person Hall Art gallery.

Letters To The Editor

All letters must be typewritten, double-spaced, under 300 words in length, and signed by the writer. Writer's name will be withheld on request, but letters must be signed. The Daily Tar Heel reserves the right to present the letters as it wishes and to delete all matter it considers libelous.

Practical Idea

To the Editor:

The suggestion in the editorial in Wednesday's Daily Tar Heel, "On Losing Refuse," is constructive and practical. Carolina students hanker for places to put trash. I have always believed that if containers were provided in convenient places the students would use them. Two experiences with a basket confirms me in this belief.

Recently I brought some plants to my building for a colleague. They had to await transfer to his car, and the apple basket containing them was placed in an out-of-the-way nook under a staircase. With its stemmy contents sticking up, it looked like a basket of trash. Though it was visible to passersby, it was not easy; to get at, and yet within a day and a half it was filled to overflowing with waste paper, cups and the like.

A week later my friend brought the basket back. During the half day it stood in his outer office it accumulated several wads of crumpled paper.

People throw down cups, papers from around candy bars, etc., etc., because there is no place to put them. It is perhaps significant, considering how many people smoke, that one sees relatively few cigarette packages. I have counted 25 to 30 cups to one cigarette package. The user is accustomed to carrying the packet in pocket or bag; if he uses the last cigarette along the hall or walk, he is inclined to keep the empty until he reaches a wastebasket.

But one cannot put an oozy cup in a pocket; one is not accustomed to carrying candy bars or peanut butter sandwiches and so had no habit impelling him to hold on to the covering. He drops it in the gutter, or throws it on the edge of an open area, or into a corner. A trip of observation over the campus will convince anyone of this vague reaching out for suitable disposition.

Without strategically placed containers, one can only "lose" refuse.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

SPEAKER MARTIN FACES FIRST GOP INNER PARTY REVOLT: WESTERN REPUBLICANS BOLT ON IRRIGATION AND RECLAMATION FUNDS; HENRY KAISER TURNS WORM ON AUTO-MAKERS

Washington.—For the first time since he took over the Speakership reins, Joe Martin faces a serious revolt in House Republican ranks. The details have been hushed up, but GOP congressmen from 17 western states are really up in arms over heavy slashes the House Appropriations Committee is planning for irrigation and reclamation. The battle illustrates the tough time Republicans are having in achieving their promised budget-pruning.

Stung by reaction from home, western spokesmen laid down the following ultimatum in a secret meeting with Martin and House Majority Leader Charles Halleck: If Appropriations Chairman John Taber and Rep. Robert Jones of Ohio carry out their ax-wielding plans, then western Republicans will bolt the party and vote with Democrats to restore the reclamation cut on the House floor.

Since Speaker Martin so far has kept his ranks working tightly together, this ultimatum is considered significant.

Rep. John Phillips of California opened up the battle by inquiring of Martin and Halleck if it was "too much to ask the leadership to announce a Republican position on irrigation and reclamation."

Before the two leaders could reply, economy-minded Taber and Jones jumped to their feet, asserting that it was strictly up to the Appropriations Committee to decide the size of the Interior Department's budget for irrigation and reclamation.

Rugged Representative Lowell Stockman of Oregon, a member of Jones' subcommittee which handles the Interior budget, bluntly served notice that if the Appropriations Committee had the last word, then he would refuse to "go along" with the rest of the committee.

"I shall oppose any drastic cut in the lifeblood of these western states, regardless of the position of either the subcommittee, to which I belong, or the full Appropriations Committee," Stockman announced heatedly.

TEDDY ROOSEVELT AND RECLAMATION

The Oregon Republican and other western colleagues then pointed out that the reclamation and irrigation program had been fathered by the Republican party in the days of President Teddy Roosevelt and it should be continued, they contended, for historical as well as practical, economic reasons.

"If drastic cuts are made, as now planned, the party will be weakened in the 17 states involved," warned Rep. William S. Hill of Colorado. "Such action is certain to produce a devastating effect on the party in those areas."

Phillips, Stockman, Hill and their cohorts insisted that they were Republicans in "spirit as well as fact" and that they were willing to go along with Republican plans to balance the budget, but not at the expense of undermining the economy of reclamation areas.

Economizers Taber and Jones staged a jumping-jack act during the tense meeting, popping up to heckle speakers.

Jones charged that the Interior Department was interrelating the irrigation and reclamation program with too much "public power and socialization philosophy." As a result, it was the Interior Department, not the Appropriations Committee, he said, which had placed irrigation and reclamation in jeopardy. His committee was determined to reduce sharply Interior's funds for public power development.

Taber also harped on the power issue, as related to irrigation and reclamation.

"There has been only one major dam built in this nation on a solid, self-supporting financial basis," exclaimed the New Yorker. "That was Boulder Dam, a Republican project. The remainder of these New Deal dams and hydroelectric power projects all depend on Federal, taxpayer subsidies to keep them going."

JOE MARTIN ON POWDER KEG

Leaders Martin and Halleck said little during the tempestuous meeting. Both knew that they were sitting on a powder keg that might split House GOP ranks wide open, and they didn't want to apply any vocal fuses until they had a chance to talk to the revolters individually. However, there was little question that they supported Taber and Jones.

At one point Martin reminded westerners that all sections of the country must take their "rightful share" of any cuts in over-all Federal spending.

"That is correct," agreed Halleck of Indiana. "No part of the country can escape its rightful share in the responsibility for balancing the budget."

Carolina Tilt With Duke Rained Out; Cincinnati Here Today

SPORT SPINS - -

IRWIN SMALLWOOD

HOLD THAT LINE! Hold that line! Now you may think that there is no place for that line during springtime and the baseball season, but just wait until April 26. On that date the Carolina Monogram club will unfold in Kenan stadium a football game, the second annual "civil war" between the Tar Heel men of the gridiron.

Head Coach King Carl Snavely of the Carolina grid machine announced just this week that he would conclude spring operations the end of next week, and that he would send evenly divided teams picked from the Tar Heel roster into a final game-like scrimmage session on that concluding day of practice.

And at the same time, the Carolina Monogramers, headed by Jim Camp, fleet starting wingback, announced that plans were complete for the local grid spectacle. There will be a game with all the trimmings, from a program to cold drinks and sandwiches—and rain covers for sale in the event of rain.

This is the second straight year that the Tar Heel letter-winner organization has staged this classic, and it is something similar to those held in nearly all the big football schools over the country. Just last Saturday night the Georgians in Athens—3,000 of them—weathered a pouring rain to see the factions of the 1947 Bulldog eleven battle it out in what they called G-day. Carolina, with the event open to the public, should at least double that attendance figure.

Game time will be 2:30 in the afternoon and it will be a regulation four-quarter engagement, with 15 minutes per quarters. All the Tar Heel Southern conference champs who are returning will be on hand, including now Charlie Choo Choo Justice and Sid Varney, who just this week returned from baseball competition.

For the big Blue team, Snavely has named Russ Murphey, Jim Gill, Toby Webb and Harry Furman. For the White team, coaches will be Max Reed, Rowell Little, Tuck McConnell and George Radman. (Furman, incidentally, is an addition to the Tar Heel staff and is a former player under Snavely at Cornell. Furman, who was a tackle and a "darn good athlete" according to Snavely, was graduated from Cornell at the end of last quarter and is now enrolled here at Carolina for graduate work in physical education.)

Division of the team has been made, but announcement of the respective rosters will not be made immediately. However, it was revealed that it was on an infiltrating basis. That is, two starting backfielders on one team, two on the other, and so on down the line. There are something like 40 members of each team.

An added attraction at halftime will be the presentation of the "Most Valuable Coach" award by the Monogram club. Voting took place at the regular meeting Tuesday night, and an assistant award winner was named as well as a head coach "most valuable."

"We of the Monogram club are proud to sponsor this game for the second consecutive year," President Camp of the Monogramers said last night. "And we hope that it will be continued in years to come as the annual project of our organization."

"Speaking for myself as a member of the football squad," continued Camp, "I believe that this will really be a bangup affair. Coach (Snavely) has divided the squad into two teams about as evenly matched as I believe possible. We all hope that the students will give us their support in this undertaking."

As more added attraction, the university band will be on hand if at all possible, and the cheer leaders will be there to lead the shouting if present plans materialize. All in all, it adds up to the promise of a great sporting event, one which you shouldn't forget. That date again, April 26, Saturday, at 2:30 p.m. in Kenan stadium. Carolina should win!

Blue Devil Tussle Set for Tomorrow

By Bob Goldwater

Rained out of their second tilt in three days, Carolina's baseballers began to think of chanting the old childhood limerick of what the rain should do after yesterday's washout with Duke.

Skies above and turf underfoot permitting, the Tar Heels will face the University of Cincinnati's touring team on Emerson field this afternoon at 4 o'clock. Following this engagement, the locals will play four games in a row away from the home base before battling Navy here April 25.

Play at Coombs Park

As for the Duke encounter, yesterday's rained-out tussle has been rescheduled for tomorrow afternoon, at which time the Carolina forces will invade Coombs park in their first of two games there this season. The two-day postponement means that the Tar Heels face the task of playing three games in as many days, with Wake Forest supplying the opposition Saturday.

To add insult to injury, the rain also served to muddle the Carolina pitching schedule. Monk Whiteheart was slated to perform yesterday but Coach Walt Rabb now intends to hold his ace until tomorrow and use Tommy Andrew against Cincinnati, as originally scheduled. Vinnie DiLorenzo will do the twirling against the Deacons.

Two other changes from the team that was named to oppose Duke will appear in today's lineup. Buck Hardee will handle the catching duties and Dallas Branch will be at second base.

The probable starting batting order: Black, cf; Branch, 2b; Ryan, ss; Beason, lf; Hussey, rf; Gregory, 1b; Hardee, c; Stevenson, 3b; Andrew, p.

Gridders Practice Despite Wet Fields

Despite mushy practice fields, the Carolina gridiron candidates went through stiff blocking, passing, tackling and scrimmage drills yesterday afternoon with only a week and a half remaining before the end of the spring sessions.

Charlie "Choo Choo" Justice was on hand, having returned from jayvee baseball, as was Sid Varney, who is back on the football field after a shot at varsity baseball. Ernie Williamson, another footballer, is still out for the diamond sport.

Golfers Beat LSU; Open Tournament Play Today

The pride of Carolina golfdom will tee off against the cream of the Southern links crop this afternoon on the University of Georgia course in Athens in the qualifying round of the Southern Intercollegiate golf tournament.

KENNY BLACK, above, will be batting in the leadoff position for the Tar Heels when they face Cincinnati this afternoon. Black starred with the 1943 and 1944 teams and returned this year after service duty.

Coach Chuck Erickson expects to pin his hopes of winning the individual championship on his two stars. Dick "The Machine" Doeschler and Harvey "The Wonder" Ward, with Mike Nolan and Junie Bailey rating outside chances as possible dark horse champions.

Athens, Ga., April 16.—The University of North Carolina golf team handed powerful Louisiana State university its initial defeat of the season here this afternoon as a warmup to the Southern intercollegiate matches which get underway here tomorrow. The score was 17½ to 9½.

Carolina's Junie Bailey shot a sizzling two-under-par 70 to pace the Tar Heels and beat last season's intercollegiate champion, Sonny Ellis, in the No. 2 match. Ward and Doeschler shot 73's for Carolina and Taylor had a 75.

Also competing under the Tar Heel colors will be Bob Cox, Ray Taylor and Mason Rankin, a trio who might give anyone trouble were they to play their top golf of the season.

Only sixteen men will qualify today for match play beginning tomorrow from the field of over a hundred that are entered in the event.

Mural Softball Called by Rain

No More Contests Until Next Week

April showers caused still another cancellation of mural softball play yesterday afternoon as Jupiter Pluvius continued to rule supreme.

P. A. Lee of the intramural department said that games have been scheduled the first four days of next week, since there are no varsity baseball games here on those days.

Additional information was also released on the forthcoming mural track meet. Except in the 60 and 100-yard dashes, it will be necessary to limit the number of entries from each organization, Lee announced. However, there will be no limit to the number of entries in the field events and an individual may enter as many events as he wishes.

In the qualifying rounds, which are slated for April 23, 24 and 28, established times must be equalled or surpassed by entries in order for them to qualify for the semi-finals on April 30. The finals will be held May 1.

Plans Completed For Grid Tussle

The Monogram club held its weekly meeting last Tuesday night and finished plans for the second annual Monogram club intra-squad football game to be played in Kenan stadium on April 26.

The club also voted for the outstanding head coach on the campus and the outstanding jayvee or assistant coach. The awards will be made at halftime of the football game.

Cindermen Accelerate Work For Encounter With Middies

The cindermen went through accelerated workouts yesterday afternoon over still soggy trails in dilligent preparation for the meet with Navy at Annapolis Saturday afternoon. The Tar Heels will be up against a Middie team that trounced Maryland by 20 points in the season opener last weekend.

Coaches Bob Fetzer and Dale Ranson are counting on boys like Rusty Russell, Skeets Baldwin, Ted Haigler, Tommy Turner, Dick Hollander, Larry Klosterman, and Alvin Smith to come through with improved performances.

Navy is particularly strong in the mile, where they took all three places in the Maryland meet. Carolina's strong distance crew of Jack Milne, Jimmy Miller, Sam Magill, Julian Mackenzie and Alvin Smith will have its toughest test of the year.

Art Bigley, one of the best middle distance men in the east will be running in the 220-yard dash and 220 low hurdles, and he won both these events last weekend.

Norm McLeod, in the pole vault, will be matched against Navy's Barrow, Waldrop and Achee, all capable of 13 feet jumps. Bob Seligman will be favored in both the shot and discus, with his big competition coming from Middie footballer, Hank Bartos.

Jack Moody will be pitted against Tom Davis in the high jump, Davis having been the third place winner in the recent indoor meet here.

The dash events will see Carolina's Bucky Horton, Shultz, Haigler and Preyer fighting for points with Ambrogi, Williams and a host of other top-flight sprinters. The middle distance will find Carolina represented by Mark Burnham, Tommy Turner and Dick Hollander.

Student-Professor Answers Question Einstein Couldn't

By Helen Highwater

When a student asks his professor a question that the professor is unable to answer, then there's sure to be fireworks, but when a student turns professor for the day and becomes the target for questions then the classroom becomes a howl.

Such was the case in Journalism 61, catalogued as the history of journalism, which is taught by Mr. Walter Spearman. During the first part of the course students prepare reports on some phase of newspaper work such as the Hearst publications and Joseph Pulitzer. After the report is finished any student may ask questions on anything pertaining to the subject for clarification by the student-professor.

Missed Just Once

Yesterday Joan Blase, senior from Kirkwood, Mo., lectured on Sissy Patterson of the Washington Times-Herald, who has missed only one interview in her career—and that one with Albert Einstein. Miss Patterson allegedly was refused permission to see Einstein because "he was going for a walk." She would not take no for an answer and persisted in following him for three miles, before she found him with all his clothing removed taking a sunbath. A handkerchief was placed over his face to keep out the sun.

"Naturally," related Joan, "she turned back.

Professor Spearman asked his $64 question at this time, "How did she know that it was Einstein if he had his face covered?"

The question stumped Joan only momentarily, "Oh, she saw his physics book beside him."

The Finance committee will incorporate the following statement in their report: "We have found, in our dealings with budget submitting groups, particularly the Publications board, that these budgets were poorly organized, falsely estimated, and in general contained misleading information which has added much unnecessary difficulty to our work.

"We do heartily recommend that next year each organization submit its budget with a list of the monies expended to date of submission, estimated expenses for the remainder of the year by category, the old budget, and the requested budget with each item containing those expenses and only those properly coming within each category of the budget."

UP, SP Nominate Moffatt Sherard For Cheerleader; Long, Stewart Enter Campaign For Vice-President

NEWS BRIEFS

House Passes Sweeping Bill Hitting Unions

Law Would Prohibit Closed, Union Shop

Washington, April 17—(UP)—The House has passed a sweeping labor bill aimed at curbing union activities and preventing nation-wide strikes such as the telephone walkout and the recent coal tieups.

The House bill would outlaw the closed shop and forbid unions to strike for the union shop. It also would ban industrywide bargaining. The Senate bill, as toned down by the Labor committee, doesn't even mention industrywide bargaining.

The House bill also would prevent the national labor relations board from recognizing unions with officers who are, or have been, members of the Communist party. The Senate bill does not touch on the communist issue. Both bills would permit the government to obtain injunctions to enforce a cooling-off period before strikes are called in transportation, public utility or communications industries. The upper house bill calls for an 80-day cooling off period. The lower chamber calls for 75 days.

Long Follows Don Shropshire In Nomination

By Chuck Hauser

Moffatt "Myrt" Sherard, rising senior from Abbeville, South Carolina, has received both the University party and the Student party nominations for head cheerleader, according to a statement released yesterday evening by the chairman of the two groups.

At the same time, Charlie Long, also a rising senior and a native of Thomasville, received the Student party nomination for vice-president of the student body. The SP nomination for this post was formerly held by Don Shropshire, who has had to leave school temporarily.

Cheerleader in Past

Sherard saw service as a cheerleader while in V-5 at Carson-Newman college, and also while attending Porter Military academy at Charleston, South Carolina. He was a member of the North Carolina Pre-Flight trampoline and tumbling team here.

Better known as "Myrt", Sherard is well-known on campus for his performances as male vocalist at the UVA clubhouse, the Candlelight Room, and at various on and off-campus dances.

Nomination Withheld

"Myrt", a member of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity, received the UP nomination more than a week ago, but the news was withheld from publication until yesterday afternoon when the SP gave him the double endorsement.

Charlie Long is at present an outstanding member of the Student Legislature, serving on the Ways and

Title of the latest extravaganza is "What a World." Described as "a musical madhouse in two acts and heaven only knows how many scenes," the show is scheduled to go on the boards at 8 o'clock both evenings.

Directed by Don Draper, the musical will star Roy Cole and his orchestra, Dan the Dog, Carolina's leading

The Campus party completed its nominations for spring elections by presenting Marriote Stewart for vice-president of the student body, and Jack Sampson and South Trimble for Senior member to the Men's council. The party also passed favorably on a platform, which included suggestions as to the establishment of a student bank and building of a student printshop at the University.

Other objectives of the group, stated in the platform, included the improvement of janitorial service at the University, the placing of at least two telephones and at least one telephone booth in each dormitory, and several proposed improvements in the Quonset area.

The inauguration of a well intergrated plan of new student indoctrination, the establishment of a committee to study traffic safety control at the University, provision of up-to-date magazines and newspapers for the use of patients at the infirmary and improvement of recreational facilities at the University completed the platform.

Stewart, a native of Hendersonville, is former president of Phi Kappa Sigma fraternity and a past vice-president of the Interfraternity council. At present he is a member of the student budget committee and the University Dance committee.

A former student at the University of Richmond, Trimble hails from Washington, D. C., and while at Woodrow Wilson high school he was a member of the student council for three years, charman of the Panel club, and a staff member of the student publication. He is at present a member of Phi Delta Theta fraternity.

Sampson was president of his high school literary club and business manager of the school publication. He is a member of the Kappa Alpha order.

Next meeting of the Campus party is set for next Tuesday afternoon at 4:15 in the Graham Memorial Candlelight room.

Representatives Approve Entire Publications Budget

Disputed Freshman Elections Subjected To Runoff as Stated in Eller Motion

By Bookie Jabine

The Student Legislature last night allocated $4,400 for the establishment of a humor magazine to be published next year.

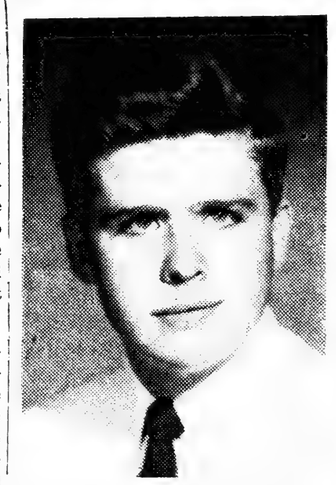
Along with the humor mag sum, the assembly approved the recommendation of Bill Mackie's Finance committee with regard to the whole publications budget. Including the $4,400, publications will operate on a budget of $72,916 from students' fees during the fiscal year 1947-48.

Breakdown of the publications allotment contains: $27,057 for the Daily Tar Heel, $6,030 for the Carolina Magazine, and $33,435 for the Yackety Yack.

Although the budget took up most of the time, the lawmakers also decided to hold a runoff in the disputed freshman election. In a motion introduced by Tom Eller, chairman of a special investigation group appointed by Charlie Warren, it was provided that the run-off be held between Steve Nimocks and Al Winn.

"It was not an issue of legalisms," said Eller. "It's just a matter of being fair."

Work on the budget proceeded smoothly, the legislators asking few questions of the Finance committee. The allotment to the Daily Tar Heel met with hardly any objections from the floor.



It was the budget of the Carolina Magazine that brought numerous questions from the legislators. The big debate was on whether or not money should be appropriated for a 32 or 24 page periodical.

Fred Jacobson, current editor of the publication, stated that he desired an additional sum from student fees for a 32 page issue. His request was denied, however, since many in the assembly thought that 24 would be enough in the event that a humor magazine was approved.

Bob Morrison, chairman of the Publications board spoke briefly on the condition of the Publications budget. He defended the organization of the group's budget against an attack made by the Finance committee. That group had scathed Morrison's group for failure to present an orderly estimate.

Said Morrison, "The Publications budget was drawn up by Mr. Lear who should know his job. I'm not defending Mr. Lear, but the Publications board as a whole."

In his report on the Ways and Means committee, Bill Miller indicated that new legislation is pending on the registration system. He pointed out that the committee had met with Mr. Lanier last week.

Charlie Long, outstanding member of the Student Legislature, yesterday received the Student party nomination for the post of vice-president of the student body.

Police Nab Convicts Near Carrboro Limits Shortly After Escape

Chapel Hill police officers, acting under recent legislation granting them five-mile jurisdiction, joined state prison camp guards in capturing two long-term convicts who grabbed a guard's gun and escaped from an Orange county road gang near Carrboro yesterday afternoon.

City officer W. D. Blake and C. L. Merritt, dispatched after guards called for aid from the scene of the escape one mile west of Carrboro on highway 54, were first to sight the fugitives, and put bloodhounds and guards from the Hillsboro prison camp on the trail.

Highway department officials identified the would-be escapees as Paul Johnson, 24, serving 20 years for second-degree murder; and James Chappel, 30, serving a 5-8 year term for robbery.

They were captured slightly over an hour after they broke away from the 17-man road gang, less than 5 miles from the scene of the escape.

6841 Students Are Enrolled In School for this Quarter

Lanier Attributes Drop to Graduates; University Accepts 300 New Students

Registration analysis figures just released by the Central Records office show a total of 6841 students enrolled in all departments of the University for the current quarter, a drop of 52 students from the 6,893 total that registered for the winter term.

In releasing the figures, Central Records office Director Edwin S. Lanier attributed the slight drop in enrollment chiefly to graduations at the end of last quarter. At the same time Roy Armstrong, Director of Admissions said that approximately 300 new students entered the University this session to fill the vacancies left by those who graduated or dropped out.

Peak Summer Seen

Information also came from the Summer Sessions admissions office headed by Dr. Guy Phillips that applications for admissions during the summer and requests for information point to a summer enrollment equalling or possibly slightly exceeding last year's record breaking registration.

For date-minded "Carolina Gentlemen" the registration breakdown still told a discouraging story of almost six men for every coed on the campus. Only 994 students of the 6841 total are women, compared with 5847 men.

Most in General College

Largest number of students, as always, was listed in General college. This department showed an enrollment of 2534 with Arts and Sciences coming second with 1799 and Commerce third with 1121.

The Graduate school showed a total of 848 (including 77 listed under Public Health and 36 listed in Social work); Law, 204; Library Science, 31; Medicine, 78; Pharmacy, 191; Public Health, 112; Social work, 36.

When broken down by classes, the registration figures gave the largest number of representatives to the junior class, 1593 members. Sophomores were second in size with 1305, freshmen had 1171, and Seniors 1094. Special students totaled 291.

Race Case May Go to United States Supreme Court

Jones Tells Mass Meeting Case May Be Test Of Bus Company's Rights of Segregation

By Sigsbee Miller

Chapel Hill's now-famous race incident of last Sunday appeared today to be headed for the United States Supreme court in an unprecedented test case to determine the validity of a transportation company's self-imposed responsibility of segregating white and Negro passengers.

At a spirited mass meeting of students and townspeople in Memorial hall yesterday afternoon, the Rev. Charles M. Jones, Chapel Hill minister who figured prominently in the Sunday incident, said the two Negroes who were arrested were charged with violation of bus company request, not with violation of the Jim Crow law.

Expressed Opinion Earlier

Earlier, Jones had expressed the belief that the case could not be decided in an inferior court but would go to the Supreme court for a final verdict.

Mounting racial tension was evidenced at the mass meeting, attended by several hundred, as a series of reports of violence and threatened violence were given. Jones, a self-avowed liberal on the racial question, said he had taken his family out of Chapel Hill barely 24 hours after the Sunday affair upon advice of police after his wife had been threatened with death by an anonymous telephone call. A previous caller had threatened to burn the Presbyterian manse. Ray Sylvester, student, reported that he along with several friends had been threatened with violence, and Martin Watkins, a disabled veteran now living in Chapel Hill, said he was assaulted by "five or six" men at the bus station after speaking to a Negro woman of slight acquaintance.

Efforts were made to have a member of the police department and one of the cab drivers, reportedly involved in the aftermath of the Sunday arrest, to attend the meeting but neither answered calls from the platform.

L. J. Phipps, former Chapel Hill judge, expressed the belief that the whole affair was "much ado about nothing."

The Negroes who were arrested, Jones said, were members of the Fellowship of Reconciliation, which has a chapter of "12 or 15" members in Chapel Hill. A group of "eight or nine" whites and Negroes came south from Washington, Jones continued, to inform Southerners of the Supreme court's 1946 ruling prohibiting segregation of passengers in inter-state commerce and, if necessary, to develop test cases.

Last Saturday, according to Jones, the F. O. R. group met with the Intercollegiate Council for Religion in Life in Chapel Hill. The Council includes students from Carolina, Duke, and North Carolina College for Negroes. The next day, attempting to leave Chapel Hill, two of the Negroes of the group were arrested and released on bond. They were taken to the home of Jones, where some of them had spent Saturday night, and were finally given a police escort to the Orange-Durham county line.

Only in Chapel Hill, Jones said, has the group met with any trouble. Since they held inter-state bus tickets, he explained, they came under the previous court ruling even on an intra-state bus.

RESPONSIVE READING—TO BE USED AT THE NEXT CELEBRATION OF "I AM AN AMERICAN" DAY

Voice from the Platform:

Four-score and seven years ago, our forefathers brought forth upon this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.

Response:

Two Negroes and two whites, opposing racial discrimination, seated themselves together in the front section of a bus, and refused to move. They were arrested and charged with disorderly conduct. Blessed be the land of the free!

Voice from the Platform:

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, that among these rights are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

Response:

Upon release, the two Negroes and the two whites were taken by a Minister of the Gospel to his home. Shortly after arriving, the minister received a telephone call warning that there would be "trouble" if the group did not leave town immediately. Hurrah for the land of the free! Blessed be the home of the brave! Where a phone call coasts a nickle, and every man's home is his castle.

Voice from the Platform:

Congress shall make no law. . .abridging the freedom of speech.

Response:

An unidentified white man was attacked by white taxi drivers at noon yesterday. Witnesses said the man had just finished conversing with a colored woman. Hurrah for our taxi drivers, who guard our freedom of speech!

Benediction:

And the Lord said, Verily I say unto you, inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, my brethern, ye have done it unto me.

Response:

The assistant pastor of the church was reported to have been the target of a group of stone throwers as he left the minister's home later that evening. Surely goodness and mercy shall follow us all the days of our lives, and we shall dwell in the house of the Lord forever.

A Full-Time Job

On a campus which is noted for an astronomical number of organizations, the demise or birth of another orgainzation is not usually anything to acknowledge editorially. This is an exception.

The Association for the Study of World Affairs, formally made its debut on Wednesday night. The occasion was a forum in Gerrard Hall, and the subject was "The Truman Doctrine." Despite the competition of Popeye in Memorial Hall, some eighty to a hundred people showed up to hear six students debate the Truman proposal to send aid to Greece and Turkey.

Orrin Magill opened the meeting, stating that the ASWA was composed of students representing all shades of political opinion , that ASWA would sponsor other forums in the future on matters of public interest. Herb Bodman moderated the sometimes immoderate participants.

For the Truman Doctrine: Bill Miller, Bill Patterson, and Jimmy Wallace. Against: Blount Stewart, Ben Rouzie, and Mannie Margolis.

The DTH wishes the new organization success, but reminds it that competition is tough. In fact under the current sparking by the CPU, its going to be a full-time job.

IRC Forum....

Writer Tells Inside Story Of Division in Conference

By Kenneth Cruse
International Relations Club Member

Southeastern chapters of the International Relations club will hold two simultaneous conferences next year to do the work hitherto done by one.

Because the UNC International Relations club feels that all students of the University are entitled to know the truth about the convention split last week at the Randolph-Macon conference, I am submitting a careful report on proceedings that led the Carolina delegation to support what it believes to be the principles of this organization.

On Friday and Saturday of last week, five delegates from UNC took part in the Southeastern Regional conference of the IRC held at Randolph-Macon college in Ashland, Virginia. Those attending were John Bristow, president of the UNC club, James Burwell, Peter Gerns, Kenneth Cruse, and Stuart Lucas.

This group took a leading part in the debate over the meeting's principle point of conflict, a decision concerning the location of next year's conference. The deep southern states of the district rightly felt that occasionally the conference should be held in the deep South. The other states of the district, while recognizing that transportation virtually barred any of the southernmost schools from participating in a conference held in the more northern states, also recognized that an interracial meeting could not and would not be held in the deep South.

A small group of schools from Tennessee, Virginia, and North Carolina, led by UNC, flatly refused to take part in any IRC convention to which Negro delegates were not invited. For this reason the district was divided into two sections—the northernmost section composed of Tennessee, Virginia, and North Carolina, the southernmost section of South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, and Mississippi.

The convention for the northern district will be held next Spring at ECTC in Greenville, N. C.—an interracial conference. The southern segment will meet at Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, Alabama—a white meeting exclusively.

In the debate preceding this split, the delegate from Fisk (the only Negro school represented) very ably presented a point that was supported by the Carolina delegation. Any meeting held without extending an invitation to Negro schools, he declared, would be a mockery of the theme of this convention, "Peace through Understanding," and of all for which the IRC stands. He pointed out that if the IRC convention is ever to rise above the state of a "dilettante tea party," no conference can be held to which Negro schools are not invited to send delegations.

The Carolina delegation fought any suggestion of a split in the region on the grounds of segregation, but when it became apparent that the split must take place, our delegation attempted to carry South Carolina into the northern district. This move was narrowly defeated.

In order that Negro schools in the southern segment might not be completely separated from the regional organization, a Carolina delegate, Peter Gerns, introduced a motion to invite all Negro schools in the southern segment to attend the conference in the northern division until such time as the legislatures in the five southern states enact legislation permitting interracial meetings, thus recognizing the fact that Negro students are entitled to participate in all the educational activities equally with white.

The proposed split in the region was first discussed in the executive committee (of which John Bristow, as vice-president of the conference and representative of the State of North Carolina, was a member). In order not to offend the Fist delegation the proposal was disguised as a move to reduce transportation difficulties. An attempt was made to enforce secrecy on the members of the executive committee regarding the substance of their discussions, and to pledge them to support the committee decisions on the floor of the general session. John Bristow led in the defeat of this attempt.

By the time the motion for the split had reached the floor of the conference, Bristow had consulted the members of the various North Carolina delegations and acquainted them with the actual reasons for the split. When the motion was introduced, James Burwell spoke heatedly and effectively against this perversion of IRC principles. Kenneth Cruse rose to announce that the University of North Carolina would object to, and never participate under any circumstances, in any segregated or otherwise non-representative meeting.

The host club exhibited, at the least, poor taste in cancelling a dance they had planned—simply because the Fisk delegation had accepted their invitation to attend the conference. Instead of the scheduled dance, the Randolph-Macon glee club presented a concert (including Negro spirituals) followed by closed dances at the various campus fraternity houses, to which all delegates except the Negroes were invited by personal verbal invitations.

Thus the split came about. The delegates from UNC acted in what they believed to be the liberal tradition of the University and for the best interests of the International Relations Clubs of the world.

At this week's IRC meeting here, the following resolution was passed unanimously:

"The members of the University of North Carolina International Relations Club uphold and approve the actions of their delegates to the southeastern IRC conference as in full accordance with the basic principles of the club."

The UNC chapter has no objection to a true regional separation on the grounds of transportation or administration, but we insist that the split be made in such a way that the transportation difficulties are relieved and no schools, colored or white, will have to send delegates to a conference outside their district.

This stand, we submit, is a basic point of principle. We take it in direct support of "peace through understanding." This understanding must begin at home to be effective.

Carolina Merry-Go-Round

By Joe Allan and Jay Foss

Although the present quarter has almost reached the halfway mark, there still can be heard grumblings about the registration system which shocked and outraged so many students just a few weeks ago. With the summer session in the not to distant future, it would be very wise to check the results of the new system in the hope of offering some constructive criticism.

There was no significant change in the number of students enrolled in the Winter quarter as compared to the number in the Spring quarter. However, in the earlier quarter 1,650 students made 3,800 course changes, while 2,022 made 4,700 changes in the Spring quarter. The considerable increase in the number of students changing courses as well as in the number of courses changed can be directly attributed to this new system.

The reasons for these changes are quite obvious and the majority can be classified under one of the following: 1) students did not get the courses they requested; 2) students often did not know what sort of course they were registering for; and 3) administrative errors.

In the light of the above observations and the fact that the Summer quarter schedules have already gone to press, the following suggestions would be of considerable value to the student and the administration in the coming registration.

I) Since the schedules do not list the instructors teaching the courses at the specified times, department heads should announce as soon as possible who is going to teach what, when.

II) At pre-registration the student should be permitted to designate the hour at which he desires to take a course, and the instructor if more than one section is taught. The registration officials should continue the priority system now in effect in order to assign courses and hours as fairly as possible.

III) A catalogue of some sort should be published which would describe each course in detail and not simply mention the number and title in passing.

All the students realize the task of registering some 7000 people is not an easy one, but it is believed that it could be greatly simplified if faculty members, students, and administration officials would cooperate to a greater degree.

Letters To The Editor

About Subsistence

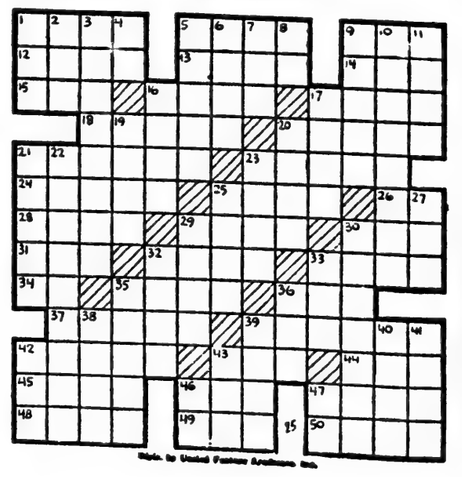
(Ed. note—the following letter was sent to a Carolina student from the Honorable Brien McMahon (D-Conn) of the U. S. Senate. Its contents should be of interest to veteran students.)

Dear Senator McMahon:

This will acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 18, 1947 addressed to the Administrator of Veterans Affairs with which you enclosed a letter from your constituent, Mr. Donald G. Shields, 7 Battle Dorm, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, North Carolina, under date of March 13, 1947, together with a cost of living survey of veterans at the University of North Carolina which was forwarded by your constituent, all relative to the provisions of Public Law 346, 78th Congress, as amended, which have been referred to this office in view of the subject matter contained therein.

The tabulation of results of a cost of living survey of veterans at the University of North Carolina accompanied with your constituent's letter has been reviewed with considerable interest. It appears that the purpose of this survey was to ascertain whether or not the rates of subsistence allowance provided under existing legislation, that is $65 a month to a veteran without a dependent or $90 a month to a veteran with one or more dependents, is sufficient to fully cover the living costs of students pursuing courses in the University of North Carolina. As you know, the intent of subsistence allowance was to provide a veteran who as a trainee resumes his education under the provisions of the statutes with a moderate measure of support during the time he pursued his education. It is not believed that it was ever intended that the amount provided would be sufficient to cover the entire cost of the veteran.

There are as you know, a number of bills now before the Congress to revise certain features of the Act. The Administration has recently appeared before committees of the Congress interested in veterans legislation and discussed the proposed amendments with the committees. It may be stated in general that a decision as to the adequacy of existing subsistance allowance is primarily one for the Congress.



Very truly yours,
H. V. STIRLING
Assistant Administrator for Vocational Rehabilitation and Education

Tar Heels Trip Cincinnati In Slugfest, 11-7

Locals At Duke For Tilt Today

Black Paces Team In 15-Hit Barrage

By Bob Goldwater

After having two tilts rained out this week, the Tar Heels finally got to play a ball game today—in the rain. And after more than two hours of wet and windy baseball on the Emerson diamond, Carolina emerged on the long end of an 11-7 slugfest with Cincinnati university.

The locals travel to Durham this afternoon to battle Duke for the second time this season. Monk Postemeart will do the hurling for the Tar Heels aiming for his fourth victory of the campaign and second in Big Four competition. He will be opposed by Bob Houghton.

Black was the big gun in the Tar Heel attack yesterday, leading the Heel batters with a perfect three for three. His three triples in the Carolina [illegible] were the only hits the Bearcats could get off the offerings of [illegible] and Bush Hardee. Hardee relieved Postemeart in the fifth inning after the Bearcats pushed across three runs in the fourth inning to take a 7-6 lead.

Carolina got off to a fast start in the first inning when Black tripled with the bases loaded. Two runs scored on the play. Black scored on a single by Branch Ryan and Beason followed with a double. Hussey walked and Gregory singled to score Beason. Harden struck out and Stevenson was safe on an error by the third baseman. Andrew walked to fill the bases and Branch was safe on an error by the pitcher, scoring Hussey. Andrew scored on a wild pitch by Hoffman.

Cincinnati got two runs in the second inning when Barbieri walked and scored on Richards' double. Richards scored on Asbury's single. Asbury was caught stealing and Nickel struck out. Hannum walked and scored on Dunning's double. Dunning was caught stealing and Barbieri struck out.

Carolina added one more run in the third inning when Black walked and scored on Branch's double. Branch was caught stealing and Ryan struck out.

Cincinnati got two more runs in the fifth inning when Barbieri walked and scored on Richards' double. Richards scored on Asbury's single. Asbury was caught stealing and Nickel struck out. Hannum walked and scored on Dunning's double. Dunning was caught stealing and Barbieri struck out.

Carolina added one more run in the fifth

NEWS BRIEFS

Russia Loses Major Battle To U.S. in U.N.

Greece to Receive Aid from America

Washington, April 18—(UP)— The UN Security council today rejected a Russian resolution to give the United Nations supervision over U. S. aid to Greece. The rejected Soviet proposal would have set up a UN commission to make sure that U. S. aid would be used only in the interests of the Greek people. This would have blocked the military aid that the U. S. proposes to send.

Defeat of the Russian proposal was a major victory for the United States and amounts to Security council endorsement of President Truman's $400 million Greek-Turkish aid program. Only Russia and Poland voted for the Soviet resolution, with Great Britain, Australia, Belgium and Brazil voting against it. The five other nations, including the U. S., declined to vote. Just before the important ballot, American Delegate Warren Austin announced that regardless of how the decision went, he would not use the veto. Austin also praised the Big Five's growing practice of abstaining from voting on measures they oppose and could kill with their veto.

The U. S. victory came immediately after this nation had won another important decision. In a nine to nothing vote, the Council approved an American resolution to keep a permanent commission in the Balkans to watch for border violations. Russia and Poland did not vote.

Greek Guerrillas Win Battle with Government

Athens, April 18—(UP)— Official circles in Athens report that the nine-day government offensive against the Greek guerrilla resistance forces has failed. These diplomatic quarters say that some 20,000 guerrillas now are fleeing north to set up a new front along the country's northern borders.

Henry Wallace Replies To Churchill's Charges

Stockholm, April 18—(UP)—Former Vice President Henry Wallace has replied to charges of Communist affiliations leveled at him by Winston Churchill. Wallace told a Swedish audience at the Stockholm university today that he refuses to be disturbed by such name calling. He said that the charges suggest that he is maneuvering against world peace and he declared that peace can never be served by name calling or hatred.

Wallace's reply to Churchill was contained in the second speech delivered in the Swedish capital. Earlier he charged that the people of both Russia and the United States are being inflamed by propaganda.

Russian Commitments Urges to Be Honored

Washington, April 18—(UP)—Two leading Washington officials have urged this country to honor its post-war lend lease commitments with Russia. Acting Secretary of State Dean Acheson describes recent congressional action in delaying lend-lease pipeline contracts as, to use his words, "Pretty tough medicine." Senate President Arthur Vandenberg says that this country should be scrupulous in keeping its word about sending the remaining lend-lease equipment to Russia.

Consider Remittance Of Verdict of Death

Baton Rouge, April 18—(UP)—The Louisiana Board of Pardons has begun considering a plea to save the life of 18-year-old Willie Francis, the Negro slayer who got only a tickle from the state's electric chair. The board is authorized to recommend that the governor change the young man's sentence from death to life imprisonment. The appeal to the board was made after the Supreme Court refused to prevent another trip to the chair for Francis.

Sigma Chi Derby To Take Place This Afternoon

New Bus Station Ceremonies To Be Held at Noon Today

Ceremonies for the opening of the new bus station will be held today at 12 noon with speeches to be delivered by President Graham, Mayor Madry, and Dewey Dorsett.

John Harden, secretary to Governor Cherry, will deliver the Governor's message and guests of honor will include U. S. Senator William B. Umstead of Durham and Bill Woestendiek, Daily Tar Heel editor.

The ceremonies will be broadcast by station WDUK from 12 to 12:30.

R. C. Hoffman, Jr., president of the Carolina Coach company, will be host for the occasion. Assisting him will be Messrs. Newton, Humphry, Johnson, Minter, the public relations director, and Curren, the local radio station manager.

Following the ceremonies there will be a conducted tour for everyone through the new station showing all the facilities.

Gordon String Quartet Will Play in Hill Hall Next Tuesday Evening

The Gordon String quartet, one of the most brilliant music ensembles in the country, will present a concert in Hill hall Tuesday evening at 8:30.

Members of the Quartet are Jacques Gordon, first violin; Urico Rossi, second violin; David Dawson, viola, and violoncello.

The concert is being sponsored by the University music department with the cooperation of the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge foundation of the Library of Congress in Washington.

The public is invited and guest tickets may be obtained from the office of Hill hall any time between now and Tuesday. Seats will be reserved for the holders of guest tickets until 8:20 Tuesday evening, after which the general public will be admitted.

In addition to playing the standard chamber music repertoire, the quartet has introduced works by such noted composers as Schoenberg, Malipiero, Milhaud, Casella, Respighi, Faure, Glazounow, Eugene Goosens, Arnold Bax, Sowerby, Bloch, Emerson Whithorne, Hanson and Vaughan Williams.

The quartet's program will include Brahm's "Quartet in C Minor," "L'Oracion del Torero," by Turina; a quartet movement in C minor (unfinished) by Schubert; and Beethoven's "Quartet in B Flat Major."

Weil Lectures Set Wednesday

Yale Speaker to Talk On Political Economy

The Weil Lectures on American Citizenship will be delivered in Hill Music hall at 8:30 next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings by Professor Walton Hamilton of the Yale University School of Law.

C. B. Robson, chairman of the University committee on lectures and convocations, describes Professor Hamilton as a "person of a great deal of wit and presence as a public speaker in addition to being a scholar of unusual attainments in the fields of economics, law and political science."

General Subject

The general subject of the lecture series will be "The Return to Political Economy." Sub-topics to be delivered on subsequent evenings will be "The State Goes Economic," "The Economy Goes Political," and "Union of State and Economy."

Professor Hamilton, lecturer for the series, is an economist by training in addition to being a member of the bar and a professor in one of the nation's leading law schools.

Although the Weil Lectures were not delivered during the past year they have been an annual feature of the public lecture program. They were established through Messrs. Sol and Henry Weil, of Goldsboro. The series was inaugurated by the then ex-President William Howard Taft.

Make plans now to attend the gala Monogram Club Blue and White football game in Kenan Stadium next Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Roy Cole and his 14-piece campus orchestra will provide the music for the crowning of "The Sweetheart of Sigma Chi" tonight in Woollen gymnasium at 9 o'clock. The formal hop is the climax for the third annual Sigma Chi Derby slated for this afternoon.

DTH Brewmasters Dunk Dook Easily For Second Victory

By Jud Allen and Ed Kinberg

"Why it wasn't even close."

"Carolina's athletic teams broke even yesterday in two contests with Duke. Our victory came when the undefeated, untied and uncoated Daily Tar Heel Chug-A-Luggers left their Duke Chronicle opponents literally foaming at the mouth in beering through to a thumping three-lap victory. Hogan's Lake was the scene of the latest triumph for the superbly-conditioned DTH aggregation.

It was an inspired Tar Heel team that came through to win the meet. In their pre-game dressing room talk, the Schlitz sextet cried in their beer as Coach Knute Woestenburp exhorted, "Let's win this one for the Schaaper!" The veteran mentor of many beer bottles was referring to One-Snort Mort Schaap, Tar Heel ace who was absent. Ugly rumor had it that he was misdirected by Duke spies and ended up at Annapolis, Md., at game time.

In a wire to the dressing room, the grateful Schaaper said, "I'm longing for my old Kentucky foam."

Drinking in the anchor position in place of Schaap was Al (Pretzels) Kauffman, who sealed the UNC victory thirty seconds ahead of Duke's last stumbling brew battler. Although drinking with a taped-up esophagus, Tar Heel No. 2 man, Ed Allen, started and ended in his same position—horizontal.

It was the Kruger-to-Nave pass which won the 1939 Rose Bowl game for Southern Cal. Yesterday it was Krueger-to-stomach operation which won for UNC. Shifted to the shock-troops position, Sam Daniels led off the Tar Heels. Number three was Jarrin' Jud Kinberg, who was accused of feeding most of his liquid to some kegnine who claimed to be Dan the Dog's mother. Earl Heffner, stomach and all, came up in the number four position, but only after the DTH was legally across the tape. Eager Ed Joyner drank number five, with Kauffman finishing with a flourish.

Funfest Starts at Fetzer Field at 2:30; Sweetheart Ball Planned for Tonight

By Sam Whitehall

The third annual Sigma Chi derby funfest will take place on Fetzer field this afternoon, with five sororities and the CICA competing in the coed classic. The first event is slated to start at 2 o'clock and in case of rain the events will be held in Woollen gymnasium.

Following the derby this afternoon the new "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi" will be introduced at the formal Sweetheart ball in Woollen gymnasium tonight. Roy Cole and his orchestra will play at the dance, which starts at 9 o'clock, and is open to the public. No admission will be charged for either the derby or the ball, both under the sponsorship and direction of the local Alpha Tau chapter of Sigma Chi fraternity.

"The biggest, happiest derby ever" has been planned by the committee in charge and indications point towards just that this afternoon. Seven events are on tap for the event, which has been planned about a racetrack theme and will be broadcast over a public address system to help keep the audience up with the proceedings on the field.

The first event will give the coeds a chance in the egg and spoon relay, to be followed by a good, old-fashioned pie-eating contest. The women will then participate in a potato sack race. The domestic handicap, one of the secret events, a series of five-minute humorous skits, and the Sigma Chi claiming, another humorous race on which details have been withheld will make up the afternoon's schedule, along with the Modern Venus contest. The coed group scoring the most points will win the 1947 derby championship.

Twenty-one lovely coeds representing sororities and dormitories have been nominated to compete for the honor of becoming the "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi" for the coming year. The winner and her two hand-maidens will be presented and decorated during the figure at the ball tonight. Miss Martha McClenaghan, of Shreveport, Louisiana, won the title last spring.

Feature attraction of the afternoon will be the "Miss Modern Venus" bathing beauty contest. A committee of five judges, consisting of leading campus figures in student government will judge the leading coed figures. Dewey Dorsett, student body president, Jack Fitch, football wingback, Bob Paxton, basketball star, and Roland Giduz, DTH managing editor have been selected to judge the contest.

Annual Fete For May Day Set on May 4

The Forest theatre will be the scene of the annual celebration of May day which gets underway Sunday afternoon, May 4 at 5 o'clock, announced Margaret Jean Taylor, president of the Pan Hellenic council.

The May Pole Dance will be performed along with other traditional May day activities and elaborate plans have been made for costuming and decorations.

Highlights of the afternoon will be the coronation of the May queen and her court, who were chosen by secret ballot in an election held during the Winter quarter. Results of the election will remain a secret until May day. All coeds in the senior class were eligible for the contest.

This annual event, sponsored by the CICA and the Pan Hellenic council, has named the following chairmen to head committees in charge of arrangements: Bootsie McWilliams, decorations and finances; Estelle Boyce, publicity; Margo Martin, dances; Norma Hotard, program and pictures; Nina Mae De Berry, costumes; Chi Delta Phi, pageant; Bill Lloyd, equipment; Betty Ann Barbee, flowers. Ushers will be members of last year's Pan Hellenic council.

Naval Scientists Discuss Research

Two representatives of the Special Devices center of the Office of Naval Research of Sands Point, Long Island, spent yesterday at the Communication center, discussing television plans with Center officials. Director Earl Wynn said yesterday. The pair, Dr. Leonard Mead, head of the Human Engineering and Author Hungerford, head of the radar sections at Sands Point, were talking over the possibility of working the University into their research programs.

"It is hoped," said Director Wynn, "that the Communication center will be able to conduct research programs for the office of Naval Research in the field of television."

Further talks on this matter will be held in the future, both here and in Long Island.

Fire Causes No Damage At Home of Sherrill

Acrid smoke which filled the Hillsboro street home of Prof. R. A. Sherrill puzzled Chapel Hill firemen late yesterday afternoon until a lively search revealed a burning mop hidden in a closet as the source. Fire Chief J. S. Boone said spontaneous combustion was responsible for the slight blaze, which caused no damage.

TEP Takes Academic Lead; Pi Beta Phi Wins Second

There was an intellectual division among campus Greeks yesterday as the Dean of Men's office released the list of the academic standings of fraternities and sororities for the fall quarter. Leading the list in the number one position was Tau Epsilon Phi, while the five sororities placed in the top seven positions.

Second smartest as a group was Pi Beta Phi, and third was Pi Lambda Phi. Then in quick succession came Alpha Gamma Delta, Chi Omega, Alpha Delta Pi, and Delta Delta Delta, indicating that first-rate gray-matter resides beneath the flowing locks of Carolina coeds.

Number eight was Zeta Psi, number nine was Zeta Beta Tau, number 10, Phi Gamma Delta, 11, Delta Psi, 12, Phi Delta Theta, 13, Phi Kappa Sigma, 14, Pi Kappa Alpha, 15, Kappa Alpha, and 16, Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

Then, dragging their quiz books behind them, came Beta Theta Pi in 17 place, Alpha Tau Omega in 18 place, Lambda Chi Alpha in 19, Delta Kappa Epsilon in 20, Chi Psi in 21, Sigma Chi in 22, Sigma Nu in 23, Chi Phi in 24, and Kappa Sigma in 25.

The list was compiled in the office of the Dean of Men from the fall scholastic averages of all the members of the Greek-letter organizations.

S and F Production Set for Monday, Tuesday

Show Is Complete From 'Soup to Nuts'

By Barron Mills

Everything from soup to nuts, including a chorus line of 10 campus cuties and a skit featuring members of the football squad, will be included in "What a World" Monday and Tuesday evenings at 8 o'clock in Memorial hall.

Many campus celebrities including Dan the Dog, DTH columnist Jud Kinberg's ghost writer, have been contracted by the S&F directors to be on hand when the curtain goes up on the musical madhouse.

Roy Cole and his orchestra with the latest campus crooner, John Shearin, will furnish the musical background of the production which has been in rehearsal since the beginning of the term, under the direction of Don Draper.

Sound and Fury President, Bill Carmichael, in announcing the plot of the musical stated, "We've got everything: it would be impossible to give an accurate account of what we don't include. Our admission charge does not include insurance on the audience."

The sexational part of the show will be the bevy of campus chorus girls. Members of the S and F troupe refused to release their type of costumes or names for publication since it is to be the big "surprise of the opening night."

Roy Cole Orchestra Will Provide Music

First and Only

"What a World" is the first and only Sound and Fury production of this year. The group has met many difficulties in order to stage the production which has been termed, "the best on campus in some time."

Tickets at 75 cents each will go on sale in the Y Monday and may also be obtained from any Sound and Fury members.

Selden Will Select Actors For Lost Colony Production

Samuel Selden, who has directed The Lost Colony since it opened 10 years ago, will be in Manteo today to cast the more than a hundred speaking roles played in the drama by native Roanoke Islanders.

John A. Walker, general manager of the production, explained that the local casting was being done early this year in order to speed preparations for the 1947 season, which begins July 1 and ends September 1, with 49 performances scheduled. The technical staff will arrive June 1, rehearsals will begin June 12, and the Westminster choir, which has sung the powerful music of the symphonic drama since the beginning, will arrive June 19.

UNC Students in Cast

The local casting will be done on a Saturday in order to give the many college students from this section an opportunity to try out for roles as dancers, Indians, colonists and members of Queen Elizabeth's court. Several prospective cast members from the Manteo aera are enrolled at the University. The meeting will be held at the Dare county courthouse at 8 p.m.

Local talent has been outstanding in the production since it opened on July 4, 1937, in the Waterside theatre at Fort Raleigh, three miles north of Manteo. Walker said that this summer Director Selden, who is head of the dramatic art department at the University, would provide courses in the drama, acting and stage technique for the Roanoke Islanders. Plans for this instruction will be announced when he goes to Manteo April 18. It is expected that the professional actors who are members of the cast, and experts from the Carolina Playmakers, will form the faculty which will conduct the courses written by Green.

Expression or Suppression

It was disturbing to notice the open suppression of thought and action in Memorial hall Friday afternoon at the meeting called for the purpose of learning the facts on the recent violence.

This newspaper does not desire to stir up troubled waters or create unnecessary agitation, but we do feel that the undeniable rights of many people to express an opinion and pass a resolution was thwarted by a few people who openly opposed the taking of any action.

Apparently the reason for this desire to prevent any resolution from being passed grows from a fear that the reputation of the University may become spotted as a result. In our opinion, the act and threatened acts of violence created the black mark. Nothing done at the meeting would have been responsible for that.

A group of liberal-minded citizens wanted to pass a resolution of some kind against the actions of the past several days. Yet several of the University's and town's leading citizens discouraged and voted against a resolution of any kind.

Their actions can be interpreted as a direct violation of the American principle of freedom of expression. Such actions should not be condoned. Freedom of expression is an inalienable right of every American citizen. Suppression of this freedom is more un-American than any expression of opinion, be it right or wrong.

Of far greater harm to the University than anything resulting from freedom of thought and speech are occurrences of suppression like the one that took place at Thursday's mass meeting.

Killer at Large

If you knew that a murderer was at large in Chapel Hill and planned on killing one out of every eight students on this campus, what would you do?

A silly question? Perhaps. Of course your immediate reply is that you'd take steps to see that he was caught before he could do any harm, if possible. At any rate, no effort or cost would be spared to track him down and get rid of him.

Now change the locale slightly, apply the same situation to the national scene. The problematical aspect is eliminated. Cold, hard facts replace it.

For there is a national murderer on the loose. Cancer will kill ONE out of every EIGHT Americans this year unless steps are taken to prevent it, to conquer and eliminate this dreaded disease that kills cruelly and impartially.

Cancer is a more dreadful and stronger enemy than any human. It is the great medical and health problem of the age. It must be combatted at every turn and it must be done immediately.

April has been designated by Governor R. Gregg Cherry as Cancer Control month, who called upon all citizens and organizations of the state to aid and support the work of the American Cancer society.

The American Cancer society, with funds contributed by the public, is undertaking to teach every citizen the facts about cancer and the need for early diagnosis and treatment. Only through increased knowledge can cancer be conquered.

Do your share in ridding the nation of one of its most deadly killers.

What people change into is more important than what they change from.

To be sorry for your mistakes is good. To say so is better.

The Legend of the Hellenic Knight

By Robert Morrison
(With Apologies to Edmund Spenser)

The Knight doth spread his politics
And for a fight full yearns,
As always, Dragon does not win
And yet a moral learns.

A gentle Knight was pricking on the plain,
All dressed in shirt and tie and slicked-down hair;
All cares aside it seemed that he had lain
And was fully ready all the world to dare:
He was away to all the wrong repair
And win himself a mighty victory
And make all enemies of his despair
And win the hand of his most fair lady:
Whose name was finest Hellas, praised from sea to sea.

On his lapel he wore three symbols strange,
Although a scholar could them recognize
And with a little thought them simply change
To letters from the Greek—a great surprise
For little hint of learning gave his guise
And on his shirt he wore a studded pin:
Quite like a lady who fruitlessly tries
A high-up social climbing to begin
By some device—like too much make-up—cheap and thin.

There was a dragon he had planned to fight:
A dragon great of every ugly hue.
And so he sallied forth into the night,
Full armed with cards and handbills in full view.
He entered Stacy dorm where was the stew,
And found the dragon bathed in lethargy;
The dragon's name was Antifrat (a clue),
And was as loath to fight as was to flee.
The Knight threw forth the propaganda thick and free!

"We've got the man," quoth Knight, "to do the job,"
And we'll pledge better government for all!"
"And we'll not pledge your lousey frats," a mob
Did shout which has assembled in the hall.
"We'll fight the Knights and Greeks until they fall,
And damned be you and praised be Antifrat."
And up the dragon jumped and did not stall:
He sneered the Knight and quoth, "You damn blind bat Get out of here and back to where you once were at!"

And Antifrat, his mob, and all did jest
That they had saved themselves from any harm,
And so they hit their sacks and got their rest
And well did know their candidates were best.
They saw the right, and followed it, by zooks!
And never did King Antifrat detest.
They drank their beer and studied well their books,
And time passed by, and victory was in their looks.

On hustings day their lethargy remained.
The Knight had worked full well both night and day,
And there was not a nook by him unstained:
While Antifrat within his dorm had stayed.
When ballots counted were—pledges obeyed:
The Knight had won, and Antifrat did bleed;
That Knight's forces had him defeated made.
And so it was the Knight had done his deed,
And satisfied his lust, and fully quenched his greed.

And knights will always win, and dragons lose,
For dragons sleep and knights do always ride:
It is the way of life, we can not choose
But dragons' deaths—don't care how tough their hide.
The right and wrong and feelings down inside
Don't matter, it's just whether you're a knight
Or dragon—way of things is not defiied.
The dragon loses—don't respect his might;
If dragon you should be, there is no need to fight!

Letters To The Editor

Sad State

Dear Editor:

I attended both Memorial Hall meetings today and stayed until the second meeting adjourned. Before the first adjourned, the speaker said very openly and honestly there would be a second meeting for those desiring action on the matter previously discussed. Though Mr. Lanier and others misunderstood the speaker, the point was made openly, nonetheless.

There were objections to the effect that "Christians should act for peace and not become involved in actions creating dissension and misunderstanding" and "the motion might be taken as representative of the University's attitude, an indication unfair to the school." To the first, I can only remark that Jesus Christ performed many actions which have caused misunderstanding ever since His time. One had might as well quarrel with Absolute Reality for not being obvious to fools.

Things have reached a poor state when creative-minded individuals can't make resolutions without being forced to conform to a self-complacent majority. I was shocked to see leading citizens of Chapel Hill vote abritrarily against any resolution. What is the state of our courage and faith if we cut off our chances of creative action simply from fear of giving wrong impressions? The rest of America has been shown that certain persons act violently against those with broad racial sympathies. Are we to be allowed to show that Chapel Hill citizens disapprove these manifestations of ignorance? Angry defiance solves no issue. But determined and perseverant creative action—inward as well as outward—can prove to ourselves, if none else, that we believe in our democratic faith as deeply as in our flag. Had the majority in Memorial Hall been courageous enough to evidence this faith, no sterile adjournment would have been forced.

Sincerely,
BILL MCGIRT.

Strictly Detrimental....

Creation of Humor Magazine Should Please All Students

By Dan The Dog
As Dictated to Jud Kinberg

The front page of this morning's Daily Tar Heel was as pleasant a vista as the jaundiced eye has seen in yea these many days. At this time of Spring, the pipes of Pan, the beer of Bock, two news articles in particular promised much mirth and merriment for the preasant and future.

First was the lead story announcing that the Legislature has allocated filthy lucre enough to get the humor magazine started back on its way at the University of North Carolina. The plan, which calls for four issues a year, seems like a most sensible one and the solons are to be congratulated on their acumen.

Many who would decry a humor publication do so because they feel that high-speed, under-pressure writing seems to lack the spontaneity so necessary to elicit a belly-laugh or two. By scheduling four laughter-lampoons each school year, all of us who would scatter bon mots to the wind will now have a chance to create in leisurly fashion.

I understand from Dan the Dog, who does all the humorous portions of Strictly Detrimental, that such leisure plus a little bit of brew and brain-motion is guaranteed to produce humor of the type wanted by the customers—the men and women of Carolina.

Once again, a most hearty welcome to the new humor magazine. Those of us who wished for success of the bill in the Legislature were right happy at the turn of events Thursday evening. With proper guidance, the new publication should soon merit all faith shown in it at the meeting. So it's a god speed, healthy future and "Roger, Tear, Victor."

"Boy, where are those old gags we were saving for just such an opportunity as a humor magazine? We know, the one about the Arab, moonlight and the coed:

Coed: My, you Arabs certainly do love intense.

Arab: Yes, we do most everything else in tents, too.

* * *

The other bit of brightness (our alliteration is showing) was headlined, "New S&F Show Will Be Presented Monday Evening." From what we've learned from Dan the Dog—who is said to play the male lead—it promises to be an outstanding bit of foolery and fun.

"What a World" is the title and unless Dan is pulling our tail, just about everything including Memorial Hall roof will be coming down before the end of the evening. News that S&F is finally getting on stage with a production is heartening to those who watched it slowly roll to a halt at the beginning of this quarter when cast defections thinned the ranks far below par.

There is as definite a need for Sound and Fury, with its light musical, to complement the Playmakers as there is for the Humor Magazine to complement the Carolina Mag. It seems the spring has finally brought this budding realization to full bloom and given us the best news about the fate of humor on campus since somebody put the wrong cutline under the wrong picture on the wrong page on the wrong day.

IDEA OF THE DAY: Let the student body name the new humor magazine by popular write-ins in the coming election. It should serve to liven the election and also get a popular name for the publication.

Summer French House To Offer Five Courses

Five courses in French conversation, grammar, and civilization will be taught in the third annual session of the University's French House this summer, according to a bulletin just released by Prof. Hugo Giduz, director of the House since its founding in 1945.

The six weeks (June12-July22) intensive study of French, according to Professor Giduz, affords "an excellent opportunity for students and teachers to improve their use of the spoken language."

Assisting him in this institute, to be housed at 407 East Rosemary street, will be Jacques Hardre teacher of French at the University, and Charlotte V. Huse, instructor in French at the Calvert school in Durham.

Tar Heels Lose To Duke, 5-4, In 11 Innings

Houghton Bests Whiteheart In Overtime Pitching Duel

Blue Devils Take Lead in Big Four Race; Carolina Nine Plays at Wake Forest Today

By Bob Goldwater

COOMBS PARK, Durham, April 18—Carolina's Monk Whiteheart and Duke's Bob Houghton engaged in an 11-inning mound duel here this afternoon before the Blue Devil ace tallied the winning run himself to give his team a 5-4 triumph and the leadership in the Big Four race.

The Tar Heels seek to return to the [illegible] column tomorrow when they [illegible] to Wake Forest for their brush with the Deacons. Southpaw Vinnie D'Alonzo will be on the firing line for Carolina and will probably be [illegible] by Elmer Sexauer.

[illegible] the two-team total of 15 [illegible] yesterday's contest definitely qualifies as a battle between the two [illegible] hurlers, with neither club [illegible] more than two hits in any frame. But where Whiteheart showed signs of weakening in the [illegible]ings, Houghton grew stronger [illegible] games progressed and retired [illegible] last 12 batters in order.

Long Double

[illegible] Houghton who initiated the [illegible] proceeding that led to Duke victory. First man up in [illegible] frame, the Blue Devil hurler surprised the crowd of some 4,000 by [illegible]ging a long double over Whitey [illegible]'s head. Bakie Palmer's infield sacrifice went for a single with [illegible]ton taking third, and Art Vann was passed purposely to set up a possible play at the plate.

With the bases full of Devils, Al [illegible] watched three balls and one strike sail by, then fouled off the fifth pitch and finally strolled on the 3-2 count to push Houghton across with the game-breaking tally.

Carolina came within a whisker of winning the game in the 10th stanza as Whiteheart pitched his way out of trouble. Bud Avers led off with a single that fell into short left field for two bases. John Falwell's ground-out to second advanced the prospective tying run to third but Whiteheart bore down to retire the next batters.

Carolina Takes Lead

The Tar Heels jumped off to two [illegible] without a hit in the second inning to take the lead. Jack Hussey was hit on the arm by a curve that broke the wrong way and John Gregory walked. After Bo Hackney skied [illegible] for the first out, Buster Stevenson reached first on a fielder's choice [illegible] failed to catch Gregory at second. Whiteheart fanned for the second out but shortstop Falwell bobbled Black's grounder and two runs came across.

Duke made one of these back in the [illegible]ottom of the second when Hank Smith, who collected three hits, batted in three runs and pilfered two bases, slammed a homer into the left-field hedges 340 feet from home plate.

The Tar Heels increased the margin to 4-1 in the fourth but Duke sliced it to 4-3 in the fifth by virtue of two unearned runs. The Blue Devils finally tied the score in the seventh when Smith's third hit sent Vann across. That ended the scoring until Houghton's game-winning tally.

DIAMOND DUST: Black again led the Tar Heels at the plate, garnering two hits in five trips. . .Houghton fanned eight and Whiteheart seven . . .Carolina now has 1-1 in Big Four play and the same record with Duke this season.

Make plans now to attend the gala Monogram Club Blue and White football game in Kenan Stadium next Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Tracksters Seek Revenge In Middie Tussle Today

By Morty Schaap

Annapolis, Md., April 18.—The Tar Heel track caravan arrived here on the banks of the Severn and went through light drills this afternoon in preparation for the meet with Navy in Thompson stadium at 2:30 tomorrow afternoon.

All the boys on the squad appear anxious to avenge the huge scores run up at the Tar Heel's expense during the war years.

Navy is reputedly very strong in the sprints and low hurdles, and it sports a wealth of material in the distance events. Their field strength lies in the pole vault, high jump, javelin and broad jump, and in order to emerge victorious the coaches have instructed the boys on the team that they must come up with second and third place points in order to win.

The same stadium was the scene of the IC4A championships last year when Chunk Simmons finished second in the high hurdles and third in the lows; Mark Burnham captured second place in the mile run, Norm McLeod vaulted into fourth place.

It is the same place also that the Carolina cross country squad opened their highly successful season last fall by trouncing the highly vaunted Middies.

Netters After 11th Triumph

Kenfield Charges Meet Navy Today

Annapolis, Md., April 18—The powerful University of North Carolina tennis team, coached by the nationally known net mentor John Kenfield, arrived here late tonight and will furnish the opposition for the Navy netters here tomorrow afternoon beginning at 3 o'clock.

Carolina, holding victories to date over such outstanding teams as Yale, Cornell, Michigan, Haverford and Colgate, will be favored to take the dual match, which is one of the toughest on the schedule for the Middies this season.

The Carolina varsity tennis reserves play the Greensboro tennis club on the local courts this afternoon at 3:15 o'clock.

Vic Seixas of Philadelphia, who is well known in these parts, will be in the No. 1 position for the Tar Heels, and he will face a former North Carolinian in Harvey Jagoe. The No. 2 Tar Heel, Clark Taylor, is also expected to make himself conspicuous in the contest both in his singles play and in doubles. He teams with Seixas to make up the top Carolina doubles team.

Other Tar Heels who are set for action are Jim Nicholson, Charlie Rice, Don Skakle and Jack Kenfield. Dick Swigart, Heath Alexander and Bert Ingram. Manager Don Paley also made the trip.

Ten consecutive foes have already fallen before the Tar Heels in opening season home contests, and the Kenfield charges return to their home grounds for two more Southern conference matches—with Wake Forest and State—before starting another northern swing that will bring them to New York, West Point, Amherst, Mass., and New Haven, Conn.

Sigma Chi Picks Jo Benton Sweetheart; Tri Delts Capture Sigma Chi Derby

Calendar Queen Is Evelyn Pettit

A fast finish by the coeds of the Delta Delta Delta sorority gave the Tri Delts a thrilling victory in the third annual running of the Sigma Chi derby on Fetzer field yesterday afternoon.

Evelyn Pettit, blonde venus of the Tri Delts, provided the margin of victory for the winners when she won the title of Sigma Chi Calendar Girl of 1947 in the final event.

A card of seven events amused a large crowd throughout the hot afternoon as coeds representing the five different sororities and the CICA competed in seven laugh-packed events for top honors.

Flying Start

Pi Phi's high-spirited entries got off to a flying start and built up a lead over the second place Phi Delts prior to the final and feature event, selection of the calendar girl beauty queen.

Lovely lassies stumbled and sprawled through egg and spoon relay, pie-eating contest, and potato sack race with a minimum of speed and a maximum of laughs. Two surprise events, the domestic handicap—a dishwashing frolic—and the Sigma Chi claiming—a lifesaver-on-a-toothpick relay, also kept the crowd in high humor and the girls in happy confusion.

Five judges, selected from leading campus personalities, judged a series of humorous skits in the next to last event of the afternoon. The ADPi's walked off with top honors in the skit with a laugh-packed, well-produced show about Goldilocks and the three beer-drinking bears.

Chief Interest

Chief interest of the afternoon centered about choice of the Sigma Chi Calendar Girl which featured outstanding campus lovevlies in a contest of charm. After much debate and serious consideration, the judges selected Evelyn Pettit as winner with Mickey Derieux, ADPi, second, and BeBe McGee, Alpha Gam, third.

The Calendar Girl received a crown of flowers and a gold cup. The winning sorority was presented with a silver cup. Runners up to the victorious Tri Delts were the Pi Phis, with the ADPi's placing third.

S and F New Musical May Even Be Surprise To Members of Troupe

By Barron Mills

"There will be seats and entertainment for all when the curtains go up on "What a World" in Memorial hall tomorrow night at 8 o'clock," stated Bill Carmichael, president of the Sound and Fury troupe which is sponsoring the production.

The S and F what-have-you-production, which has been in rehearsal since the beginning of the term, has been defined as containing everything from drama to slapstick. Members of the production have stated that they honestly do not know what is coming off in the performance since each time "something else that isn't in the script is added."

Shearin Will Sing

Roy Cole and his 14-piece campus orchestra will paint the musical scenery for the production and John Shearin, S&F's own vocal discovery will be the featured crooner.

Highlights in the entertainment include a skit by members of the football team, a personal appearance of the old campus favorite of the canine world (Dan the Dog).

C. Hunter, head, Converse College Education department, for courses here in the study of child growth and development; Dr. Paul S.

CP Platform Planks

(This is the second of a series of editorials, each analyzing a particular platform of a political party on campus. First, the Student party platform was dissected. Today, the Campus party goes under the microscope. When the University party platform is released, it too shall undergo the rigors of close scrutiny.—The Editor.)

Ambition has been described by a former University student as the greatest curse of Man. It has afflicted the Campus party in its oaken platform. As a result, the party deserves commendation for challenging the curse and seeking vast campus improvements.

Outstanding piece of oak is the plank suggesting the establishment and the building of a student printshop. While this project is in the Shangri-la of the future, it can never be brought into the present by inactivity. Thus, Campus party politics earn admiration for opening the movement.

Of nearly equal importance will be the proposed inauguration of a well integrated plan of student indoctrination with its correlated establishment of a committee to study traffic control and provision of up-to-date magazines and newspapers for the use of patients at the infirmary.

Each of the above planks are sturdy pieces of timber well worth intensive study and action.

Good planks, but not of the above quality, is the proposed establishment of a student bank. Such an institution could serve a vital function. Its establishment would constitute a boon to the University.

Improvement of recreational facilities, proposed improvements in the Quonset area, and improvement in the janitorial service are high sounding phrases which may contain concrete details and recognition of problems facing the University. It is to be hoped that they do, that they are not vote-gathering propaganda.

Quonset improvements and higher quality of janitorial service are needed. Yet, the University is striving for these improvements. Suggestions, rather than demands, would seem to be in order at this time. This latter statement would seem to apply to recreational facilities as well.

Therefore, these planks may be considered good if they are backed by concrete ideas, poor if they have no substantial basis.

Lastly, the proposed placing of at least two telephones and at least one telephone booth in each dormitory seems to be an unfair slap at the administration.

Often DAILY TAR HEEL reporters have been told that telephones are being placed in the dormitories as rapidly as the machines are available.

The war produced a major shortage in instruments. The shortage, like most others, still exists. Even doctors, the saviours of the body, have difficulty getting the instruments for business. Is it more important that we have instruments for calling Jane Coed without having to wait? No!

The DAILY TAR HEEL suggests that this latter plank, a termite-ridden piece of wormwood be coffinized.

For the most part, the Campus party has an excellent platform showing intensive thought. Perhaps the election is drawing so close that equal attention could not be given to all planks. So, in spite of these latter warpings, the party deserves high praise for a platform of exceptional quality.

It is to be hoped that emphasis by the party will be placed on the important feature, thus nullifying the unimportant ones.—Earl Heffner.

The real clash these days is not between right and left, but between right and wrong.

People, like boats, toot loudest when they're in a fog.

Fear Prompts U.S. to Scorn Wallace Plan

By Manny Margolis

Henry Wallace, private citizen U. S. A., has gone to Europe on invitation to speak on American foreign policy. He has been charging that powerful forces in this country have launched the United States on a "mad nightmare" of "ruthless imperialism."

Newspapers at home have been vitriolic in their criticism of this tour. Allegations and charges have ranged all the way from "crackpot" to "liar" to "un-American" to "Communist."

But the Europeans themselves apparently consider him none of these. Mallory Browne, reporting in last Sunday's N. Y. Times admitted that "not since Wendell Willkie visited London under the bombs in 1941 has any private citizen of the United States received such a welcome as that now being given to Henry A. Wallace by the people of Britain."

Mr. Browne, London correspondent for the Times, goes on to say—and this is of utmost significance!—that the British people "have given a warm and enthusiastic welcome not only to the former American Vice President as a man but also to his idea."

This idea has been revolving about several elements:

1. That an understanding of and with the Soviet Union is less apt to lead to atomic war than Truman's "tough line."

2. That in a choice between the Truman Doctrine and the United Nations, he unhesitatingly supports the latter.

3. That peoples cannot be bought, but that they can and must be fed.

4. That the Truman Doctrine is a smokescreen for a vast network of U. S. economic imperialism throughout the world.

Why, then, this warm reception in Britain for a man so thoroughly condemned by people "in high places" in his own country? Two answers. Our President, our Congress, and our press and radio fear his ideas; the British and the Europeans, on the other hand, welcome them as the more desirable, more feasible road to peace.

Moreover, American public opinion is in the grip of an anti-Soviet hysteria. This is not at all the case in Great Britain. In fact, a careful reader might very easily have been shocked by a certain insignificant-looking news item in the March 27th issue of the New York Times. It disclosed that the various units of the Labor Party Conference in Britain had submitted 21 resolutions for the annual Labor Party Conference in May. Of these, says the report, "eight urge closer affiliation with the Soviet Union; none advocate drawing away from it."

Typical of such resolutions, the Times continues, is the following: "That subservience to capitalist America will inevitably draw us into an anticipated coming slump and that the only way to avoid this situation is to cooperate with the planned economy countries such as the Soviet Union, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Poland, etc."

Thus, the paradox of a man admonished at home and welcomed abroad becomes more easily understood.

In the meantime, this strange and dynamite-laden American foreign policy has its repercussions at home, as well. Civil and economic liberties are being placed in increasing jeopardy. There are loyalty orders, restrictive labor legislation, proposals to outlaw political parties, formulas for the curtailment of free discussion. Different ideas, such as those of Mr. Wallace, suddenly become "dangerous."

All this in the name of unity. And yet, the nation is at peace. Is unity so dear or power so vital as to be purchased at such exorbitant prices? Will the American political "consumer" accept such a "high cost of living"?

Shakespeare said, "In time we HATE that which we often FEAR." Franklin Roosevelt said, "The only thing we have to fear is fear itself." Both men were right.

Make plans now to attend the gala Monogram Club Blue and White football game in Kenan Stadium next Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Letters To The Editor

For the Dean

Sirs:

I should like to use this means to call public attention to certain commendable actions on the part of Dean of General College. Although this department must certainly be harried by overwhelming amounts of work under difficult conditions, still they have taken the time to sit down and write individual letters of commendation to students doing exemplary work in their studies; and not only have they congratulated the students, but have actually written similar letters to the various families concerned. Perhaps it seems but a small thing, but to me it is a great satisfaction to find such instances of individualized attention among 7,000 students.

A student who is doing his best may not ask nor expect such commendations, but that only makes it all the more gratifying to know that effort and high standards are appreciated and encouraged INDIVIDUALLY by university officials. To me it is a sign that war-time conditions are giving way to the better conditions of peace. This is a major step in that direction.

Sincerely,
Frank J. Matthews

Two Resolutions

To The Editor:

After the facts on violence had been presented and discussed at the Thursday meeting in Memorial Hall, the chairman asked that those interested in taking action on the facts remain, and declared the meeting adjourned. About a half or a third of the audience remained, and the chairman asked for proposals or resolutions. Mr. Lanier said, in a highly emotional speech, that he suspected a trick by which a substantial part of the audience had been eliminated so that a minority clique could force through resolutions and misrepresent the student body.

Later discussion revealed that he had not heard the chairman announce the plan to discuss action, but Mr. Lanier made no apology or retraction. Many people felt that after such an attack on the integrity of the chair and much of the remaining audience, any action taken by the meeting would be "smeared" in advance. Finally the meeting adjourned without resolutions even being heard.

We of course do not know all of the resolutions which might have been presented, but for the information of the public, we wish to state that we were going to present these two:

(1) "That this meeting ask the Chapel Hill Board of Aldermen to investigate the adequacy of the Chapel Hill police force to protect students and citizens from violence."

(2) "That this meeting ask the Mayor and the Board of Aldermen of Chapel Hill to request the aid of the State Bureau of Investigation in apprehending and prosecuting those persons responsible for the recent assaults on, and threats to, students and citizens."

Reverend Jones was told by the police that they could not assure his family protection and that it would be wise for him to take his family out of town temporarily. Two students were advised by the police to move from their house. The Chapel Hill police force consists of seven men, who cannot all be on duty at the same time. A police force should be an insurance—a safeguard. We do not anticipate any more violence, arising from racial trouble or any other kind of trouble, but a police force must still be large enough and efficient enough to handle any possible disturbance.

Regretable

To the Editor:

It is regretable on the part of many who attended the mass meeting in Memorial hall Thursday afternoon that one of the speakers was not treated with respect while he addressed the assembly. No matter whether we agree with a speaker or not, we should be fair and courteous to him while he has the floor.

Personally, I do not share the views of Mr. Phipps; however, I do NOT think the action of one or some students present, reflect any credit on this student body. Nor does it help any particular group and the things they stand for.

The Dean of Men, Mr. Weaver, set an example for all of us as he spoke calmly and effectively for the protection of student's rights. Many, I am sure left the hall with a deep feeling of respect for Mr. Weaver and proud of him for the statement he made.

Blount Stewart.

What Do YOU Say?

By Harry Snowden

Today's Juestion

What is your major and why did you choose it?

Answers

Commerce—I took the various tests through the University testing bureau and the tests indicated a greater possibility of success in this field.—George Munford, Durham.

Physics—To serve as a foundation for research and engineering.—David Turner, Victoria, Va.

I am undecided as to my major. I thought I knew when I came out of the Navy, but I found there were many subjects that interested me. Right now I'm feeling my way around as many other veterans are.—Andrew Cornish, Oakridge, Tenn.

English—(I'm now in graduate school). My choice, in terms of interest, was between mathematics, mathematical science, and literature. Literature requires more intelligence, more perception, to understand well, and hence gives richer returns' than the other two. This is so, personally and vocationally, because I plan to write and teach.—Paul Ramsay, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Commerce—I expect to go into the hotel business with my father. If I don't do that I shall certainly enter business for myself or work for someone else. Commerce is the best preparation I can make for the future.—Simon Jacobson, Spofford, N. H.

Zoology—I chose this because I am interested in it in the first place. Secondly, I hope to enter the medical field of study. It is only natural to make this choice.—Lois Harris, Valdese.

Smith Gives Warning To Local Politicoes

With the prospect of seevral all-out political campaigns looming in the imminent future, Manager of Dormitories Bill Smith took occasion yesterday to reissue his warning that political propoganda and all other types of posters, notices, etc., must not be placed on dormitory walls.

Smith said that political campaigners should restrict their literature to dormitory bulletin boards and other authorized places. Such notices may be tacked to woodwork if small thumb tacks are used but under no conditions should they be placed on the walls.

Track and Golf Tournaments Top Week's Sports Activity

Two more big tournaments, in track and golf, headline the activity lined up for the four Carolina spring sports teams for the coming week.

Eight Tar Heel cindermen, yet to be definitely chosen, will represent Carolina in the Penn Relays at Philadelphia on Saturday. The Carolinas AAU track meet is also tentatively slated for that day on Fetzer field but it may be shifted to another date.

The other tourney will see the Carolina golfers engage in their second big meet in as many weeks when they take part in the North-South amateur foray at Pinehurst at the start of the week.

The Blue and White baseballers are on the road for the first two days this week, travelling to Greenville, S. C., for a clash with Furman tomorrow and to Charlotte on Tuesday to battle Davidson. Then, on Friday, the Tar Heels face Navy's diamond crew at Emerson field.

In tennis Carolina plays host to Wake Forest tomorrow and N. C. State Thursday before journeying to Charlottesville, Va., on Saturday for a match with Virginia.

Netters Register 11th Straight Win

Annapolis, Md., April 19—Although meeting their stiffest opposition of the season, North Carolina's netters maintained their undefeated skein here this afternoon by scoring a 6-3 victory over Navy.

The triumph was the 11th in a row for the Tar Heels, who captured four singles engagements and two doubles tilts to cement their win.

Carolina's top trio of Vic Seixas, Clark Taylor and Jim Nicholson led the way by copping their singles matches and then returning to win at doubles. All three had an easy time in the singles, with Seixas defeating Fred Fisher, 6-4, 6-1, Taylor turning back a former Carolina netter, Harvey Jagoe, by the same score, and Nicholson trimming Pat Welsh, 6-2, 6-1. In the feature doubles encounter, Seixas and Taylor paired to register a 6-2, 11-9 triumph over Fisher and Mike Vogt.

Carolina's varsity net reserves recorded a 7-2 win over the Greensboro Tennis club yesterday.

Bert Ingram scored the other singles win for Carolina, beating Tom Tift at the number six bracket, 6-2, 8-6. Navy captured the remaining two singles battles, Vogt downing Charlie Rice, 4-6, 8-6, 6-4, and Jack Fishman defeating Heath Alexander, 3-6, 6-4, 6-1.

The other doubles results: Jagoe and Frank Ennis, Navy, defeated Jack Kenfield and Rice, 2-6, 9-7, 6-3; Nicholson and Don Skakle defeated Fishman and Welsh, 6-4, 6-1.

Hussey, DiLorenzo Lead Way To Second Big Four Victory

Wake Forest, April 19—Jack Hussey's slugging and Vinnie DiLorenzo's five-hit hurling led North Carolina's baseball crew to a 4-3 success over Wake Forest here this afternoon as the Tar Heels registered their second Big Four triumph.

Garnering three hits in four trips, Hussey batted in all four runs, three coming on a four-base wallop in the sixth inning that wiped out a 2-0 deficit and provided Carolina with a lead it never relinquished.

DiLorenzo and Moe Bauer of the Deacons put on a tight pitcher's duel with the Carolina southpaw pitching his best game of the year. With two of the home team's runs coming in on errors, DiLorenzo was in trouble in only one inning, the eighth, when Wake Forest staged a rally that netted one tally. But with the tying run on second, a fielding gem by Dallas Branch put an end to the threat to keep Carolina in the lead.

The Deacons jumped off to an early two-run advantage by scoring single tallies in the fourth and fifth innings. But the Tar Heels came back with three in the big sixth when Hussey came through with his circuit clout over the left-center wall.

Carolina tallied another marker in the eighth on Branch's single, a sacrifice by Bo Hackney, and Hussey's run through the middle.

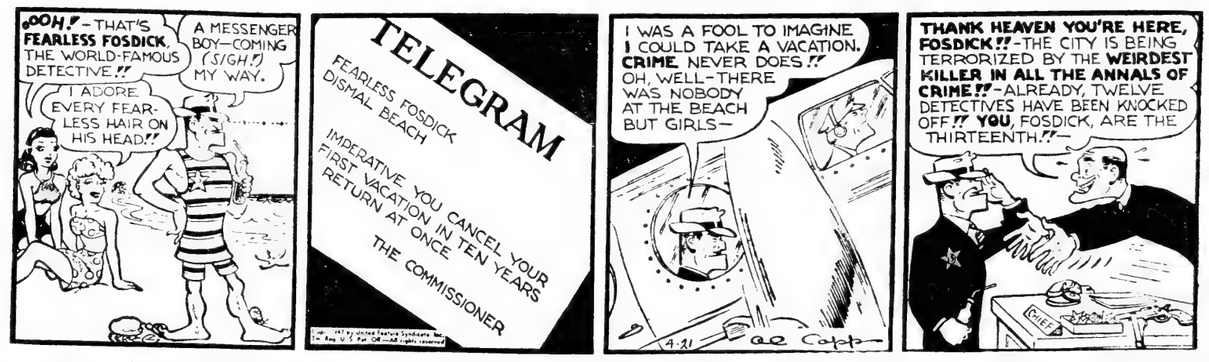
Three Taxicab Drivers Are Arrested by Police For Assault on Watkins

Three local taxicab drivers have been arrested by Chapel Hill police in connection with the attack Monday on a student who was seen conversing with a colored woman in the Chapel Hill Trailways station.

The drivers, who are charged with striking Martin A. Watkins, former High Point Golden Gloves champ and disabled veteran, were identified by police as Bill Merritt, John H. Williams, and Mickey Merritt. The last has admitted striking the first blow in the incident.



Chief of Police W. T. Sloan said the three arrests "closed" the investigation of the attack, which apparently was an aftermath of the refusal of three Negroes to reseat themselves on a Trailways bus last Sunday afternoon.

Trial of the drivers has been tentatively set for April 22.

Police Report Twin Suicide In Jerusalem

Irgun Members Take Lives in Jail

Jerusalem, April 21—(UP)—Jerusalem police report that two condemned underground members committed suicide in prison tonight. The two Irgun extremists reportedly were slated to go to the gallows before dawn tomorrow.

Immediately after the police announcement, unconfirmed reports circulated that the condemned men blew themselves up just as their executioners were preparing them for death.

Double Suicide

The double suicide comes as the Jewish underground is renewing its attack against the British in retaliation for the execution of four extremists last week. The underground has warned that it will take ten lives for every one execution and as a result the authorities have clamped a strict curfew over the entire Jewish section of Jerusalem.

Chief Executive Warns Against Price Boosts

New York, April 21. — (UP) — President Truman has warned that an economic depression can be avoided only by prompt steps to halt "the rapid rise in prices." In a major address to the annual luncheon of the Associated Press, Mr. Truman asked business to lower prices wherever excessive profits made it possible. He said wage demands from labor have generally been moderate so far this year, and he urged labor to keep them that way. Mr. Truman said emphatically that "the government policy of supporting farm prices is not the cause of prevailing high food prices." The President urged extension of government controls over rents and again expressed opposition to income tax cuts now.

Secret Session Held By Foreign Ministers

Moscow, April 21. — (UP) — The Big Four foreign ministers held a two-hour secret session today in an attempt to make a deal on the major disputed issues of the Austrian peace settlement. Official spokesmen say that "further discussion" is expected, which may mean that important compromises are being studied.

Murray Won't Comment On Merger Invitation

Pittsburgh, April 21.—(UP)—CIO President Philip Murray was in conference with steel union leaders when the A. F. of L. announced it had invited CIO officials to a peace meeting on Thursday. Murray said he would not comment on the proposed merger until he received the formal invitation.

Marshall Asks Adoption Of 'Truman Doctrine'

Washington, April 21. — (UP) — Secretary of State Marshall has informed the Senate that he regards congressional approval of the Greek-Turkish bill as "a matter of highest urgency." Marshall's complete endorsement of the so-called "Truman doctrine" was expressed in a cablegram to Senate President Arthur Vandenberg.

S and F Troupe Scores Big Hit On First Night

Sound and Fury's curtain rose last night on a stageful of entertainment, as the first performance of "What a World" hit the boards.

The large first night audience indicated audibly to the S and F troupe that they had gotten their money's worth out of the production. Tickets are still available for this evening's performance, the final one of the run, at 75 cents each, on sale at the Y, from S and F members, or at the door tonight.

"What a World" is scheduled to begin again tonight at precisely 8 o'clock, according to S and F President Bill Carmichael, who predicted that this evening's show "will be even more terrific than last night's."

Carmichael went on to state, "I can't promise anything, but our audience this evening should be prepared to expect anything, even a brand new show."

Roy Cole's orchestra is providing the music for the comic extravaganza, which features John Shearin on the vocals, a chorus of cute coeds, Carolina's leading gridiron men, and the inevitable and inimitable Dan the Dog.

Rev. B. C. Cooper Gives Album of Photographs To University Library

Rev. Bertram C. Cooper, new student chaplain of the Episcopal church, has presented a large album of reproduced photographs, depicting a pageant which was arranged in 1912 to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the Krupp firm of Essen, to the University library.

The album, bound in heavy white vellum and red gothic lettering, contains photographs showing 16th century scenes and personages forming the elaborate pageant which the Krupp millions had spared neither effort nor money to prepare.

There is irony inherent in this family glorification, since the actual pageant never took place, because of the great disaster in the Krupp works in 1912. The photographs in this album were made at the dress rehearsal.

Research and expense lavished upon making these costumes authentic, has made it of especial value in the history of costume, for students, or for anyone who wishes to visualize German dress of the latter Middle Ages.

The album was brought back from Germany by Margaret Bourke-White. Two pictures from it were used in an article on the Krupp family in Life Magazine several months ago. Later the book came into the possession of Mr. Cooper, who generously presented it to the library where its reproductions of costumes and its ironical sidelight on the Krupp family will be available for study and research.

Musicians at Home....

North Carolina Symphony To Appear in Chapel Hill

Chapel Hill, home of the North Carolina Symphony Orchestra, will get its opportunity April 28 to hear the famed musical organization which is in the midst of its annual concert season, appearing in all sections of the state from the mountains to the coast.

Directed by Dr. Benjamin F. Swalin, the orchestra, whose personnel numbers upwards to 65, will appear in Memorial hall twice on Monday, April 28. The main concert, for adults, will be given that night at 8:30 o'clock, while the free school children's concert is scheduled for that afternoon at 2:30.

Tickets for the evening concert will be on sale, beginning next Monday, at Ledbetter Pickard's. It was pointed out at symphony headquarters here today that this will be a general ticket sale, adults $1.85, students $1.25, and not a membership concert.

The symphony's tour, the largest this spring in its history, will continue through May 16. Beginning in Reidsville April 9, the entire orchestra will have appeared in 25 different cities and towns by that time giving two concerts in the large majority of the communities.

DR. SWALIN

In February and March the Little Symphony, composed of 20 of the regular orchestra personnel, toured the smaller towns of the state. By May 16, the two groups will have given a total of 115 concerts in 59 different communities to set a new record.

Gordon String Quartet Gives Concert Tonight in Hill Hall

The Gordon String Quartet, brilliant music ensemble under the direction of Jacques Gordon, will present a concert in Hill hall this evening at 8:30.

The concert is being sponsored by the University music department with the cooperation of the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge foundation of the Library of Congress.

In addition to playing the standard chamber music repertoire, the Quartet has introduced works by such noted composers as Schoenberg, Malipiero, Milhaud, Casella, Respighi, Faure, Glazounow, Eugene Goosens, Arnold Bax, Sowerby, Bloch. Emerson Whithorne, Hanson and Vaughan Williams.

The program will include Brahms' "Quartet in C Minor," L'Oracion del Torero," by Turina; a quartet movement in C Minor (Unfinished) by Schubert; and Beethoven's "Quartet in B Flat Minor."

The public is invited to attend the concert, and guest tickets may be obtained from the office of Hill hall today. Seats will be reserved for the holders of guest tickets until 8:20, after which the general public will be admitted.

Complete Game Plans To Be Ready Tonight

Plans for the intra-squad football game here Saturday afternoon between rival factions of the Carolina team will be completed tonight when the Monogram club holds its regular weekly meeting.

President Jim Camp of the Monogramers announced yesterday that the University band, cheerleaders, and a sextet of coed sponsors would provide color for the engagement, which is the second consecutive such affair sponsored by the letter-winners club.

The sponsors for the event will be announced tomorrow, and the respective teams will be listed at the same time.

Aquinas Club to Meet To Argue Bus Decision

The Aquinas club will meet this evening at 8 o'clock on the second floor of the "Y." The speaker's topic will be the much-disputed Supreme Court school bus decision. After this talk there will be a question and discussion period. All Catholic students are urged to attend.

Affray Charges Placed by Police Against Watkins

With the trial of the three taxi drivers charged with assaulting a Carolina student set for today in Recorder's court here, Chapel Hill police announced yesterday that Martin Watkins, struck April 14 after he had been conversing with a colored woman, had been indicted for engaging in an affray along with the three drivers. Police said Watkins and the drivers would be tried together today.

Charges against Watkins, former High Point Golden Gloves champion, were filed by police yesterday after routine investigation of the incident reportedly revealed that the young veteran had "willingly" engaged in the tussle with the cabbies. The affray charges include the drivers as defendants, and are to be tried simultaneously with the assault charges filed last week against the drivers by Watkins.

Graham Memorial Gets Set of Notice Boards

Two new lobby display boards are now available for use for publicity purposes in Graham Memorial, student union director Martha Rice announced. These boards, purchased so that clubs and organizations might advertise their functions and meetings to better advantage, are 30 by 40 inches with masonite backing described as gold antique.

Posters should be limited to sizes not more than 11 by 15 inches, according to Miss Rice, so that none will crowd out the others. These measurements are the same as a Daily Tar Heel, folded once.

Havana Revolution

Havana, April 21—(UP)— Unidentified assailants with machine guns and pistols attacked the capitol buildings in Havana tonight while the Cuban Senate was in session.

Lanier Urges Students to Submit Their Tentative Cards this Week

By Chuck Hauser

Summer session pre-registration will begin early in May for those students now enrolled in the University, announced Central Records Director Edwin S. Lanier yesterday.

Class schedules have already been released, and may be obtained at the information desk in South building or in Memorial hall lobby.

According to Lanier, this is the first time that a class schedule has appeared for both terms of a summer session so far in advance, and the first time that it has appeared as one record rather than two separate schedules.

"Even though actual registration will not begin until May, those persons who expect to pre-register for the summer session are urged to submit preliminary, tentative enrollment cards this week," stated Lanier. The cards are available, along with the class schedules, at both South building and Memorial hall.

Issues Warning

Lanier warned that failure to submit the preliminary enrollment cards might result in a student's being unable to register for a course, or courses, of limited capacity.

For courses in great demand, the cards will aid in establishing a priority list of students for such courses, or, if possible, to create additional sections. It was stressed, however, that tentative enrollment cards do not limit or commit a student in any way if he happens to change his mind about taking any course.

Any student enrolling for the summer session may not take less than six nor more than nine credit hours, except with permission of his dean or adviser.

Maddox to Speak To Classes Here On State Affairs

Dr. William Maddox, director of foreign service training of the State department, will address the class in American foreign relations in Caldwell hall at 10 o'clock this morning.

Dr. Maddox will also conduct an informal conference on the foreign service and foreign service training at 3 o'clock this afternoon in room 208. Dr. Maddox performed distinguished service during the war as a colonel in the army on liaison duty with foreign military missions in Europe and with Allied governments in exile carrying on resistance movements against the Nazis.

Dr. Maddox has been professor of political science in the Universities of Virginia and Pennsylvania and Harvard university. He is an author of wide reputation and a most effective speaker on problems of international relations.

This is one of a series of lectures by officials of the State department which has been inaugurated by the division of international studies of the department of political science to make realistic the study of international affairs.

Several students who have expressed their convictions openly and through the medium of the Daily Tar Heel have been invited to participate in the debate which will be held tonight at 7 p. m. in Phi hall, fourth floor, New East.

Visitors are cordially invited to attend.

Suggested Parking Remedy

Several times, especially since the first of the year, editorials havev pleaded for all those who live close by the campus to leave their automobiles at home and for more thoughtfulness in driving and parking generally.

Especially at this time of the year, students should be more willing to walk to classes than ever before. Yet, day by day students are crowded off the campus and gravel walks become highways and parking spaces.

Therefore we suggest that the student legislature authorize student body president Dewey Dorsett to appoint a new, all-powerful campus traffic committee, perhaps of 12 students, who would have, roughly the powers and duties outlined below.

Initial duty of the group would be to order immediately sufficient license plates, with student body funds, to sell one plate to every student automobile owner on the campus.

These plates, half regular size blue and white metal tags similar to those sold here in pre-war days, would be sold for about one dollar apiece in the registration line. As every student goes through the line, he will be asked if he has a car at school. If he does, he will have to purchase one of the plates, which must be put on by the second week of the quarter. Campus cars found without these tags after this period can be checked to determine student or non-student status and tags may then be sold to non-buyer offenders. Appropriate records, filed alphabetically and by license numbers, could be kept of all plates and owners.

Now for the "teeth" of the plan. All students living within one-half mile of South building will be prohibited from parking on the campus during morning class hours. A spot check by two students who would patrol for one hour each every morning could determine if any are infringing upon this rule or any other parking rules that may be in effect. They would make this patrol only as long as the situation remained congested—and at spots thereafter. License numbers taken at random during the patrolling could be checked in the file without difficulty. Any offenders would be called before a weekly student court set up within the committee. They would be warned on first offense and a one dollar fine would be charged on second offense, if legitimate reason was not given by the offending party.

Possibly a preferable alternative to the court might be a system of mailing a warning to first offenders of all parking rules. Upon second offense a fine of one dollar would be levied through the University business department.

This is roughly the plan we suggest. It is complicated in some parts and will require diligence on the part of those students chosen who carry it through. But we believe it will work. Besides aiding in clearing up congested traffic, the tags will advertise the school and students will be proud to have them on their cars. From 1940-42, all student owners were required to buy special University license plates.

Note that this spot check and so-called traffic court would remain in effect only so long as traffic remained congested to such a degree that the committee itself deemed it neecssary to continue the system. During non-crowded summer months, and after students began to fall in line with the plan, the bothersome practice of checking would no longer be necessary.—R. G.

This hydro-carbon series gives you ethelyne, butylene, propylene, and," said the chem prof turning to write several symbols on the board, "what will this give you?"

From the front row: "That'll give you Darlene; that's her phone number."

Professor—Tell me all you know about nitrates.

Student—Well, er—they're a lot cheaper than day-rates.

I'd Rather Be Right

Creation of New Humor Mag Involves Many Considerations

By Earl Heffner

Jud Kinberg minus his guide, Dan the Dog, stumbled into the office this afternoon clutching a pipe and reaching for an idea. Whether he caught one or not, I do not know. But he gave me one.

For I suddenly realized that while I had given much thought to the Legislature's new baby, the Humor Mag, I had failed to analyze, in print, important features and considerations involved in the creation.

Such a creation as this Humor Mag gives promise of being a bone of contention among campus parties adhering to the Spoils system. When Laughing Boy, the Humor Mag, grows into manhood he will be fair game for the eager political hunters.

But now, in his youth, the babe deserves tripartisan cooperation from the three campus parties—the University, the Student, and the Campus.

The money—perhaps too much of it—has been appropriated to insure the Laughing Boy of financial security. But there is where the safety ends and unknowns enter.

There are altogether too few known adequate humor writers on campus. Perhaps lurking behind their books will be found some additional creators of levity. In the meantime, the Humor Mag must prepare to operate with the known quantities.

Should the three parties each pick out a humor writer to back for the position, a tri-cornered split will materialize. Then the baby might be hurt in this resultant Diaper derby.

Perhaps the best humor writer on campus is Eddie Allen, erstwhile Charlotte Observer sports writer and Daily Tar Heel associate editor. Other writers of levity known to me and to publications personnel that I have contacted include Roger Hall, Matt Hodgson, Dick Savage, and Jud Kinberg.

Split the above men by having them seek individual laurels, Mr. Politicians, and you do it for your own glory, not for the welfare of the new Humor Mag and accompanying welfare of the student body.

Certainly, for one election partisan politics may be pitched out of the proverbial window for one small feature of the election in order that the Humor Mag will have a chance of survival.

With all of the winds favorable, this latest Laughing Boy can face a tempest of criticism. Weaken him by political measures and his chances of a long life aren't worth those of a Snowball in Hades.

The question: Politics and Spoils or a Humor Mag?

Letters To The Editor

All letters must be typewritten, double-spaced, under 300 words in length, and signed by the writer. Writer's name will be withheld on request, but letters must be signed. The Daily Tar Heel reserves the right to present the letters as it wishes and to delete all matter it considers libelous.

Expressing Opinions

To the Editor:

This letter may be somewhat long, but if you publish it please publish all of it, just as it is. It expresses the opinions of a student who graduated from the University of North Carolina two and a half years ago, and, I believe, the opinions of nearly all the white citizens of this state whom i have met.

Those of us in North Carolina who have always spoken in favor of the economic advancement of the Negro, and of the progress of the entire South, regret that such racial disorders as the recent ones in Chapel Hill have to occur. If you have any desire at all to report the truth to your readers, you must admit that those people doing the "rock throwing" were not the ones who started he affair. The racial agiation of the so-called Brotherhood for Reconciliation, together with the past interracial adventures of Pastor Jones, is responsible.

Racial segregation is the established policy in this state, whether you like it or not. Anyone who may have told the Negro that this last war was fought to aid in producing a mulatto South has only misinformed the Negro. As for your term "wildly-emotional," it applies more to your front page editorial than to anything else. Since you call the defense of the system "wildly-emotional," I suppose you must call segregation itself "wildly-emotional." Do you really feel qualified to denounce Jefferson, Clay, Webster, and Lincoln, among others, as "wildly-emotional?"

If I may quote once again the well known statement by Mark Ethridge, liberal Kentucky publisher, ". . . there is no power in the world . . . which could now force the southern white people to abandon the principle of social segregation." For more very interesting remarks on segregation, I refer you to W. T. Couch's introduction to the book What the Negro Wants, published by the University of North Carolina Press: "If any two people have a right to lead their own lives, certainly any two others or ten or twenty million have a right to opinions on what ought to be allowed and what forbidden." I should think the twenty million might be twenty million southern white people.

As for Mr. Jones being the "best-liked minister," or "one of the University's leading citizens," I question both the accuracy and the sincerity of such a statement.

Yours truly,
JOHN M. RUTH.

tige of student politics because of their fairness and quality.

However, because we are, as he says, in the camp of the Anti-frats, we must point out to him that his usage of the term "Antifrat" does not give him the accuracy which he probably desires. From my association with campus politics, I feel justified in saying that there is no longer any such issue as the fraternity-non-fraternity one. True, most of us believe that to represent any organization, whether it be forensic, religious, or social, as a political entity within a party is not compatible with our honest idea of the way good politics are done.

We do not believe politics is related to organizations of a social nature. The fraternity, non-fraternity party line is not on trial in this election.

I agree with Mr. Morrison that we are being a bit lethargic, but he must be patient with us! If he has any suggestions, we will appreciate them wholeheartedly.

Sincerely,
MONROE LANDRETH.

No Such Issue

Dear Sir:

Most of us in Stacy enjoyed Mr. Morrison's parody on the political parties in Saturday's issue of the Daily Tar Heel. Efforts such as he has shown in continuing it are of particular enhancement to the pres-

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

THE MAN WHO MADE TRUMAN LECTURES HIM ON DESERTING FDR LIBERALISM; BIG CITY BOSSES WORRIED OVER TRUMAN'S MIDDLE-OF-ROAD POLICY; WALL STREET SPECULATES IN NEWSPRINT

Washington.—President Truman heard some blunt talk about "liberalism" from an unexpected quarter the other day. The man who preached the sermon on libralism was none other than Ed Flynn, "boss of the Bronx" and the man who did the most, next to Bob Hannegan, to nominate Truman at Chicago.

Flynn, together with Democratic leaders from Rhode Island, New York, New Jersey and Connecticut called at the White House to discuss party political prospects with the Chief Executive, and barely had they been seated when Flynn cut loose. Democratic executive director Gael Sullivan, standing near the President, started the discussion by saying:

Folks, this is our listening post for today. We want to hear your problems. Go ahead and tell us about them."

"The biggest problem the Democratic Party has," shot back New York's boss Flynn, "is staying liberal. Unless the Democratic Party remains liberal we're licked."

"That's just what we're doing, Ed, staying liberal," replied the gentleman whom Flynn helped make President of the United States.

"On some things we are," said Flynn, "but on others we're missing the boat. There's a growing tendency in the Administration to move over to dead center. This trend toward the center should be stopped. That's the Republican Party's spot. Dead center. And that's what the center is, 'dead'."

Truman politely said that he didn't notice any such trend.

"Well," replied Flynn, "we've got to get in there and pitch for more progressive legislation. We've got to fight harder for health, welfare, social insurance and education. We've got to do a lot more than we've done about housing too. We can't let Taft steal the play on that front either."

"Ed, I'm going down the line for every piece of legislation I believe in," Truman declared. "I started our program of social legislation in my message to the Congress last January. In that message I wasn't just talking with my head, I was talking with my heart too."

Note—Next day, the House passed the tough GOP anti-labor bill with 93 Democrats voting with the Republicans.

HAGUE SPEAKS

Jersey City's Frank Hague, who also had a lot to do with nominating Truman, backed up Flynn. He too called for more liberalism in the party as an essential for re-election in '48. However, he wasn't as outspoken as the boss of the Bronx.

"We've just seen the enormous rise in the President's prestige nationally," said Hague. "But we must not be deceived by it. We're now in an era of good feeling. This is the very time we must work the hardest. If we don't we're liable to slip back into the rut."

Hague reported that the New Jersey outlook is dim for the Democrats unless a lot of hard work is done. He mentioned the reverses of the last campaign, urged his fellow politicians to push for a larger vote next year.

GREEN QUOTES PEARSON

Rhode Island's Senator Theodore Francis Green observed that the growth of Truman's popularity is due to the fact that the President showed the country he could make decisions on his own. In order to remain popular, Green said, the President would have to continue making forthright decisions.

He warned the party against playing down Roosevelt too much, however, and pointed out that the country would be a long time forgetting that the Democratic Party was

"Don't forget," said the Senator from Rhode Island, "that the Republicans haven't dared repeal a single piece of Roosevelt legislation, or even attack it for thatmatter. This should show all of us how popular he still is and how strongly his memory favors us."

Roosevelt's Party.

Green went on to cite a tendency in the Democratic Party to play down Roosevelt for fear of diminishing President Truman's stature.

"As Drew Pearson said, Mr. President," Green concluded, "you've got an opportunity to break precedent and make history by being the first great President to follow a great President. We're all sure you're doing just that."

WOMEN'S VOTE

A rather sharp note was sounded by Connecticut National Committee Woman Mary Hausman, who urged action to retrieve the women's vote.

"Make no mistake about it," she said. "The women beat us last time. And they can do it again. It takes an awful lot of irritation to make millions of women carry their babies with them to the polls on Election Day to vote against an administration whose actions they disagree with. It will take a lot of work to make them vote for us next time."

CANADIAN DOG WAGS WALL STREET

For a long time Canadians have complained that the Wall Street tail has wagged the Canadian financial dog. Canadian business, largely financed in Wall Street, was at the mercy of the big New York speculators.

But now Prime Minister Maurice Duplessie of Quebec has reversed this in an action which may effect American newspapers, and which already has had reverberations inside the Justice Department. Duplessie has threatened to withhold crown lands from newsprint production if Wall Street speculators tamper with the St. Lawrence Corporation, now supplying vitally needed newsprint to several large American dailies.

Despite the fact that newsprint is the lifeblood of American newspapers, the St. Lawrence Company is in the throes of a stockholders battle, featured by such a Wall Street buying siege that the Securities and Exchange Commission is lifting its eyebrows. Center of the speculative effort is the Van Alstyne, Noel, Co., of New York, previously suspended by the SEC for ten days for selling shares of Higgins boat in violation of the rules. Meanwhile, stockholders will battle it out at a meeting April 28.

Carolina-Furman Baseball Tilt Rained Out

Back Tracking. . .

The Clouds Had A Silver Lining At Navy Saturday

By Morty Schaap

The old axiom "Every cloud has a silver lining" paid off late Saturday afternoon when in the last event Navy's crack relay team was disqualified for an illegal baton pass.

It seemed as if everything was going wrong for the Fetzer, Ranson combine. In the one-mile run, Jimmy Miller sprained his ankle and was forced out of the meet. In the same event Jack Milne tripped on the back stretch and was nosed out at the finish by inches. In the javelin throw Bob Kirk sent the spear 181 feet, which was good for second place, but since just a white line was used instead of a toe board, Bob slipped over the line and the throw was voided. In the last jump on the broad jump Jack Moody leaped far enough for second place but his toe spike was over the board and that went for naught.

Going into the final event, Carolina trailing by four points, things looked mighty black. Navy was building up a bigger lead on every leg and then came the break that gave Carolina a 66-65 triumph.

For the benefit of those who wonder what a foul of this type consists of, here it is. There is a 20-yard passing zone where the runners must exchange the baton. Once they leave these zones they are out of the running. And this was the case Saturday.

The tennis team came through with flying colors and your correspondent spent half the time watching them and the other half on the cinder trail. Vic Seixas came through easily, as did Clark Taylor, but they ran into a little more difficulty in the doubles.

The tennis men gave the track boys quite a bit of moral support, and it helped to silence the mass of Middies and their dates who all were on hand to bring Navy through.

By the way, Navy was last year's IC4A champion and they retain most of the team that turned the trick. It adds to Carolina's win over Georgia Tech last week, over the Southeastern conference track champions.

Ben Carnevale asked to be remembered to all his Tar Heel friends and is expecting to make a jaunt down this way within the next month or so . . . Ben, incidentally, was chief judge of the high jump and carried out his task admirably . . . Among the visitors to the Carolina quarters were ex-footballer Ed Golding and Navy tennis Captain Harvey Jagoe . . . Navy played host to 14 visiting teams Saturday which participated in 10 sports. Navy managed to drop varsity track, tennis, golf, lacrosse, sailing and came through at New Haven to eke out a 2-1 win over Yale in baseball.

An article in the Navy Log, Jim Carrington writes in his column the dire need of a field house for the academy sports. Seems as if the same cry is heard at all angles.

Back on the cinder paths:

Ted Shultz came through with a first in the 100-yard dash that kept the Tar Heels in the running, but it was the hurdlers and the milers that really kept the Blue and White in the meet. Chunk Simmons won the highs and was followed closely by Hunter Heggie. Bob Morrow and Dick Taylor, finishing before a Navy man. In the two-mile, even though Miller was not able to run, the Tar Heel crew came through with Jack Milne winning going away and Sam Magill and Alvin Smith tying for the second spot . . . In all fairness to the sprinters and hurdlers, the slow times were due to a stiff wind blowing into their faces from the old Severn.

The biggest disappointment of the meet was Norm McLeod, who finished in a tie with Rusty Russell for second place with a jump of only 11 feet 6 inches . . . Big Bob "Snipe" Seligman came through with his usual firsts in the shot and discus, and even though his marks were not too good no one came near his best throws.

It was a great thrill for team members like Tommy Turner, Mark Burnham, Norm McLeod and Julian Mackenzie, who had been on the losing end of the meets during the war years.

Earl Thompson, Navy mentor, had picked the Tar Heels to triumph by 78-52, which was close enough . . . Fifteen Carolina men broke into the scoring column to exceed by one the total number that had scored at Tech . . . Simmons paced the scoring with 13 points and was followed by Seligman with 10 and Milne with eight.

The tracksters now swing into workouts for the double meet next weekend, when some of the men will go to Philadelphia while the remainder of the squad stays here to participate in Carolina's AAU meet.

A word of note to those interested is that Coach Hank Gifford will swing a Jayvee track team into action against Guilford college on May 3. He is interested in seeing any boys that would like to participate in this type of competition.

Netters Blank Demon Deacons, 9 to 0

Seixas, Taylor Sit Match Out

State To Battle Locals Thursday

By Roy Holsten

Newly returned from their successful trip to Annapolis, Coach John Kenfield's Tar Heel tennis squad regulars took a well-earned rest yesterday while the second string netters blanked an impotent Wake Forest crew 9-0 for their 12th straight win.

With his stars watching from the sidelines, Coach Kenfield was given an excellent opportunity to observe what talent his reserves could display. Coming through in excellent form, the Blue and White second stringers copped every set, letting only two go beyond a 6-3 count. They garnered no less than thirteen sets by a 6-1 or 6-0 score.

Number one Tar Heel for the afternoon was big Bert Ingram, who trounced Wake Forest star Cy Young in 6-2, 6-1 sets. Ingram had little trouble in racking up his third straight singles victory. The Carolina letterman is undefeated in his three encounters.

Heath Alexander, playing in the number three slot, turned in the most impressive triumph of the contest as he trimmed Deacon Reed Gaskin 6-0, 6-0. The freshman ace then teamed with Stan Gruner to capture a 6-1, 6-4 victory over Cy Young and Fred Strickland, the Wake Forest No. 1 doubles duo. Alexander played a potent net game and scored repeatedly with his well-placed drop shots. Improving steadily, the Charlotte lad is rapidly climbing in stature.

Dick Swigart gained a quick win over Fred Strickland in 6-3, 6-0 sets, while teammate Stan Gruner was taking the measure of Tom Bunn, 6-4, 6-3. Both Tar Heels showed their prowess as deep shot artists.

Two of the Carolina crew played their first singles match of the year and each of them came through with a steady style to crush their opponents handily. Sam Daniels shut out Dean Futrelle 6-0, 6-0 and Bob Johnsen beat Bill Wall 6-3, 6-0.

In the remaining doubles encounters, Ingram and Swigart beat Gaskin and Josey 6-1, 6-2, while Daniels and Johnson beat Bunn and Futrelle 6-2, 6-1.

The summary: Ingram (C) defeated Young 6-2, 6-1; Swigart (C) defeated Strickland 6-3, 6-0; Alexander (C) defeated Gaskin 6-0, 6-0; Gruner (C) defeated Bunn 6-4, 6-3; Daniels (C) defeated Futrelle 6-0, 6-0; Johnsen (C) defeated Wall 6-3, 6-0; Alexander and Gruner (C) defeated Young and Strickland 6-1, 6-4; Ingram and Swigart (C) defeated Gaskin and Josey 6-1, 6-2; Daniels and Johnsen (C) defeated Bunn and Futrelle 6-2, 6-1.

Tar Heels Move To Davidson For SC Game This Afternoon

Baseball Team Seeking Third Loop Win; Andrew or Robinson to Twirl Contest

(Special to the Daily Tar Heel)

Greenville, S. C., April 21.—With Carolina's Tar Heels holding a 3-0 lead over Furman at the end of three innings the skies opened up dropping a heavy rain causing the cancellation of the ball game.

Jack Hussey again was the batting hero by driving in all three Carolina tallies. Monk Whiteheart started the game and was cruising along with a one hit performance before the heavy dew caused the halt of hostilities.

Tomorrow the men of Walter Rabb move on to Davidson to engage the Davidson Wildcats in another conference game. It is expected that Tommy Andrew or Frank Robinson will get the starting assignment for this clash.

If Andrew gets the nod it will be Buck Hardee to handle the backstopping chores and if Robinson goes to the hill it will be Jim Hayworth doing the receiving.

Davidson is expected to prove a formidable opponent and even though they have not as yet won a loop contest they have dropped some very close encounters. One of the leading Wildcat pitchers is Norman Whiteheart, brother of the Carolina ace. Also in the Davidson lineup is Jake Wade, Jr., son of the Carolina sports publicity chief. He plays at the keystone sack and is reputed to be very fast on the bases and a very dependable fielder.

Following the game with the Wildcats the team will have two days of practice before they clash with the strong Navy team here at Chapel Hill. The lads from Annapolis are boomed as a very potent outfit and their showing at New Haven last Saturday when they downed Yale, 2-1, serves notice that Coach Max Bishop will bring a high powered diamond crew south to tangle with Carolina and Duke.

Ward, Taylor, Nolan Gain in Golf Tourney

(Special to the Daily Tar Heel)

Pinehurst, April 21—Three Carolina golfers survived the opening round of play in the Annual North and South Amateur golf tournament here.

The qualifying round of play was held over the 6800-yard championship course and the medalist was Felice Torzo, Connecticut State champion who fired a par 72 score over the windy and damp course.

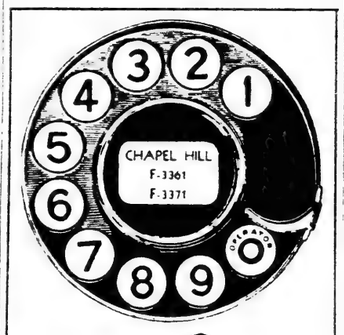
Harvie Ward led the Tar Heels by posting a 77. Roy Taylor with 79, and Mike Nolan with 80, both joined the select round of 32 who will enter the match play beginning tomorrow.

At press time last night it was not yet ascertained whether Junie Bailey would make the match play. His score of 82 places him in a playoff for a position in the final rounds.

Mural Cinder Contest To Start Tomorrow

The annual intramural track meet will get under way at Fetzer field tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock with preliminaries, it was announced yesterday by P. A. Lee, acting mural director.

Trials will be held again Thursday afternoon with the semi-finals being slated for next Wednesday and the finals on the next day.



The mural department is hoping that this meet will be the biggest contest on the year's card and urges all fraternities and dormitories to enter big squads.

All events in the preliminary rounds will be run against time or distance so any time that a contestant appears at the track he will be timed or judged on his event. The judges will be at their events from 4 o'clock until 6 o'clock.

No spikes will be allowed for this meet.

Senate Passes Mediterranean Aid Measure

Bill to Aid Greece, Turkey Against Reds

Washington, April 22 —(UP)— President Truman's Mediterranean air bill to send 400,000,000 dollars to Greece and Turkey to stop the spread of Communism was approved overwhelmingly by the Senate today by a vote of 67 to 23.

Thirty-five Republicans and 32 Democrats voted for the bill, 16 Republicans and seven Democrats against it.

Save Them from Communism

Stripped down to its essentials, the measure authorizes the President to bulwark the tottering Greek and Turkish governments with American arms, money, and military advisers—but no troops. The avowed purpose is to save them and their neighbor states from Communism.

At the same time, it serves notice to the world that we are meeting the Greek-Turkish crisis single-handedly only because the U. N. is not ready to take on a program of this size and urgency.

Iraq Joins Movement On Palestine Issue

Russian Propaganda Using Enormous Sums

Washington, April 22—(UP)—Assistant Secretary of State William Benton says that Russia is spending enormous sums of money on foreign propaganda. He adds that nobody knows exactly how much the Soviet is spending, but that it is more than ours, the British, French and maybe all other countries combined.

Wallace Accused By Van Sittart

London, April 22—(UP)— Former British Foreign Undersecretary Lord Van Sittart has accused Henry Wallace of doing everything he could to prevent Britain from dealing with Russia on a basis of reason. He told the House of Lords that Wallace was brought to London by rebel laborites at a time when he was most likely to embarrass Foreign Secretary Bevin in Moscow.

Rising Junior Headed Class In First Year

Move Closes Books For Student Party

In an afternoon full of nominations, Sam Daniels, rising junior from Coral Gables, Florida, was selected as the Student party candidate for the office of secretary-treasurer of the student body.

Daniels is a member of the tennis team, Sigma Chi fraternity, and on the editoral board of the Daily Tar Heel. He was elected class president during his freshman year and last fall conducted the "What Do You Say?" column in this paper.

In making this nomination members of the Student party expressed a desire to, when there was not a great deal of difference between candidates on a basis of qualification, nominate men not already chosen by other political parties on the campus.

With Daniel's nomination the Student party has now completed its slate of candidates for major positions. Yesterday afternoon marked one of the hottest meetings the SP has had in some time and debate on all nominees was fast and furious, final nominations being made only after long discussions.

University Trustees Pass Fee Structure, According to Umstead

According to a statement made last night by John W. Umstead, state legislator and member of the Executive committee of the Board of Trustees of the Greater University, the Executive committee yesterday approved Chancellor Robert B. House's recommendations concerning the fee structure division of the new student constitution in toto.

An Associated Press release yesterday afternoon stated that the Trustees probably discussed the Chapel Hill racial incidents, but a United Press wire story last night quoted Governor Cherry, in whose offices the meeting was held, as saying that the racial disturbances were definitely not discussed. The Governor went on to say that only routine matters were brought up, such as vacancies on the faculty and the lease of small portions of University land in Raleigh and Chapel Hill. The Governor did not mention the fee structure at all.

When the statement by Governor Cherry was read to President Frank Graham last night, he affirmed it as being correct, but he did not mention the fee structure either.

SP Nominee Wins in Fight For New Post

Party Seconds UP In CM Editorship

By Harry Snowden

The Student Party yesterday afternoon nominated Matt "Tookie" Hodgson for editor of the newly-formed humor magazine and Fred Jacobson to succeed himself as editor of the Carolina Magazine.

Amidst a raging battle of words involving the personalities of the candidates, Hodgson triumphed over the combination of Eddie Allen and Jud Kinberg who were proposed as co-editors.

The meeting had scarcely been brought to order when Hodgson rose and tendered his resignation as the SP nominee for editor of the Carolina Magazine "for reasons which will soon become obvious."

Hot Battle

At this point Jimmy Wallace rose and nominated "Tookie" for the editorship of the humor magazine stating that he felt that Hodgson was the best qualified man for the job and was deserving of it. After a brief but hotly contested battle between the Allen-Kinberg forces and the Hodgson supporters a vote was taken and the party announced Hodgson the winner.

This created a vacancy in the post of nominee for the editorship of the Carolina Magazine and in another hotly debated contest Fred Jacobson, present editor of the Magazine, was nominated. Jacobson was previously nominated by the University party.

Hodgson, in accepting the nomination for humor magazine editor stated, "If elected I shall endeavor to keep the humor magazine free from partisan politics, to form a staff which is representative of all campus groups and organizations, and finally to refrain from publishing material which is obscene or objectional to the student body."

Very Active

"Tookie" has been very active during the past year in attempting to form a humor magazine and is at present guest editor of the Carolina Magazine for the forthcoming May

Student, Cab Drivers Found Equally Guilty

By Walter Kiser

Stating that too much had already been made of this tiff, Judge Henry Whitfield found Martin A. Watkins equally guilty of involvement in an affray with June and Billy Merritt, Independent Taxi Cab drivers on April 14, and ordered that the three defendants split court costs.

Watkins immediately appealed the verdict of guilty to the Superior court, the next session of which will be held in June.

The charge of assault brought by Watkins against the three taxi drivers was nol-prossed by Judge Whitfield, while the state's charge of engaging in an affray was dropped against Taxi Driver John Henry Williams but pressed against Watkins and the Merritt brothers.

Testimony during the practically day-long trial revealed that the affray had little relation to the racial incident of the day before, but rather grew out of a case of mistaken identity on the part of the taxi drivers.

Watkins testified that after purchasing a ticket to Durham and speaking briefly to a colored acquaintance of his, he was in the act of getting on the bus when he overheard a remark to the effect that, "that must be another one of those Wops." Placing his books on one of the bus seats he returned and asked, "Who made that remark?"

According to Watkins, June Merritt replied, "I did. What are you going to do about it?" Sensing that there might be trouble afoot, Watkins began removing his watch, and it was then that the first blow, by June Merritt, was swung.

Testimony that followed indicated that Watkins ducked, then returned the blow knocking the cab driver to the ground. While in the process of following up his advantage the student, ex-Golden Gloves champion of High Point was struck from behind on the right ear by June Merritt's brother Billy.

The fight was halted by Mr. Curren, manager of the local Trailways But terminal, who stepped in between the two men and ordered Watkins to mount the bus that was waiting to take him to Durham.

In the closing arguments, Watkins' lawyer asked that his client be found "Not Guilty" as "all that he did was to defend himself, which he had every right to do." L. J. Phipps, representing the taxi drivers said that a mountain had been made out of a molehill by the whole case and charged this primarily to the newspapers.

VA Releases Ruling On Women Veterans

Married women veterans with children may receive $90 a month subsistence allowance while attending school even though they are recognized as dependents of husbands also attending school under the Servicemen's Readjustment act (G. I. Bill), the Veterans administration has ruled.

The decision was based on a case involving a husband and wife, both veterans, with one child. It stated that the maximum of $90 per month subsistence allowance would be paid only if the woman's outside income from productive work did not exceed $50 a month.

ATTEND CONVENTION

A delegation of five professors from the University mathematics department attended a convention of the southeastern section of the Mathematics Association of America at the University of South Carolina this week-end. Professors Brauer, Wong, Lasley, Garner, and Reynolds went to Columbia, the first three presenting papers at the convention. Dr. Lasley is past president of this section of the M.A.A.

Racial Issues To Be Discussed At Di Meeting

Discussion of the recent racial disturbances in Chapel Hill, interrupted last Thursday when the "Fact-Finding" meeting in Memorial Hall was adjourned, faces resumption tonight when the Dialectic Senate will debate a resolution denouncing the Fellowship of Reconciliation "and such citizens of Chapel Hill as may have aided in the stirring up of racial discord in the South."

Among amendments and substitute motions which may be offered are two dealing with the trial of Martin Watkins, a University student recently found guilty of affray and whose conviction has been appealed. Professor Phillips Russell, former judge of Recorders Court L. J. Phipps, Miss Nelle Morton, Secretary of the Fellowship of Southern Churchmen, and Reverend Charles M. Jones of the local Presbyterian Church are among the non-students who have been invited to the meeting. Any member of the student body may participate in the discussion, which will be held in the Di hall, third floor New West, at 9:00 P.M. tonight.

Symphony Will Give Membership Concert

Through error it was announced yesterday that the North Carolina Symphony orchestra's concert scheduled for next Monday night in Memorial hall would not be a membership concert.

The concert, to begin at 8:30 o'clock, will be a membership affair, but there are also several hundred general admission tickets. The tickets went on sale yesterday at Ledbetter Pickard's. The price: adults $1.85, students $1.25. Wives of students will be admitted on student tickets.

A free children's concert will be given Monday afternoon in Memorial hall at 2:30 o'clock.

Praise from the Nation....

Mag Staff Wins Recognition For Brains, Beauty Coverage

By Eddie Allen

Editor Fred Jacobson's Carolina Magazine won national recognition on the brains and beauty front this week.

First honor came from Mademoiselle, national women's magazine. The publication, noted for its system of "College Board Guest Editors" and nationwide conferences of university women, asked Carolina Magazine heads to choose the UNC representative to the forthcoming Mademoiselle-sponsored discussion on Soviet-American relations to be held in New York.

In the telegram to Magazine managing editor Jud Kinberg, Mademoiselle wired, "We have noted with great interest your last issues. We would like you to recommend coed for our April 26 conference on Russian-US foreign policy."

Magazine editors contacted Dean of Women Katherine Carmichael and, after extensive surveying of Carolina coeds, submitted the name of Sara Tillett, Charlotte, N. C., senior. Miss Tillett will leave for the New York meeting this weekend.

Recognition in the beauty parade took the form of a John Powers request for prints of the cover photo which appeared on the March issue of the Carolina Magazine. Cover model coed Pat Hole went to New York this month and, aided by the Magazine photograph, was given a job with the famous model agency.

Miss Hole then wired the magazine that the model agency desired fifty prints of the photo. She returned to Chapel Hill this week and staff photographer Stan Croner has taken additional shots of Carolina's latest contribution to the beautification of the nation.

Additional praise for the Carolina Magazine came from Time Magazine's Education Editor Allan Ecker. During a recent stay here, the Timeman called the UNC monthly one of the finest that he has seen.

Detour Around the Question....

Parking Panacea Putting the Cart Before UNC's Horseless Carriages

By Eddie Allen

In these days when the once-forgotten man on the street can no longer be so adjectived, the glamorized pedestrian is finding his champions on every hand. Yesterday's DTH, in the editorial dealing with the campus parking problem, contains the latest plea for those constant sufferers of the machine age.

Managing Editor Roland Giduz, taking a swerving detour in answering the question of too many cars in too little space, advocates a three-pointed plan which probably has the radiators of student car-owners boiling over.

I myself do not possess an auto, and further do not know a carburetor from a can shaft. However, one of my friends owns a delapidated carriage, and out of reverence to that venerable bus' age if nothing else, I feel that the man behind the steering wheel should have something to say about Giduz's questionably practical plan.

Initially, Roland backs the activation of a 12-student traffic committee to clear up the parking problem. Swell, so far. Secondly, he pushes the installation of compulsory campus license-plate buying at $1 a clip. That, too, even with taxation without representation of the autoed many, would not be bad—except for one point. It is beyond us how additional embellishment of the posterior of campus cars could aid materially in clearing the parking tangle, even if identification were made a little more positive. But then maybe I can't see the point for the carbon dioxide.

Even conditionally granting the first two points, I can fancy the indignation which would be caused by the third, which specifies that no student living within one-half mile of South Building may park on the campus during class hours. So a student is late for class and claims he had to take his buggy because he could not hoof a quarter of a mile in time. So it rains, as some one reports it is wont to do here on occasions, and just how many motorized students would mud it to class because parking space was denied him?

No, I'm afraid the answer does not lie in such legislation as Giduz suggests. Admittedly there are too many students who disregard the University's admonition that cars should not be brought to Chapel Hill unless absolutely necessary. Admittedly there is much room for improvement in the present setup, but the solution would seem to be in:

(1) More thoughtful, voluntary cooperation by the students themselves; and

(2) Provision of more parking space for the overflow of cars, instead of putting the cart before the horseless carriage in trying to make the present inadequate facilities serve.

Cheer for Lanier

Ed Lanier's Central Records office, in recent months recipient of enough criticism to try the patience of even its conscientious director, will probably be suprised today to see a word of praise for a welcome change.

Their on-the-ball issue of summer school class schedules, earlier than ever before in history, should facilitate what probably will be a record registration for the extra sessions. Students planning to spend June to August academically thus have been given more time to plan their class setups, a true boon to those who have been forced to make snap decisions in the past.

However simple the coures-and symbol-dotted sheet might appear in its final form, it is obviously no easy job to compile. Its early appearance is a tribute to a hard-working group, which has in the past had more coals heaped upon its martyred head than perhaps it has deserved.

There should never have been any doubt as to the sincere interest in student welfare of Lanier and his aides. Now there may be little doubt as to their capability of handling a confusing, many faceted problem.

When a student at a western college was asked how he was going to dress for the Mardi Gras, he gave with the meek reply, "I had thought of going as a yardstick, but I don't go to dances as a rule."

"Men," the coed declared contemptuously, "are absolutely lacking in judgment and taste."

"Possibly, my dear," he responded, "but just think how many old maids there would be if they were not."

On Seeing Red

To the Editor:

In view of the fact that there are so many different political organizations, not only on this campus, but throughout the United States, I believe the following article, which was published in the Washington, D. C. Times-Herald on March 21, 1947 and written by Lyle C. Wilson of the United Press, would be of interest to the students on this campus. The complete article follows:

American Communists are organizing yesterday for their greatest propaganda splurge since their campaign to help Hitler lick the British during the first 22 months of World War II.

They believe that they are fighting for their political lives.

A survey reveals that Communist party leaders have been holding a series of frantically urgent meetings from coast to coast to organize a campaign directed primarily at Congress. Their objectives are, first, to delay congressional consideration of legislation to outlaw the Communist party in the United States, and, second, to make medicine against the Administration's firm policy toward international communism.

Communist party headquarters in New York issued instructions to party leaders throughout the United States within the past few days for the opening of a propaganda barrage through non-Communist channels—the so-called Communist front organizations and fellow travelers.

They also want trade unions, union leaders, political leaders, churchmen, educators and others to rain telegrams on President Truman, Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach and Congress. Schwellenbach is getting attention because he told a congressional committee last week he favored outlawing the Communist party.

The Communist instructions were as follows:

1. Adopt the line that the Schwellenbach proposal is unconstitutional and is aimed not only at Communists but at the Bill of Rights.

2. Concentrate on Director J. Edgar Hoover of the Federal Bureau of Investigation as the master plotter against Communists and the Bill of Rights. Against Hoover the program is an unqualified smear campaign.

3. Develop mass meetings in a mass campaign against anti-Communist legislation and against United States foreign policy.

4. Tie the campaign in with a defense of Gerhard Eisler, alleged Communist subversive agent now held in New York.

The FBI and Hoover are especially singled out because Communists hold they have been largely responsible for developing public opinion against the party in this country.

Plans to raise a $250,000 campaign fund already have been announced in the Communist newspaper, the Daily Worker. The program includes a protest demonstration scheduled to take place in Washington in early May. It will be a demonstration of war veterans, but on a small scale—not more than 500.

S & F Show Falls Short, Gives Laughs

By R. Haskell Hamilton

Long noiseless, and long quiescent Sound and Fury re-entered the campus entertainment scene with a review entitled "What a World," Monday and Tuesday in Memorial Hall. Under the staging of Don Draper, and featuring Roy Cole's orchestra, and Winford Logan's MC'ing, the show fell far short of being a hilarious evening's entertainment, but still supplied a few chuckles.

The chief defects were staleness of material, lack of space, and a tendency to be smutty instead of funny. In fact, one, sad old "who called that bum a clarinet player," routine dates away back to the days when Rudy Vallee was packing 'em in as a megaphoned college sophomore; or roughly twenty years.

However, there were some good spots in the review. The "Fraternity Dance" skit, featuring Joe Romano was good, satirical fun. John Shearin in his impression of "Hamlet" was properly whimsical and confusedly sad enough to appeal to all of us who can appreciate his dilema in trying to follow a Shakespearean plot.

Frances Johnson danced a Spanish number exceedingly well, and probably played the castinets better than anybody ever has in Memorial hall. Dick Katzin and Ben Kistler helped to move the show along and provide an entertaining minute, or two. Singer Frankie Vance looked very good to the boys from the lower quad as she sang "I'm a Big Girl Now."

Aside from that, there wasn't much else. For what it was, a hastily put-together, light Olsen 'n Johnson type of review; it gave the audience their money's worth. And besides, "What a World" featured some high-priced talent in the form of the football squad who turned in a very creditable job of a glimpse "into Kenan, where dwell all the women."

Dan, Who Knows All About Belles, Says Duke Guzzlers Were Ringers

By Jud Kinberg

"I come to speak for Mike Jacobs, pal."

That authoritarian bark behind my cauliflowered typewriter ear meant only one thing: another visit from my partner, Dan the Dog.

"And what would the venerable Mike have to do with me, Dan? I retired from the ring about three miles down the road."

"Who you kiddin', columnist. We know you are sent down by the Boxing Commission when they find a typewriter in your glove. I am referred to you in connection with the unbeaten Daily Tar Heel Chug-a-Lug team. Uncle Mike wants you boys should take on Budweiser U. in a home-and-foam contest."

"Oh, that's different. Well, I can do no more than refer you to our esteemed coach, Wild Willy Woestenburp. But tell me, how come Uncle Mike hears about our insignificant attempts to date. After all, all we did was beat the Duke Chronicle last Friday."

"You don't know it, columnist, but you are not beating the Duke Chronicle last Friday. You and your keg cohorts outguzzle the six fastest bottle babies on the Duke campus."

"Dan! You don't mean to say. . ."

"Exactly, my gurgling friend. Them Dukes send over a ringer or two to sit in with the legit boys."

"You know, I thought that fellow with the hollow right leg might be a professional. Why, what will the AAU—American Alcoholic Union—have to say about this? But before we progress further, what proof do you have, Dan?"

"What proof do I have?"
"Yes, what proof do you have?"
"Why 3.2 proof, fool!"

Dan sat over in the corner for a minute, convulsed by his gag and then he returned, a set of contracts clutched tightly to his checked vest, his black derby tilted at a rakish angle.

"Enough light banter, columnist. Sign here and your fortune is made. No longer are you just another hasbeer. You are drinking for Mike Jacobs. With a little coaching we can build you and your team up to best by Pabst's test.'

No sooner had my pen touched paper than there were a motley crew of men surrounding me. First some guy measured me for a pair of pink tights. I don't know why they measured me for them. I think that by now I know what I look like tight.

When the smoke had cleared, and my skin had "Property of Mike Jacobs" firmly stamped on it, Dan tilted his bowler at a sly slant, looked me over and said, "Stick with us kid, and we'll have your name on every beer advertisement in America."

"Fine, Dan, fine. But I've got some work to do. You know, I do have responsibilities to the Mag and DTH."

"That can come later. Right now you have to start getting into condition. I think first you should go a few rounds."

"Budweiser or Schlitz?"

What Do YOU Say?

By Harry Snowden

Today's Question

How do you feel about the proposed Constitutional amendment to limit the Presidential tenure of office to two terms?

Answers

The amendment seems necessary to keep our democratic form of government open. For one man to stay in the office over two terms places a disadvantage on the principles of our government.—J. Withers Doar, Charlotte.

I think that the proposed amendment is unnecessary because this might deprive the people of their constitutional right of choosing the man who they think is best fitted for the office. If there is a good executive in office the country needs to keep him.—Stan Cohen, Chapel Hill.

As long as our President is elected to the office I don't feel the length of time should otherwise be limited.—Preston Brown, Johnson City, Tenn.

I am in favor of it as a reasonable application of the "guarantee of a republican form of government" principle, which is probably still desirable. — William Goulding, Boston Mass.

I feel that this is not very consistent with democratic freedom of choice. A free people elected Roosevelt for four consecutive administrations because he had proven an effective and progressive leader. Such a situation might concievably arise again. It is exactly such a situation which the present Congressional Taftocracy fears most.—Manny Margolis, Brooklyn, N. Y.

No man's ability is limited to two terms. Should we limit a poet to eight years of writing, or a teacher to eight years of teaching? Great Presidents come but once in a generation and the nation might well take advantage of one when such is found.—Dan McFarland, Brevard.

Rosters For Blue-White Football Game Released

CHOO CHOO CHARLIE JUSTICE and Joe (Stonewall) Wright, the Tar Heel backfield duo from Asheville's Land of the Sky, will have to pit their gridiron versatility against their "other half" when the second annual Blue-White football game opening whistle is sounded Saturday afternoon. That means, of course, that Walt (Pumping) Pupa and Jovial Jim Camp will be playing in opposition to the Asheville pair, breaking up the attack combination that ran the Tar Heels into the Sugar Bowl last season.

King Carl Snavely, the foxy Carolina grid engineer, announced last night his squad division for the Monogram club's gala spectacle, and in doing so he revealed that he would more than likely start Hosea (Rock 'Em) Rodgers and Johnny Clements with Justice and Wright for the Blue team, and Jumping Jack Fitch and Don Hartig with Pupa and Camp for the White team.

"It is a little indefinite as yet who will start," Snavely pointed out, "but as far as I can tell at the present, the backfield will run with Justice, Rodgers, Wright and Clements against Pupa, Camp, Fitch and Hartig.

"Each team will have about three teams," Snavely continued, "and with the squad divided as evenly as it is, I would say that the game will likely be won on breaks. The Blue team is a little weak in the wingback position with the top two, Clements and B. K. Grow, not in the top shape. Clements, for instance, is suffering from a briuse in his side that bothers him considerably."

That's just to mention the main offensive combinations, and the complete aggregate of each team is as follows, subject only to minor changes before the end of the week and the 2:30 o'clock kickoff Saturday afternoon.

Blue Team—Romano, Weiner, Stoioff, Rand, W. Smith, Cospito, Gatline, Spurlin, Hendricks, Swigart, Porterfield, Bernot, Weant, Baise, Doran, Klosterman, McLane, Shay, Szafaryn, Plunkett, Rywak, Rubish, Cooke, Williams, McCauley, Grow, Clements, Brannon, Kennedy, H. Rodgers, Koonce, Kosinski, Justice, Maceyko, Brasington, Swope, Wright, Sparger, Consumans, Sper, Barnes, E. Smith.

White Team—Powell, Pritchard, Tandy, Marczyk, Ross, Mitten, Perry, Lane, Stiegman, McDonald, Neikirk, Swicegood, Jolley, Berry, Varney, Roberts, Fowle, Hazelwood, Manning, Stillman, Louge Bilpuch, Etchison, Camp, Bauer, Rogers, Pupa, Flamish, Peck, Crutchfield, Fitch, Purcell, Britt, Byerly, Hartig, Alderson, Knox, Sutherland Reynolds, Wilson.

President Camp of the Monogramers also annuonced last night that the University band would definitely be on hand to render color to the gala affair, and that all the other necessary trimmings for the game were completed at the meeting of the lettermen last night.

A half-dozen petite sponsors, picked from Carolina coed population, were also announced yesterday. (Their pictures are on the front page of today's Daily Tar Heel.) Three of the lovely lassies will represent each team, and cheer leaders will be divided up between the two sides.

Grid Notes. The Sound and Fury show (produced by Daily Tar Heel sports writer Billy Carmichael) could easily be renamed "the night life of a football team." The feature numbers—at least as we saw it—included several prominent Tar Heel gridders. Joe Romano was the star of them all, taking the lead in one act and part in another that also had in it Art Weiner, Mike Rubish, Bill Smith, Don Logue, and Stan Marczyk. . .Jack Fitch was on the receiving end of a broken nose last week, but is better now. And Hosea Rodgers is still suffering slightly from a two-week-old injury.

DiLorenzo Paces Tar Heel Victory

(Special to Daily Tar' Heel)

Davidson, April 22.—Lefty Vinny DiLorenzo, Tar Heel mound ace, batted and pitched the University of North Carolina to a 5-2 triumph over Davidson in a Southern conference contest here this afternoon.

DiLorenzo, in addition to pitching masterful ball all the way, clouted his first home run of the season and doubled in four trips to the plate. He allowed only five bases on balls and fanned a like number of Davidson batsmen.

Carolina broke the scoring ice in the top of the third inning when the visitors tallied twice. The Tar Heels added another pair in the seventh, and after Davidson rallied for two in the bottom of the same inning, Carolina added another in the ninth to clinch the ball game.

The Tar Heels are idle today and Thursday and play host to the Naval academy here in Emerson stadium Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Either Tommy Andrew or Monk Whiteheart will probably hurl for Carolina.

Dallas Branch, playing shortstop for the Tar Heels, got a double and a single in three trips, and Bo Hackney connected for a two-bagger and a single in five times at bat and batted in two Carolina runs. Co-Captain Harry Beason also doubled for the visitors.

Carolinas AAU Track Meet Moved To 10 A. M. Saturday

Due to the conflicting Blue-White football game scheduled for Saturday afternoon, the annual Carolina AAU track meet has been moved up to Saturday morning starting at 10:30 o'clock, it was announced yesterday afternoon by Coach Bob Fetzer.

Entries have been received from Fort Bragg, Guilford College, State College, Duke and Carolina.

Sixteen events are on tap, and competition is expected to be keen in all events with State College being a slight favorite for the team score. This is because some of the leading runners from Duke and Carolina will be running in the Penn Relays.

Carolina will rely mostly on its distance men to take the team title. Jimmy Miller, Sam Magill, Alvin Smith, Mark Burnham, Julian Mackenzie, Walt Francis and Jim Hunt. The sprints will feature Ted Haigler, Ted Schultz, plus all other members of the squad that have been working out.

The middle distance events will feature Don Nelson, Tommy Turner, Merv Lentz and Halstead Holden. The hurdling strength is not known as yet, but most probably this will be the weakest spot on the Carolina ticket since four hurdlers are tentatively scheduled to go to Philadelphia.

The weight events will present a crew of footballers, plus such men as Jim Stringfield, Norm Durham, Mal Fleischman, Bob Kirk and Skeets Baldwin. The high jump will have Joe Corpening, Billy Joyner, Doug Smith and Fred Saunders.

Pole Vaulting for the Tar Heels will be Rusty Russell and possibly Norm McLeod. Laddie Terrell will broad jump.

Ward And Nolan Cop Opening Round Wins

Pinehurst, April 22 — Harvie Ward and Mike Nolan, two members of the Carolina golf team, won their first and second round matches in the annual North-South Amateur Golf tournament here today and are scheduled to continue in competition tomorrow.

At the same time, Junie Bailey and Ray Taylor, the two other Tar Heel qualifiers, were defeated in first round competition and eliminated from play.

Cold weather kept the general run of scores down again today, Ward and Nolan both hitting in the high 70's. It is hoped that the weather will break for the better tomorrow, however, and that the remainder of the tournament will be played under more favorable conditions. One round is scheduled for tomorrow, one for Thursday and the finals Friday.

U.S.-British Face Similar Problems, Reports Educator

"The educational problems faced by British colleges today are very similar to the conditions here at your University," said D. R. Dudley, educator from the University of Birmingham in England who visited the Extension Division in Swain hall Monday.

"We have no trailer camps like you have, but our enrollment has almost doubled and shows signs of continued growth. We don't know how we'll ever solve the building problems that all this expansion entails; I was extremely envious of your University when I saw all the construction going on here."

The visiting Englishman is a member of the Birmingham university extension division staff, and he is currently making a six-week tour of the United States, surveying and observing college extension work on this side of the Atlantic. Monday morning he looked over the University campus and the Swain hall plant as the guest of its director, R. M. Grumman, and in the afternoon he attended a meeting of the newly-appointed board of administration of the division.

In commenting on the fact that spring has come to Chapel Hill at last, the British educator said that before coming here he visited some of the colleges in Florida.

"And your campus here is beautiful. It is much prettier than anything I saw while in Florida."

Fee Structure Passage Is Milestone in History

By Barron Mills

The first student fee structure ever drawn up by a student group in the history of the University has been passed by the Board of Trustees, according to Chancellor Robert House.

Passage of the structure by the trustees marks a milestone in University history in that the Student legislature is the first student group to have the privilege to draw up and establish their own fees; it is the first time that the student fees will be able to fluctuate with the needs of various campus organizations, and it is the first fee structure established under the new constitution as passed by the student body last spring.

Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the greater University, seemed well pleased with its passage and stated, "After thorough discussion, the Board of Trustees passed the division unanimously. Chancellor House presented it well."

The five dollars per student each term as a block fee was recommended highly to members of the Board of Trustees by both Dr. Graham and Mr. House.

Of the five-dollar quarterly fee, one dollar goes to the Graham Memorial Student union for operation. The largest amount, $72,916, of the $110,000 budget was alloted to campus publications.

All phases of the campus constitution went into effect last spring with the exception of the fee-structure clause. Preparation of the structure began last summer with the appointment of a special committee appointed by Dewey Dorsett, president of the student body. The committee had worked on the problem with Dean Fred Weaver since that time.

Special Assembly Of Legislature To Meet Tonight

In what Speaker Charlie Warren indicated will be "a routine meeting," the Student Legislature will convene at 7:30 o'clock this evening at Di hall in a special session to consider three constitutional amendments, a recodifying of the election laws, and a bill to redivide the town districts.

The three amendments which Warren warned "will have to be ready for the May elections," are concerned with a revamping of the Coed Senate, the Dance committee, and the Student Audit board. None of the proposals are thought to be controversial, and little debate is expected.

The recodifying of the election regulations is merely to insure that voting laws will comply with the campus constitution. This bill, introduced a few weeks ago by Johnny Clampitt, sets the expenses which are allowed candidates, and sets the dates of elections, and other such mechanics.

Charlie Long's redividing bill, however, is expected to bring considerable comment from the floor. This measure considered by some observers to be a political move, would establish separate polling districts for town men living in fraternity houses and those who do not.

Warren added, "I hope tonight's meeting will not last too long."

Educational Director To Lecture Tomorrow

Miss Dorothie Berry, educational director of Helena Rubenstein, will lecture to students at the University on Friday morning at 11:00 o'clock in the YWCA office.

Miss Berry, who is sponsored here by the Woman's Vocational Guidance office, will discuss career opportunities for young women and the educational background most helpful in the attainment of certain careers, all of which is part of the Helena Rubenstein Educational program which is a community service keyed to the needs of future career women.

Phi Group Accepts Laws of Jim Crow

The Phi assembly last Tuesday endorsed maintenance of the Jim Crow laws after a lengthy, but calm, debate. An overwhelming majority felt that these laws constituted a definite need though they may not be a perfect solution to our problems. Furthermore, it was advocated that educational facilities for the colored race be made more adequate which in turn will ultimately benefit both races to a great extent.

Page Harris, of Durham, was appointed chairman of the membership committee to succeed Orren Hyman who found it necessary to resign because of preparation for Med school.

Russell Johnson, junior from Conway, was initiated into the assembly. Johnson was a former president of the Carolina Conservative club and at one time held the position of sergeant-at-arms with the Di senate.

Matt "Tookie" Hodgson, guest editor of the May Carolina Magazine, to be a humor issue, yesterday called a meeting for 2:30 o'clock this afternoon in the Mag office for all staff [illegible] upon the issue.

Maddox Asserts U.S. Powers In Campus Address Tuesday

Dr. William Maddox, director of Foreign Service training of the State department, declared Tuesday that the United States, as the most powerful nation in the world, holds a unique responsibility in history. This nation, holding the greatest technological, political, and potential military power on earth, faces two fundamental problems in this responsibility.

One, he said, is not to shirk our obligations as the most powerful leader in world affairs; and the other is not to misuse or abuse our great power. Dr. Maddox stated that the future of America depends on changing our "mentality" concerning international relations from uninformed indifference to vital interest and active participation.

Addressing students and faculty in the division of international studies of the political science department, Dr. Maddox called for realistic, intensive preparation by those who plan to enter the foreign service.

Dr. Maddox addressed the class in the Conduct of American Foreign Relations on Tuesday morning and held a seminar-conference that afternoon.

Freshmen, Sophomores Stage Class Meeting Today in Gerrard Hall

The freshman and sophomore classes will hold a joint meeting this afternoon at 4 o'clock in Gerrard hall, according to an announcement released by Dusty Leonard, sophomore class president, and Steve Nimocks and Al Winn, the two contenders in the current dispute over the freshman class presidency.

Although no settlement has been reached on the two void freshman class elections, both Nimocks and Winn urge all freshmen to attend the meeting today along with all sophomores. Leonard will preside over the discussion which is vitally important to both classes.

It is at this time that any plans for future class activities must be organized. One proposition to be considered is continuing the freshman-sophomore dances which proved very popular in earlier years. At present neither class has a social fund established to sustain any expenditure whatsoever.

Weant, Cox Receive Nominations As Athletic Association Heads

By Chuck Hauser

The University party yesterday released more of its slate of candidates for the coming student body elections scheduled for May. The candidates listed are running for Publications board positions and for offices of the Carolina Athletic association. Those nominated for Publications board are Gene Johnstone and Julia Ross, senior members, Bill Carmichael, junior member, and Ed Joyner, member at large.

For the Carolina Athletic association, Bob Weant was nominated for the presidency and Bob Cox for the vice-presidency.

Gene Johnstone, from Haleyville, is editor of this year's Yackety-Yack, a position which he also held for the 1945 yearbook. Bill Carmichael, a Chapel Hill resident, is one of the outstanding writers for the sports page of the Daily Tar Heel.

Julia Ross, rising senior from Burlington, is on the literary staff of the Carolina Magazine and is a member of Chi Delta Phi, literary sorority. While she attended Hollins, she was on the editorial staff of the campus newspaper, Hollins' Columns, and was elected editor of the publication for this year, but left school to come to Carolina.

Versitle Reporter

Ed Joyner, sophomore from Wilson, is at present writing for the Daily Tar Heel, continuing his news work interrupted by the war in 1942. Joyner was editor of his high school newspaper and yearbook, and worked on the Wilson Daily Times. He is now employed at the Orange Printshop in Chapel Hill, working on the technical side of the DTH, as well as the literary.

Bob Weant, nominated for president of the Carolina Athletic association, is a junior from Salisbury who was a first-stringer for the Tar Heels in 1944 and also won a letter last year for his work as a blocking back and center. He is on this year's grid squad also.

Bob Cox, Weant's running-mate for the vice-presidential post, is a member of both the golf and football teams, and made the limelight last football season with his brilliant extra point-kicking. Cox is a rising junior from Germantown, Tennessee.

Music Sorority Picks Officers and Pledges

The newly elected officers of the Iota Tau chapter here at the University are as follows: Mary Elizabeth Barnes, New Bern, president; Doris Newburn, Sarasota, Fla., vice-president; and Nina Thomas, Tampa, Fla., chaplain. Audrey Green, Lillian Messicks, Ann Brown, and Betty Tucker are the four new pledges.

Maurice Braswell, speaker of the Di senate, was re-elected president of the University Debate council Monday night, it was announced yesterday.

A newcomer to the council, Earl Fitzgerald, was chosen vice-president and veteran forensic man Jim Taylor was elected to fill the office of executive secretary-treasurer.

Dr. H. M. Oliver was re-elected faculty adviser. Besides Fitzgerald, Blanton Miller was taken into the council.

A debate team composed of Charlie Hodson, E. A. Ormand, Earl Fitzgerald and Russell Baldwin was chosen to represent the University in coming debates at the University of South Carolina and North Georgia college.

Consider Coed Permission . . .

Duke Ambassadors Will Play For May Junior-Senior Prom

The 1947 Junior-Senior dance will feature Sammy Fletcher and his 18 Duke Ambassadors who have been proclaimed "the South's outstanding college dance band." The Ambassadors, which include two vocalists, have already proven their popularity with Carolina students when they were presented in concert to the campus several months ago by Graham Memorial. Besides fronting the band, Fletcher also specializes on the drums.

The prom will be held on May 9 from nine until one o'clock at Woollen gym, and coed permission until 2 o'clock is under consideration. It will be a semi-formal affair.

In order to organize for the dance, both classes have formed the Junior-Senior Dance club. Membership cards to this organization will be sold for $1.50 to all juniors and seniors through class agents in all dorms, fraternities, and sororities. Town students and others may secure their cards at a booth in the "Y" during the next week.

The holder of each card will be admitted to the dance with date. Bill Halsey, Senior class treasurer, is in charge of membership card distribution.

Turn the Other Cheek

If someone calls you a dirty name and thereby arrests your attention, and it looks like someone is looking for trouble, don't do a thing. In fact, the best thing for you to do is to go in the other direction. But if you don't go, and you prefer to stand your ground and see what the matter is, don't participate in any violence. That is, if you have a watch worth $100 on your arm, and it looks like you're going to get your teeth pushed in, don't take off your watch. By all means, keep it on your wrist so that you can break it into pretty pieces.

And when somebody takes a poke at you, let him. After all it is a Christian world and you should turn the other cheek.

Now if you take off your watch, that will be an indication that you want a fight. Especially is this true if you were once a boxer. It is a matter of judicial notice that boxers have inhuman propensities. And if you hit back when someone slugs you, then you will be participating in an affray.

So don't defend yourself. Just stand and let them call you names all day. Remember, sticks and stones may break your bones, but words will never hurt you. Not much, that is.

Local judicial action of recent date in the matter of an "affray" once again has extended the torch of knowledge and learning to hitherto unknown heights. Verily, we have now transcended all human experience and approach the perfection of heaven at a rapid clip.

Soon, the courts of the provinces will probably abolish the plea of self-defense in murder cases. It is fortunate, however, that this expeditious pseudo-erudition will be corrected by our learned superior courts.

War with Russia...

BlazingFront-PageHeadlines Are Frightening, Confusing

By Barron Mills

Newspaper headlines are as changeable and unpredictable as the weather itself. Some are frightening, grim, depressing, and predict a bleak future while others depict solemnity, happiness, or joy. The weatherman and the historian have a hard time prognosticating the future. However, the weatherman has the edge on the historian because he has learned by experience that a cumulus cloud is just a bluff. The historian cannot judge by precedent, because the conditions leading to an event in question are not always identical.

The main headline of the Technician, campus publication at State college, for April 18 blared forth with "ROTC PREPARING FOR WAR WITH RUSSIA." First impulse of this headline, as was stated in the body of the article, is overwhelming and stuns the reader so that it takes several seconds for him to recover from his fright.

The sub-head under the streamer reads "ROTC IS BROADENING ITS PROGRAM; HISTORY MAY BE RETRACING THE OMINOUS THIRTIES." By this time the print of the article projects so far that it could be used as brail instead of ordinary print. After reading thus far we stop momentarily in order to check the dateline of the news sheet to reaffirm our belief that the paper was dated April 18 and not on April 1. But no, the dateline clearly states that it is not April Fool's day and so we continue our reading.

After scrutinizing the article several times it becomes doubtful what the editors of the Technician hoped to accomplish by frightening the students of State college. A high-ranking University official was heard to comment that he still did not get the significance of the front page editorial or why it was handled in the sensational manner.

The meat of the Technician article is as follows: "If the streamer above this article startles you, and you study it for a moment and then decide that the whole thing is absurd and that the editors of this newspaper are nuts, you are reacting in a perfectly natural way. But if you will think with us a moment, look into the international muddle, realize the scope and intent of the War Department's present fervor of activity, then a check into the broadening program of the ROTC at this college, take into consideration the fact that the ROTC training of the thirties, though not intended so, was preparation for the war with Germany—you may begin to see that the headline, however farfetched, may be significant, not too far from actuality, and certainly worthy of serious thought by us all."

Continuing, the article points out circumstancial evidence. General "Ike" recently paid a visit on a supposedly leisure tour of the southland, but "it is thought that his trip was for the purpose of assuring himself that his army was not daydreaming."

An editorial of this type would have been perfectly legitimate on the edit page. However, by the editors scorching their front page columns with it they defeated all purpose that it might have had. Probably the main purpose in printing such an editorial would have been to make the reader think. The blazing front-page streamer only tended to frighten the public and led to a good deal of misunderstanding.

Increased Subsistence Plan Receives Unexpected Support

By Earl Heffner

Operation Subsistence received unexpected reinforcement early last week when D-Day was postponed by the absence of Representative Meade of Kentucky, the critical man on the House Veterans Affairs subcommittee.

Reason for his absence? The Blue Grass solon was conducting a personal survey of living costs at Lexington's University of Kentucky. While the Honorable Mr. Meade was surveying, student veterans, reminiscent of their service days, were waiting.

For in the report of Representative Meads lay the question of whether the GI Bill subsistence had a chance of being increased by HR 870. Yesterday, the report was given to the Daily Tar Heel by Ben Rouzie, president of the Chapel Hill chapter of the American Veterans committee.

It is favorable!

The Kentuckian, accompanied by representatives of major veterans organizations surveyed Kentucky campuses and found Operation Subsistence figures corroborated in every case.

While his survey is still in the process of tabulation, Rep. Meade's recommendations are complete. The politico recommends revision in subsistence to $90.00 a month for single veterans and $125.00 a month for married veterans plus $15.00 for the first additional dependant and $10.00 for each additional one.

With Meade now favoring the increase, the lineup in the subcommittee reads very favorably. Here it is:

Representative Ramey, Republican of Ohio, as committee chairman favors the increase provided for by HR 870.

Representative Meade, Democrat of Kentucky, favors the bill.

Representative Lusk, Democrat of New Mexico, says "Maybe."

Representative Ross, Republican of New York, will not take a public stand.

Representative Wheeler, Democrat of Georgia, is against the measure.

In brief, we may see that two of the five-man committee definitely favor the bill while only one is against it.

Representative Lusk is reported favoring the bill. But she is expected to waver with the majority in order to preserve committee unity.

This puts the finger on Representative Ross of New York City. He reports that he hasn't made up his mind. But the solon must be under terriffic pressure from veterans in New York City universities—Columbia, NYU, et al. Hence, he may be expected to ride with the increase. This would bring the subcommittee report in with four favoring increase, only one opposed.

With this in view, it is obvious that now attention, in the form of letters, must concentrate on their own representatives in Congress.

The AVC bulletin reports that "every Congressman questioned reports tremendous mail pressure."

If you favor the increase, this is no time to relax the letter campaign.

For the first time since the introduction of HR 870, its chance of passage takes on a favorable tint.

Surely, a veteran who honestly believes that an increase is necessary, that it is merely an increase in the personal loan that the government is making him, has a three-cent stamp and 10 minutes to spare in making his wishes known to his representatives.

The Third Part....

The 'Nigger' in the Southern Woodpile -- 'Equal but Separate'

By Jimmy Wallace

Before the sight becomes too dimmed, either by political expediency, social pressure, habit, prejudice, or senility, one can glimpse a few of the salient factors pertinent to the Negro question:

Prejudice cannot be legislated out of existence. It will always exist in one form or another, for such is the way of things. One does not have to be ninety to know that.

Discriminatory legislation, ostensibly aimed at "preventing friction between the races," creates the superior-inferior relationship between races, and causes more prejudice than it cures.

Discriminatory legislation was legislated into existence. It can be legislated out of existence. Such should be done. It would be good for a change to have some legislation which is both moral and practical. It would be good for a change if we could satisfy the teachings of our religious and our political conceptions.

It is undeniably true that the problem is evolutionary in its nature. Social equality of the races is seen as a possible goal which lies many years in the future. Evolution takes place through a series of steps. First one is taken and then another. But the essential thing is that steps are taken.

Some people seem to think that evolution is synonymous with stagnation. They view every step in the chain as a revolution. In the name of peace and quiet, they suppress and cause upheaval and violence. And then, when violence comes, they condemn those who oppose the suppression which caused it.

In the interest of avoiding friction between the races, they set up schools on a dual basis, establish separate facilities in busses and trains, advocate the worship of separate Gods in separate churches.

The facilities of Southern schools in this dual system are said to be "equal but separate." But who has ever seen a Negro school which had the facilities of white schools? Who has ever seen the Negro section of a bus station, or train station, which was equal to that of the white section? Perhaps there are one or two such instances.

It is said that when the Negro has been better educated, has advanced his standard of living, then will be the time for him to come into society as a free man, casting off the shackles of a Pariah, emerging like a butterfly from a cocoon.

There are many who might espouse this doctrine (of truly "equal but separate" facilities) if it were carried into practice. But it is not carried into practice. The legislators and people of influence who preach improving the Negro prior to his debut, are the ones who deny him the improvement, and thereby guarantee to the Negro his present position.

Those who speak of the necessity of further education for the Negro are the ones who deny him schools with equal facilities. Those who speak of the necessity of a better living standard for the Negro are those who deny him a minimum wage for his largely unskilled labor. Those who decry his unskilled labor guarantee its remaining unskilled as long as he is denied education. Those who deplore the comparative economic bankrurptcy of the South guararntee that we will remain economically bankrupt until one thirrd of our total Southern population has developed the capacity to earn a living wage.

Many people who are now complaining would probably not be complaining if the facilities were "equal but separate." All that can truthfully be said of the facilities for white and Negro is that they are "separate." Thus the Southern pragmatist who shouts "equal but separate" instead of "equality" is caught in a quagmire of his own making. He does not even believe in his substitute for equality, much less equality itself.

The evolution of the species ((all races included) began with the amoeba. The evolution of practical democracy in the South could well begin with the repeal of the Jim Crow laws. If we cannot accomplish that, then we should fight for "equal" as well as "separate" facilities for both races in the matters of education, and transportation.

If the amoeba had behaved as we are currently behaving, we would still be amoebas.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

SENATORS SORE AT THEIR COLLEAGUES FROM SOUTH DAKOTA; TRUMAN BLASTS REAL ESTATE LOBBY; SCHWELLENBACH CRITICIZES PHONE STRIKE.

Washington.—Members of the Senate Armed Services Committee, now holding hearings on the Army-Navy unification bill, are biting their nails at their chairman, complacent Senator Chan Gurney of South Dakota.

As one member puts it: "Chan is a lobbyist for the bill rather than Committee chairman."

Equally disturbing is the fact that several army and navy officers testifying on the bill have let senators know privately they don't really believe what they told the committee.

"If we didn't say what the Top Brass wants," they explain, "we'd sure catch it—and maybe lose our rank."

From now on there will be more careful cross-examination of Army-Navy witnesses.

REAL ESTATE LOBBY

President Truman aimed some barbed remarks at both Congressional "inaction" and the real estate lobby when he discussed housing with spokesmen for eight national organizations who called to protest tragic delays in building homes.

Truman's remarks were inspired by criticism from David L. Krooth, co-chairman of the Housing Legislation Information Service, Wesley Pearce of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and Lee Johnson of the National Public Housing Conference who minced no words in telling the President that the nation's housing program had failed and why.

They pointed first to the "tremendous falling off" in home construction in the first three months of this year. Only 45,000 "starts" were made in home building in the first quarter of 1946.

"In other words, last year, when we had government controls, we were getting more home construction than we are now, though the construction industry and its friends in Congress told us that building would increase when the controls were lifted," said Krooth.

The President said he was fully aware of this. Grimly, he admitted that the "housing situation" was not improving—if anything, was getting worse.

"We need a lot more rental construction than we are getting," observed the President. "It is way down. Builders are putting their houses up for sale at high prices that the public cannot afford to pay."

Truman added that the end of price controls, plus delay in passing urgently needed housing bills, such as the Taft long-range public housing bill, were chiefly accountable for the housing shortage. He said that he had made "five appeals," public and private, for passage of the Taft bill, but Congress has stalled for over three months.

JESSE WOLCOTT STALLS

Truman said that the stalling was particularly evident in the House of Representatives, where the Banking and Currency Committee, led by Rep. Jesse Wolcott of Michigan, has effectively blocked action on a house version of the Taft bill, introduced by California's Helen Gahagan Douglas.

"I have done all I can and will continue to do everything possible to relieve the housing shortage," the President promised, "but it's a tough battle against the real estate lobby."

One of his visitors remarked that the real estate lobby had $10,000,000 to spend to block the Taft bill.

"The lobby is always in a position to control legislation," said the President, "by spending a great deal of money to get out misinformation that deceives the public. It's up to you fellows to counteract this propaganda by seeing to it that the public is told the real facts."

Veterans of Foreign Wars spokesman Pearce asked Truman if the Government was "doing anything further" about industrialized (prefabricated) housing.

"That is the quickest way to relieve the shortage in an emergency, if housing production can be put on an assembly line basis," declared Pearce.

The President agreed that industrialized housing couldn't be overlooked and reported that a Columbus, Ohio, plant for this purpose would soon get into mass production.

Letters To The Editor

Boycott

As a law-abiding resident of this community, I cannot disagree with the decision of a duly-constituted court of law in the recent "affray trial." The decision is a legal one, and I am sure in accordance with law. As a peaceful citizen, therefore, although I do not agree with it (and I sat through five hours of testimony before forming my opinion); I will not question its legality or call for violent action, or mass-meetings or anything in the least indicative of extra-legal action.

But, as a student of limited funds I can be very, very choosy where I spend my money. I for one, WILL NOT call for an "Independent" cab, if I have to walk in the rain; or take my date to a formal dance cab-less. In my opinion these drivers, employed by the Independent Cab Company, represent a misguided element, an element that is a blot and a blight on our fair South.

I do not think I could trust my sister, or my mother in a cab driven by the type of employee I saw in the court-room Tuesday. In all sincerity, therefore, I ask that the other students of Chapel Hill join me in boycotting the Independent Cab Company until the community is assured that the employees involved in the "affray" have lost their jobs. I, for one, do not want these men driving around our streets at night, or even in broad daylight.

As peaceful citizens it is our moral duty to make sure that the Merrit brothers do not have a chance to cause our community further harm.

The fourth round of mural softball was reeled off yesterday afternoon, and some of the more powerful diamond combinations began grabbing the spotlight.

Tar Heels Defend Unbeaten Record

With the first serve slated for 3 o'clock this afternoon, the polished Tar Heel tennis crew, proud possessers of an unblemished record, tangle with North Carolina State in quest of their thirteenth triumph.

Sporting a none too impressive record, the State squad is not expected to hold an unlucky thirteen jinx over the powerful locals in today's foray. The Raleigh crew lost to Duke and barely eked out a victory over Wake Forest against the only two teams that both squads have faced. Carolina topped these Southern conference foes by lopsided margins of 8-1 and 9-0.

Tomorrow the Blue and White netters embark on their northern tour with their first stop scheduled for Virginia when they clash with the Cavaliers on Friday. On the road for nine days, Coach Kenfield's charges are set to scrap wih seven schools. The card includes dual encounters with Army, Williams, Amherst, Wesleyan, New York university and a return match with the Yale Bulldogs whom they have beaten twice.

Despite his team's impressive record, Coach Kenfield has his fingers crossed and is looking to the hard matches ahead with not a little foreboding. The diminutive tutor expressed the opinion that there will be few easy matches from here on in. He explained that the boys would have to play steady games from now on in order to keep their victory skein intact.

Blue And White Combines Begin Working As A Unit

The Blue and White team combination that will face each other in the second annual Monogram club sponsored grid classic here in Kenan stadium Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock went through the second day of operations together yesterday, and the respective teams appeared headed into top form for the spring football encounter.

Injuries, although slight, may hamper Blue team operations a little, as may one on the White team. For the Blues, Hosea Rodgers, the starting fullback, still is working below top speed due to an injury of two weeks back, and Johnny Clements, No. 1 wingback, has a bruised side and worked light yesterday.

Jack Fitch, the star tailback for the Whites, broke his nose in scrimmage last weekend and may be pulled from the starting role unless his nasal apparatus improves.

Prior to the breaking up of the teams for work together yesterday, head Coach Carl Snavely drilled the Tar Heel candidates on passing and kicking. Snavely expressed satisfaction with spring practice results and indicated that he was looking forward to the game Saturday with enthusiasm, since it would give him a chance to get a good line on the abilities of some of the newcomers and the improvement of the veterans.

Respective Blue and White members will continue to work as a unit today and tomorow, Snavely said, announcing at the same time that line coach Max Reed would direct the Whites and backfield mentor Russ Murphey the Blues.

Ward, Nolan Defeated In Pinehurst Tourney

Pinehurst, April 23—Carolina's hopes of a North-South amateur championship received the death blow here this afternoon when the two remaining Tar Heel entries, Harvey "The Wonder" Ward and Mike Nolan fell before the force of crushing opposition.

Ward had the closer match of the two, as he battled his opponent, Dave Ewell, Jr., of Richmond all the way to the seventeenth green before dropping a two and one decision.

Nolan, on the other hand, was little match for his competition in the presence of Felice Torza, tourney medalist, who took the measure of the Carolina linksman by the decisive margin of six and five.

Rabbmen Prep For Navy Tilt

Black Out of Play With Injured Wrist

Back from their two-day journey on which they copped one Southern conference victory and were deprived on another by rain, the Tar Heel baseballers went through a brisk intrasquad game yesterday and are slated to do likewise today as part of the final preparations for tomorrow's clash with Navy.

Yesterday's contest saw the varsity reserves, with Tommy Andrew and Les Couch on the mound, oppose the junior varsity nine, with George Whitted and Frank Robinson twirling. Robinson was particularly effective during the abbreviated tilt.

One injury marred the otherwise fine physical condition of the team. Centerfielder Whitey Black, one of the top hitters on the team thus far this season, has already missed three games due to a badly-sprained wrist suffered in the Duke game last Friday. Definitely out of the Navy battle, Black may be ready for action next Tuesday against Wake Forest.

Valeska Haydon, violinist and Joseph Guillebeau, Jr., pianist, will be heard in a joint recital Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock in Hill hall.

Miss Haydon, Phi Beta Kappa student at Chapel Hill, has studied violin with Benjamin Swalin, Adele Smith Burnham, and at present with Willis Gates, instructor in the University music department.

Guillebeau, whose home is Barnesville, Ga., has been a pupil of Virginia Hare since entering U.N.C. in the summer of 1945. A graduating senior, he is accompanist for the Modern Dance club, for which he composed "Theme and Variation," which was performed here last quarter.

Wallace Hits Gen. DeGaulle In Paris Talk

Resistance Leader Starts New Party

Sorbonne, France, April 24—(UP)—Former Vice President Henry Wallace tonight made a thinly-veiled attack upon wartime leader of French resistance, General Charles de Gaulle. Without naming names, Wallace said, "France must remain a republic, free of dictatorship aspirations, not only in the interests of her people, but in the very interest of the world."

The famous circular amphitheater of the Sorbonne, where he spoke, rang with cheers. Wallace's audience knew instantly whom he was talking about.

De Gaulle recently organized a French people's party to press for constitutional reform. He announced today that it had several hundred members. However, the resistance leader denied that he had any aspirations to be a dictator.

UP, CP Candidate Receives Support Of Student Party

By Harry Snowden

The Student party yesterday afternoon completed nominations for most of the positions left unfilled, thus almost completing its slate of candidates.

Bill Moffit, already the University and Campus parties' candidate drew the nomination for editor of the Yackety-Yack. In making this move the party explained that it considered Moffit the only candidate with sufficient qualifications to fill the office, and in line with its policy of selecting candidates best fitted for positions had no choice but to endorse the already twice-nominated Moffit.

Barbara Cashion of Chapel Hill received the nomination for town co-ed representative in the student legislature along with Jo Fishel as women's dormitory representative.

Herman Baker, rising junior from Nashville, was nominated as Men's dormitory representative to the student legislature.

Charles Robinson, from Mooresboro and also a rising junior was nominated as men's representative to the student council.

Town representatives to the student legislature will be nominated at four o'clock Sunday afternoon when the Student party meets at that time in Graham Memorial.

Truman vs. Wallace Will Be Debate Topic In IRC Meet Tonight

Truman versus Wallace is the provocative topic which will provide the spark for an informal debate by the International Relations club on Monday evening at 7:30 in the Polar Parker lounge of Graham Memorial.

William Armstrong will lead the IRC discussion on the divergent foreign policy viewpoints of Henry Wallace and President Truman. It is expected that several leading campus followers of Wallace will be present at Monday's meeting to argue the case against Truman's so-called "tough" policy toward Russia.

Henry Wallace is expected back from his European speaking tour in which he attacked the Greek-Turkish aid bill to halt communism. Congressional support for the Truman doctrine has been strong. However, some observers feel that if the policy does not bear immediate fruits the pendulum of public sentiment will swing toward Wallace's doctrine.

Meanwhile, the organization went ahead with preparations for a special International Relations club picnic and social to be held next Tuesday afternoon.

Tentative plans for a freshman-sophomore dance were approved yesterday in a joint meeting of both classes. The dance will most likely be held May 24 in the Woman's gymnasium with such bands as the Duke Ambassadors being considered.

Dusty Leonard, president of the sophomore class, presided over the floor discussion yesterday which started with a report by Al Winn on the approximate expenses necessary. Two motions were passed that the dance be semi-formal and that one dollar invitations in the form of class membership cards be sold to freshmen and sophomores soon.

Committees appointed to start work immediately making definite arrangements were as follows: Stuart Bourgeois, Miles Smith, and Carl Durham, ways and means; Jo West and Jerry Lance, invitations and refreshments; and Chuck Hauser and Charlie Gray, publicity.

Alex Davis, chairman of the University party, last night released his organization's platform for the coming elections. The 11-point program was released after a party meeting in the Grail room of Graham Memorial yesterday afternoon.

Last point of the platform contains a promise of working toward an improved registration system involving the choice of instructors as a major point.

Leading the planks is an endorsement of a provision to convert Emerson field boxing pavilion to recreation rooms for men's dormitories.

Elections Bill Gains Passage In Legislature

After the tumult and confusion died, the Student Legislature last night had passed Jonnny Ciampitti's election bill, with the exception of the article providing for the location of polling places.

The assembly first heard a letter from Student Body President Dewey Dorsett recommending the passage of the entire measure. Dorsett emphasized that the vote at last quarter's polling place bill had created "considerable confusion on the campus."

Following the reading of the letter, the assembly got to work on the elections bill, article by article. Legislators jumped to their feet all over the hall suggesting amendments to the proposal which in essence merely recodifies the regulations in accordance with the campus constitution.

Chiefly important among the changes was the raising of campaign expenditures. The expenses allowed under the new laws are: president, $25.00; vice-president, $20.00; Tar Heel, Mag, and Yackety Yack editors, $20.00; secretary-treasurer, $20.00; all other offices, $8.00.

Buying Club Checks For UNC Veterans Will Soon Increase

Veterans who are members of the Chapel Hill buying club will soon receive an unexpected addition to their subsistence checks in the form of a patronage dividend, co-op officials announced yesterday.

It was explained that a patronage dividend consists of a rebate on the total value of all grocery purchases made through the organization. The checks that are now in the process of being mailed are based on 6 per cent of the total value of a member's orders since January.

"Besides authorizing this first patronage dividend we have also established a reserve fund from which we hope to pay our stock-holders a 5 per cent dividend within the year," said co-op chairman Tom McDade.

Incorporated in January of this year, the Chapel Hill Mutual Distributors Inc., the co-op has been temporarily operating as a buying club until such time as a regular store could be established.

Adams to Be Candidate For Head Cheerleader

Grey L. Adams has announced that he is running for head cheerleader as an independent candidate in the forthcoming election with John Dale, as publicity agent.

Grey is a familiar figure around campus and is well known for his activities in Sound and Fury.

Supporters of Grey are confident he is the best man for the important job of head cheerleader. He promises that, if elected, he will put forth his all to revive the traditional spirit of Carolina and his platform is for the benefit of the student body initiating new songs, more cheers, and better cheerleading.

Weil Lecture Series Will End Tonight

Professor Walton Hamilton will deliver the third and last of his series of Weil lectures based on "The return of Political Economy," this evening at 8:00 in Hill hall. The specific topic of this evening's talk will be "Union of State and Economy."

Hamilton is a professor of law at Yale university and a member of the bar. A former special assistant to the Attorney General of the United States, he is also an economist by training, and received a PhD in this field at the University of Michigan. He is the author or co-author of many books, including: Price and Price Policy; The Pattern of Competition; Antitrust in Action; and Patents and Free Enterprise.

Although not delivered in the year 1945-46, the Weil lectures on American citizenship are normally an annual feature of the public lecture program at Carolina. These lectures were established in 1914 through the generosity of the families of Mr. Sol and Mr. Henry Weil of Goldsboro, N. C. The series was inaugurated by the then ex-President William Howard Taft who spoke on the subject "The Presidency: Powers, Duties, Obligations, and Responsibilities." Since that time the lectures have been delivered by many prominent persons.

Professor Hamilton spoke Wednesday evening on "The State goes Economic" and Thursday on "The Economy goes Political." This evening he will tie them together with a final lecture on "Union of State and Economy."

Mark A Milestone

It is a common cry, particularly when election heat warms student sensibilities into thought. It has been, in many cases, a well-conceived and justified criticism, that lethargic student government at the University has lapsed into a figurehead function. In some ways it may still be true, but those who see rhyme and reason in student autonomy have a stronger defense as of Wednesday.

Thursday's DTH headlined passage by University trustees of the first student fee structure as a "milestone in history." Considering its tri-fold implications, that appelbation was well used. Its consumation is a tribute to the Student Legislature, the first such group to draw up and establish their own fees For the first time the structure can be moulded to the ever-changing needs of campus organizations, a modernized and effective improvement. Further, it is the initial fee setup emanating from the revised constitution, passed with the exception of its fee clause last spring. Its test will be the test of the concerted work of President Dewey Dorsett's committee with Dean Fred Weaver.

Those who fathered it are confident that it will succeed. The pleasure of Dr. Frank Graham at its passage is shared by the DTH and by all those who have hopes of improving even one of the most ideally-founded of University student governments.

It is a job capably done, and should set a scintillating example for the administration holding sway after May's elections to do as well.

Remove the Rocks

All things political at Carolina are based primarily on personality. A truck driver's handshake and a tooth powder smile are unfortunately prerequisits of success—even more than in the bigger political wheels from which ours has sprung.

With relatively sparse records to condemn or affirm their abilities, candidates are inadvertently forced into forms of pressure politics and log-rolling to secure election. There can be no substitute for concentration campaigning, which in many cases may have won a job for the inferior man. Things are too conveniently conducive to mud and slander-slinging for those who have the power to do so to exercise it indiscriminately.

That there will be mud slung is no question. It always has been and always will be. Whether there will be corners cut, election rules neatly flanked and morally dubious vote-getting tricks employed gets an identical answer.

The spoils of victory are sweet. The acclaim of one's fellow man is a balm. But candidates in the impending election should make sure that their fellow man has not been duped, swerved and cajoled into that brass approval.

An election sans slander, rancor and malpractice is to be desired. That failing, throw your mudballs—but take out the rocks.

Not-So-Small Voice

This is a still, small voice in the midst of a whirlwind of criticism currently buffeting the head of Henry Wallace, an American who has dared to refute the omnipotence of the government of his native land. Mr. Wallace has styled himself as a middle-of-the-roader, a term which may not fully explain some of his policies and which certainly is not worn well by one of his idealistic stripe. Surely he could not be called mid-roaded in hos most recent oral indiscretions in Britian.

But the point is this. Before condemning this man without a country, already being tabbed as everything short of a modern Aaron Burr, take careful stock of what he has said. The eyes of a visionary look up, not down. Despite his misplaced ethics Mr. Wallace looks up. History will judge his abilites. Let us not make a liar of all his contemporaries should his words be true words of prophecy.

Words of Lincoln Still Apply to Stormy Future

By Lincoln S. H. Kan
International Relations Club Member

Abraham Lincoln once said, "The dogmas of the past are inadequate to the stormy present. The occasion is piled high with difficulty, and we must rise to the occasion. As our case is new, so we must think anew and act anew. We must disenthrall ourselves."

The historian of the future will say that this present era in which we are now living was certainly stormy. Let us then "think anew and act anew" in regard to the present world picture. For example, let us take two particular cases in the news—Chinese government reorganization and the problem of disarmament.

Last week, the Chinese government created a coalition State Council composed of four parties. Control of government still remains in the hands of the Kuomintang party led by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

In this new State Council, there were four seats given to the Young China party, four to the Democratic Socialists, 17 to Kuomintang party and four to minority parties made up of non-partisan groups. General Chang Chun was named president of the Executive Yuan and Dr. Sun Fo the vice-president. They were both chosen by Chiang Kai-shek from the Kuomintang party.

Opposition immediately sprang up within China and doubt has been expressed by the western powers regarding this coalition State Council. The minority parties resent the lack of sufficient representation. The world wonders if General Chang Chun and Dr. Sun Fo are to be merely figureheads for Kuomintang domination.

Many "world thinkers" make the mistake of putting perfection of governmental machinery in the forefront of action. Certainly the present Chinese State Council is not perfect, yet some organization must be set up in order that corrections can be made without confusion.

The communists were not included; however their absence was by their own volition. They were given the opportunity to join the coalition, but they did not condescend to join because the joining was not on their own terms. Instead, the communists have retreated to the mountains to play in their own yard while "cussing" the existing government and making no attempt to put forward a constructive solution for the good of all the people of China. The welfare of the communist party seems to come first.

The establishment of this new State Council will enable the Central government of China to embark on a program of reform in their internal affairs with the consent of the people. In time all other parties will have a voice.

On the international scene, the coalition State Council will mean a truly sovereign state which will honor its commitments and take active part in building a true world community. The organization of the Council is the first concrete step toward a reform government in China. Censure should be withheld until this new council has a chance to prove its worth.

All over the world people are talking about the practicability of disarmament through the United Nations and the use of the conference method to settle conflicts. This is the way toward peace. Because of the recent failure of the Moscow conference, many of us are now afraid of inevitable war.

Let us think and act anew on this disarmament problem. Nations will disarm only when frontiers no longer matter. Frontiers will no longer matter when larger spheres of policy are made a subject of international discussion among the little people of the world.

Peace is so simple that we are unconscious of it. War stirs us. We forget the lesson learned, for example, in the peaceful relations between Canada and the United States, despite their economic and territorial rivalries. The world community also rests upon trust.

Wishful thinking, diatribes and indifference cannot do away with wars. The tears of widows and mothers flow in the same stream, knowing no division, knowing only the mutuality of death to their loved-ones.

It is the duty of each one of us to learn, discuss, think and act on the problems of the world. "The dogmas of the past are inadequate to the stormy present," said Abraham Lincoln. "We must think anew and act anew. We must disenthrall ourselves."

Carolina Merry-Go-Round....

Politicos Overlook Important Bloc In Pre-Election Ballot Tug O' War

By Joe Allan and Jay Foss

The spring elections constitute one of the most interesting machinations that our august body of campus politicos ever managed to conjure. This spring proves no exception to the general rule, yet it will do no harm to discuss the nature of the coming elections and evaluate the situation.

A perusal of the respective party planks now available reveals many outstanding objectives. Such features as additional telephones in the dormitories, a student bank, etc, etc, are excellent points.

No doubt these political maneuverings have only been made after much thought and consideration on the part of those concerned. Those drawing up the party platforms probably burned plenty of midnight oil and vast quantities of various beverages while thrashing out the differences on matters of party policy.

However, we have noted a marked omission in the various platforms. The fact that they left out an all important plank reveals their inadequate grasp of the nature of their constituency. They have completely ignored the most united group of voters on the campus. This militant group to which we refer is comprised of our canine friends.

The University has been described as consisting of "a handful of folks and a helluva lot of dogs," a fact which has been borne out in the results of a recent survey, when it was found that more polls will be frequented by dogs in the coming election than by all other elements combined. In the light of these facts it is astounding that the local campus politicians have not made provisions for securing the dog vote.

At present the dogs are a mighty dissatisfied group. Their troubles are deep-rooted and are most obvious not only on the campus here but throughout the entire world. Just last week during the discussion panel in Gerrard Hall it was agreed that wherever hunger, poverty, suppression, and sickness abound there is where Communism will be born and flourish.

Due to recent unhumanitarian propaganda public opinion has been swayed so that now our canine friends are refused admittance to all eating establishments, and what's worse they are subject to death if not properly identified as belonging to someone.

When looking at this situation in a broader sense the squirrels aren't having a very easy time of it either, as long as these hungry dogs are hunting them day and night, routing them out of house and home, attacking them on the lawns and slaughtering them. Remember, their votes are to be considered too! Politicians, we call on you to provide a change in the old order and reconfer upon these citizens their rights, giving them suitable eating facilities in Lenoir Hall. This would immediately alleviate the entire food situation, pacify the squirrels, and prevent possible revolution. But, best of all, hundreds of votes would be secured by the party responsible for such progressive measures.

Hillel Sabbath Rituals To Start at 7 o'Clock

Hillel Sabbath services will be held at 7 o'clock this evening in the Roland Parker lounge of Graham Memorial. Attention is called to the change in meeting time from 7:30 to 7 o'clock.

Dr. Joseph W. Straley of the physics department will be guest speaker, talking on "A Scientist Looks at the United Nations."

"It's humiliatin' to be called JUVENILE delinquents."

Group Aims Clarified

To the Editor:

Because of obvious misunderstandings about the Fellowship of Reconciliation (not the "Brotherhood" as DTH writers have called it) which have appeared in letters to the editor, group discussions, and the debate in the Di Senate Wednesday night, it is time for someone to explain the nature, purpose and constituency of this organization. I am not a member myself, but have been familiar with the FOR and its program for more than a decade.

It is primarily a Christian organization, not using its religion as a cover for sinister, subversive activities. It is nation-wide in scope, having several thousand members who are either clergymen or active laymen of various denominations. Many of the theological seminaries have chapters of the FOR. Among its constituent members will be found the name of Harry Emerson Fosdic, John Haynes Holmes, Edwin McNeill Poteat, Walter Russell Bowie, and dozens of other prominent church leaders.

Using the method of direct non-violent action, combined with moral courage rarely found among professed Christians, they are dedicated to the following objectives:

(1) ". . .to work to abolish war and to foster good will among nations, races, and classes. . ."

(2) ". . .to build a social order which will suffer no individual or group to be exploited for the profit or pleasure of another, and which will assure to all the means of realizing the best possibilities of life. . ."

(3) ". . .to advocate such ways of dealing with offenders against society as shall transform the wrong-doer rather than inflict retributive punishment. . ."

(4) ". . .to show reverence for personality—in the home, in the education of children, in association with those of other classes, nationalities, and races. . ."

(5) ". . .to avoid bitterness and contention, and to maintain the spirit of self-giving love while engaged in the struggle to achieve these purposes."

Many readers will scoff at these objectives as being "high sounding." Indeed, they are high sounding; but somehow the members of the Fellowship of Reconciliation manage to live up to them.

Tar Heels Battle Navy In Home Contest Today

Local Nine Seeks to Repeat Triumph of 1946 Campaign

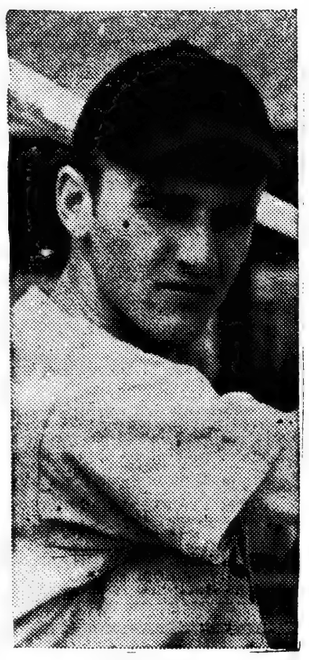
Monk Whiteheart Named for Mound Duty Against Revengeful Middie Aggregation

By Bob Goldwater

Revenge will be one of the main incentives for victory on the part of the opposition in Emerson stadium this afternoon when a strong Navy diamond crew invades the local lair to battle the Tar Heels of Carolina. Starting time will be 4 o'clock.

Several players on the visiting outfit were with the Middies last year when they went through the season with only one blemish on an otherwise perfect slate—and that to Carolina by a 2-1 count. But quite a few of the Tar Heels who performed in that victory will also be on hand today to add their bit towards a possible repeat performance.

The strong right arm of Monk Whiteheart will carry the pitching burden today as the Carolina mound ace seeks to hang up his fourth triumph against one loss. Buck Hardee will do his catching.



The rest of the Tar Heel batting order will have Dallas Branch, ss; Bo Hackney, 2b; Harry Beason, lf; Jack Hussey, rf; John Gregory, 1b; Tom Clayton or Jim Kelly, cf; Buster Stevenson, 3b.

Today will be Gregory's big day in the social world, for the Tar Heel co-captain will be married tonight to Miss Kay Hunt of Greensboro.

For the Middies, who move on to Duke tomorrow, Coach Max Bishop is expected to use Ronnie Burton on the mound and Jim Duquette behind the plate. Leading the Navy attack are leftfielder Andy Frahler, also one of the top pitchers on the team, and rightfielder Pete Boney, who leads the squad in runs-batted-in.

DIAMOND DUST: Last year's triumph came mainly through the efforts of Hamp Coleman, who twirled a neat three-hitter, and Cleet Cleetwood, who walloped a homer. . .Carolina leads Navy, 4-3, in the 1946-47 sports rivalry.

Grid Teams Hold Last Heavy Drill Before Big Battle

Carolina gridiron candidates spent an afternoon under the broiling sun yesterday, and the respective Blue and White teams that will clash Saturday afternoon went through their last heavy work before the annual exhibition battle.

In regular practice, George Sparger, converted end who is now at blocking back, alternated with Joe Wright. Sparger, an outstanding end last season, is improving daily at his new position, and he is expected to be a valuable addition to the Carolina backfield when the season gets underway next fall.

Complete starting lineups will be picked this afternoon after a light workout, but it appears now that Charlie Justice, Hosea Rodgers, Johnny Clements and Joe Wright will begin operations for the Blue team of Coach Russ Murphey, and that Jim Camp, Walt Pupa, Don Hartig and Jack Fitch will start for the Whites of Coach Max Reed.

Justice and Camp were guests on the Daily Tar Heel sports broadcast over radio station WDUK in Durham yesterday.

Philadelphia Story. . . .

Milne, Seligman, Simmons Enter In Penn Relays Today

Coach Dale Ranson led the invasion of Philadelphia, for the Penn Relays, by taking seven tracksters to the city of Brotherly Love last night.

The first event that will have a Tar Heel runner competing is at 4:50 this afternoon when Chunk Simmons gets off in the trials of the invitation 120-yard high hurdles. The finals in this event are slated for 5:25 o'clock.

Jack Milne will carry the Blue and White in the open two mile event that starts at 6 o'clock.

Bob Seligman will participate in the shot put and discus which begins at 3 o'clock.

Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Jack Moody will be in the high jump, and a shuttle hurdle relay team made up of Bob Morrow, Hunter Heggie, Dick Taylor and Simmons will get off in the trials at 3:40 o'clock. The finals are at 5:30.

The remainder of the squad will compete either in the junior or senior division of the Carolina AAU meet here starting Saturday morning at 10:30.

State college will be the favorite to cop the team title due to the fact that both Carolina and Duke will have key men in the Penn Relays.

Competition is expected to be fast and entries from Fort Bragg, Duke, Carolina and Guilford plus a host of unattached entries will make for a full field.

It is requested that all men interested in helping officiate the AAU meet Saturday morning report to Coach R. A. Fetzer at Fetzer field at 10 o'clock tomorrow.

All men expecting to compete are asked to check the track bulletin board and be at the meet a half-hour before their event.

Outfit Off Today On Nine-Day Trip; Seven Tilts Slated

Throwing superstition to the winds Coach John Kenfield's victory-minded crew turned their 13th encounter into a 9-0 rout as they completely blanked the N. C. State Wolfpack yesterday afternoon.

Today at 2 o'clock the Kenfield Kids embark on an extended eastern trip with several bookings in New England and New York. Playing a game every day except Sunday, the Carolina squad faces Virginia tomorrow, Army Monday, Williams Tuesday, Amherst Wednesday, Wesleyan Thursday, Yale Friday and completes the schedule with NYU on Saturday.

In yesterday's foray, the Blue and White charges dropped only one doubles set to the weak Wolfpack. Vic Seixas had little trouble in trimming Bill Weathers 6-3, 6-1 in the feature tussle. Clark Taylor, in the number two match, made short work of Arthur Culbertson when he trimmed the slim visitor 6-1, 6-3. Teammate Charlie Rice ran into some tough luck in the sceond set and was forced to play sixteen frames before taking the contest, 6-0, 9-7.

Stan Gruner beat Charlie Boney in two 6-3 sets while Ray Morris was taking the measure of Jim Sherrill 6-1, 6-2. At the same time Sam Daniels, playing his second singles match of the year, trounced erratic Jim Messick 6-1, 6-3. Daniels proved his worth when he was chosen as one of the nine players who will travel north.

The rest of the squad will consist of Vic Seixas, Clark Taylor, Charlie Rice, Jack Kenfield, Stan Gruner, Ray Morris, Jim Nicholson and Don Skakle.

The doubles results were: Kenfield-Skakle defeated Weathers-Boney, 6-2, 6-2; Wilder-Alexander defeated Culbertson-Messick, 6-1, 5-7, 6-2; Swigart-Johnson defeated Fuerstman Pinner, 6-0, 6-0.

Cercle Francais Sponsors Series Of French Films

With the cooperation of local theater manager E. Carrington Smith, Carolina's Cercle Francais will sponsor a benefit series of Gallic film showings in April and May. All proceeds from the performance will go to swell the national fund dedicated to the construction of memorial centers in devastated cities of France.

Second film in the series will be "Francis the Frst", described as a "typically French comedy" starring famed actor Fernandel. According to Alain Singer, the club's drive chairman, other titles have not yet been decided. Le Cercle Francais hopes that the Spring quarter series of benefits will raise over $500 toward the $95,000 needed to build and maintain a medical and social center in the French city of Lorient.

Singer also reported that the first benefit film, "Resistance" which was shown at the Pick Theater last Wednesday, raised over $150 for the fund. He urged those who wished to take part in the project, but who could not attend the film showing, to send their contributions to him at St. Anthony hall.

NEWS BRIEFS

Warren Austin Receives Post On Assembly

Herschel Johnson Named Alternate

Washington, April 25—(UP)—The State Department has announced that Warren Austin has been named Chief Representative to the Special General Assembly meeting on Palestine, due to start Monday. Herschel Johnson has been named as alternate.

Earlier today, Austin said that contrary to widely-held belief—the Soviet Union is not trying to sabotage the United Nations.

Austin admitted that settlement of our issues with Russia will take a long time. But, he added, "The progress we are making in the U. N. will result in agreements with Russia on matters that now seem insoluble."

Austin acknowledged that the U. N. had not fulfilled the high expectations with which people had hailed its birth. However, the American delegate said that the U. N. had not failed, but merely has been unable to accomplish immediately the things the world had expected of it.

Hungary to Apply For U. N. Membership

Washington, April 25—(UP)—It was learned tonight that Hungary, one of the former satellites of Nazi Germany, plans to apply for membership in the United Nations. A Hungarian legation spokesman says Hungary's request for U.N. membership will be submitted to the Security council "in the near future."

Bank Witnesses Say May Cashed Check

Washington, April 25—(UP)—Two bank witnesses have testified that former Kentucky Congressman Andrew May cashed a 5,000 dollar check made out to him by the Garsson brothers munitions combine. They said May took 1,000 in cash and deposited the rest in his account.

Marshall to Report On Moscow Meeting

Washington, April 25—(UP)—The State Department announces that Secretary of State Marshall will give the American people a first hand report on the Moscow conference at 8:30 Monday night (E.S.T.). His 30-minute address will be broadcast from Washington on all major networks.

Mark Clark Blames Russia for Failure

Vienna, April 25—(UP)—General Mark Clark has returned to Vienna from the Moscow conference. He says failure of the Big Four to reach agreement on the Austrain treaty was due almost entirely to Russia taking a new position on issues the ministers previously had agreed upon.

Workers Arrested For Demonstration

San Francisco, April 25—(UP)—Police have arrested 27 telephone workers who defied orders to break up a mass demonstration against an injunction limiting pickets. Some 2,000 strikers took part in the rally and several phone girls were knocked down when the police charged in.

Mediators Meeting To End Phone Strike

Washington, April 25—(UP)—Government mediators have been meeting again with company and union representatives in new efforts to end the phone strike. But one government official says no progress is expected until late tomorrow at the earliest.

Three Strikes, and Out...

Tragedy of Traffic Light Marks Passing of Landmark

By Chuck Hauser

There was no 21-gun salute, there was no bowing of heads, there was no mourning, but at 6:15 yesterday morning another Chapel Hill landmark passed into obscurity.

The famed landmark was the well-known standing traffic light at the intersection of Franklin and Columbia streets, the bane of many a Chapel Hill motorist's existence.

The tragedy was only the climax to an intriguing story, one which might well be called "Three Strikes—You're Out!" for this is the third time in less than six months that the light has been knocked down.

Coup de Grace

The first two times a truck and a small auto with a slightly inebriated driver were involved. But the coup de grace came yesterday morning when a gigantic moving van neatly picked the light up—concrete base and all—and deposited it on the sidewalk in front of Huggins Hardware store on Franklin street.

The van is one which might be familiar to many in Chapel Hill—it is often seen parked in front of the Carolina Theater delivering films. It was headed in from Carrboro when the accident occured, the driver apparently having fallen asleep at the wheel. Fortunately, no one was injured.

The truck departed from the Hill sometime between 7 and 8 o'clock, being towed out the Durham road by a large wrecker summoned from Raleigh. And so ended another tragic episode in the life of our traffic light.

Never to Rise

But, as the game goes, three strikes—and out. The light, after its demolition, fell, never to rise again.

After Chapel Hill police had been directing traffic at the intersection all morning, the noon sun found a new traffic light being installed, but not in the same place. The new one was to be suspended over the street.

At 10 minutes past 2 o'clock the new light was working, having been transferred from the Columbia-Rosemary street corner up to the busy Franklin street intersection.

There was no 21-gun salute, there was no bowing of heads, there was no mourning—only a sigh of relief from Chapel Hill car-owners.

Jim Camp, shown above, is the president of the Monogram club which is sponsoring the Blue-white game this afternoon. Camp will start at wingback for the white team.

Pi Kappa Alpha Pledges Fourteen

The president of Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity announced yesterday that the organization has recently pledged the following men:

James Boyles, Norman Chesson, Sam Green, Louis Haynes, Grover Hinson, Allen Morgan, Robert Morrison, Joseph Murphy, Jim Phillips, George Ray, Joseph Rutledge, Dave Stroud, Andrew Toxey, Johnny Trimble.

Housing Projects Being Beautified Around Campus

With the advent of spring a beautification program is in full swing about the grounds of the University housing projects. Supervisor of Operations J. S. Bennett announced yesterday that the last of over four thousand shrubs and flowering trees have been planted in Victory Village and that the sowing of grass lawns in the Village is being finished up this week.

Grass and shrubs are also being planted around Nash and Miller halls and in front of the Monogram club and a new hedge has been installed in front of the trailer camp on Pittsboro road.

Bennett said that the second brick walk to take the place of the traditional gravel ones on the campus is almost complete between Franklin dormitory and Cameron avenue in front of South building. As soon as it is completed work will begin on third brick section between South building and the Carolina Inn along Cameron avenue.

Another new walkway has recently been laid out between the trailer camp and Victory Village so the students will not have to walk along the highway in that area. The walk is of gravel with street lamps installed for interest.

Orchestra Plans to Feature 'Suite for Strings' Monday

Thaddeus Jones, native of Asheville and well known composer, will be featured on the program to be presented by the North Carolina Symphony orchestra which will perform Monday evening at 8:30 in Memorial hall.

Now stationed in the United States Navy School of Music, Washington, D. C., Jones graduated from the University in 1938 with an A.B. in music. From 1938 to 1941 he taught instrumental music in the Durham city schools; in 1942 he received his M.A. degree in composition from the Eastman School of Music, and since that time has taught composition and theory at the Navy School of Music.

He has also continued his study of composition with Nadia Boulanger and Nicholas Nabokoff, and is a member of the National Association of Composers and Conductors and of the American Musicological society.

In Neo-Classical Style

His "Suite for Strings" which will be played by the Orchestra is in neo-classical style, using the dance forms of the classic suite in a contemporary idiom. According to Symphony Director Benjamin F. Swalin, "It is absolute music having no program and telling no story; it is contrapuntal in style with unusual rhythmical effects. There are many cases of poly-choral and poly-tonal effects, but at no time is it a tonal."

The composition was written last year and is dedicated to Mr. Jones' daughter, Gwenyth.

Tickets are on sale at Ledbetter-Pickard's. Membership cards may also be used. For information about children's concert call Mrs. Fred B. McCall, 7500.

Game Concludes Spring Practice; Starts at 2:30

By Irwin Smallwood

The Tar Heel sports picture will make a quick shift from the baseball field and tennis courts to Kenan stadium this afternoon. At 2:30 o'clock the second annual Blue and White spring football game will get underway, producing what promises to be a first-rate preview of what's to come next fall when the Carolina gridders begin the defense of their Southern conference crown.

A crowd of several thousand is anticipated for the Monogram club-sponsored event, which will be complete with all the trimmings of a regular fall encounter. The University band, under the direction of Earl Slocum, the cheer leaders and six coed sponsors will add color to the contest.

Coaching Awards

And at the half, the Monogram club will present its awards to the varsity and jayvee or assistant coaches who, in the opinion of the club members, have contributed the most to Carolina athletics during their tours of duty as Tar Heel mentors.

Charlie Choo-Choo Justice, the Carolina second string All-American tailback last season, will be leading the Blue team in action, and Jim Camp, president of the letterman organization and a star wingback from last year, will pace the Whites along with Walt Pupa.

Each team will have two or three reserves in each position, and these reserves will be lettermen to a large extent. However, quite a few potential Tar Heel gridiron stars seeing action will be playing for the first time under the Blue and White banner, and several jayvee performers from last season will be in the thick of things after having been elevated from the reserve squad.

Actual Game Conditions

The game today, which comes as the finale to the spring practice session, will be played under actual game conditions, with four 15-minute quarters of playing time. Officials for the engagement will be Eddie Teague, Bill

See HOST, page 3

Members of the University band are requested to report to the South gate in Kenan stadium at 2 o'clock with their instruments. Uniforms will not be worn.

Married Women Vets May Get $90 Per Month While Attending School

Married women veterans with children may receive $90 a month subsistence allowance while attending school even though they are recognized as dependents of husbands also attending school under the G.I. Bill, the Veterans Administration has ruled.

The decision was based on a case involving a husband and wife, both veterans, with one child. It stated that the maximum of $90 per month subsistence allowance would be paid only if the woman's outside income from productive work did not exceed $110 per month.

The woman claimed the child as her dependent for the purpose of the subsistence even though her husband was in training under the same law and was receiving a subsistence allowance of $90 a month because he had a dependent (the wife).

Under the Servicemen's Readjustment Act, an eligible veteran is entitled to a subsistence of $65 a month if he or she has no dependents, or $90 if there are one or more dependents, provided his or her income from productive work does not exceed $110 a month.

The question whether the woman veteran in the case was entitled to $90 subsistence allowance because of the child was considered in the light of previous opinions and decisions covering the recognition of a child as the dependent of a woman veteran.

Keyboard Caressing Career...

Elliot Lawrence Band to Play At Memorial Hall Tomorrow

By Bookie Jabine

Sending concert audiences is fast becoming a habit to Elliot Lawrence, 22 year-old pianist, who brings his orchestra to the stage of Memorial hall tomorrow evening for a two hour jive session.

ELLIOT LAWRENCE

Beginning his keyboard caressing career at the tender age of six, Lawrence has risen to a commanding position among the new dance bands of the day. Look magazine recently named his outfit as tops among new bands in 1947.

Playing at Penn

Garnering most of his popularity from an impressive list of college dates, the youthful maestro is now a regular feature at the famous Cafe Rouge in New York's Hotel Pennsylvania.

The college crowd apparently went for his smooth, zestful rhythms which he has augmented with many innovations of an almost revolutionary nature. A number of Lawrence's orchestrations have parts for French horn, oboe, flute, English horn, and bassoon, instruments heretofore considered for long hairs only.

Although Lawrence receives 100 per cent billing, it cannot be overlooked that he is bringing with him Jack Hunter and Rosalyn Patton, vocalists who have waxed what swing bugs regard as some of the best discs of the season.

Feature Filia—Trumpeter

Also featured is comparatively unknown trumpeter Alex Filia. His obscurity is attributed chiefly to his youth, but swing circles agree that the young hornster will develop into one of the finer soloists in the business.

With his vocalists and instrumental soloists, Lawrence will bring to the campus a combination of distinctive arrangements to "make for music in the mood that young dancers seem to want."

Reap to Play For UVA Hop

Springtime Dance Set At Clubhouse Tonight

Ned Reap and his Dream Serenaders will play for the University Veterans association semi-formal dance this evening, Hugh Wells, UVA president announced.

Wells added that the dance will be a spring affair and that the clubhouse will be decorated in accordance with the season.

Wednesday night, at the weekly open house to which coeds from Carr dormitory were invited guests, a new musical combination was introduced to the campus, Jim Weathers and His Twilight Six. The group originally was scheduled to play only during a fifteen minute entertainment program. However, it became so popular with veterans and coeds that upon demand, the juke box was silenced so that the Twilight Six could play for the remainder of the evening.

Members of the band are Jim Crawford, Art Soybel, Jerry McDuffy, Skip Etheridge, and Jack Barney.

Officers Meet

Wells also announced last night that a joint meeting of all AUS and organized reserve corps officers of the Army Ground forces will be held Monday evening in Gerrard hall at 8 o'clock in the evening.

He stated that a release from the Public Relations office of the North Carolina district reported that all AUS officers must apply for their reserve commissions prior to June 30 in order to retain their rank.

Social Scientists Holding Meeting

Thirty-five colleges and universities in 13 states have sent representatives to the Working Conference on College training of the Social Sciences being conducted by the University institute for Research in Social Science here today and tomorrow.

Dr. Gordon W. Blackwell, director of the institute, is in charge of the conference which opened at 3 o'clock yesterday in the Alumni building.

States represented, in addition to North Carolina, are Georgia, Alabama, Virginia, Tennessee, Kentucky, Mississippi, Florida, Louisiana, Maryland, New York, South Carolina, and the District of Columbia.

Picnics with Caution

Lovely days and lazy afternoons bring on numerous picnics and parties at this time of year as practically every organization on this campus decides to spend at least one sunny afternoon at one of the many picnic areas in the immediate vicinity.

All of which is well and fine, and a good time is usually had by all at such outings. The months of April and May are always two of the most enjoyable months of the school year.

Yet these good times can turn out to be expensive. An example of what can happen occurred last Sunday when a fire broke out on property owned by Professor G. C. Kyker, P. E. Shearin and R. M. Trimble. A considerable amount of damage resulted.

The fire apparently was caused by a carelessly discarded cigarette or match. A group of picnickers had been using the area over the weekend.

Fire could prove disasterous in this overcrowded community. A carelessly thrown match in Battle Park would cause irreparable damage.

Caution is the one safeguard against fire. We urge every student who will go on a party this quarter to keep that in mind Prevent fires by t aking the extra seconds required to be sure you are not being careless in handling cigarettes or matches. We cannot afford to have any fires on this campus or in the surrounding areas.

In Need of Help

One of the first evidences that Chapel Hill was ceasing to be a very small village—back in 1924—was the fact that stray animals become too numerous to be taken care of officially. As a reslut, a working group of citizens was formed by Mrs. Otto sickness, or injury to animals. Such an organization was formed in 1938.

Since the beginning of the war, due to the great need for relief to human suffering, a group of people who had always contributed towards the work of the organization has been allowed to melt away. Only a few faithful workers have been bearing the expenses of the work.

Sick and uncared for animals are a danger to the community, besides being pitiful in themselves. The officers and working members of the community are asking those old and new students and townspeople with t sense of responsibility to the community and the homeless animals to send or bring contributions to the treasurer, Miss Mabel Mallett in 203 South building.

Know Your Flowers

Many of the students on this campus are unable to fully appreciate its great natural beauty which provides an atmosphere of warmth and freshness on every side. Too many of us only say, "it's very pretty here," and let it go at that. Wisteria, azaleas, jasmine, dogwood—all of these are merely hard-to-pronounce names to many students.

A course in nature appreciation could harm none of us. How much more the beauty of these flowers would mean to us where we are able to say, "look at the golden colored jasmine," or, "how pretty those white dogwood blossoms are."

Further your enjoyment of the campus beauty by furthering your knowledge of nature.

These times demand that we think like great men while we act like common people.

Hospital in Every County

Chapel Hill to Become Center Of Ambitious Health Program

By Harold F. Elkin

Chapel Hill is soon to become the center of development for one of the most ambitious Health and Medical care programs in the South.

The recent approval by the Legislature of funds for the construction of the State's Teaching Hospital and the accompanying expansion of the University's two-year School of Medicine into a standard four-year school marked the first official step in the adoption of the much-publicized "Good Health Plan." This initial phase of the plan will require approximately $5 million of a total of $48 million over a five-year period.

The balance of the proposed expenditure $43 million, is to finance the sorely needed goal of the North Carolina Medical Care Commission — the aim to provide a "Hospital or Health Center in every County." One of the major needs will be sufficient trained personnel to staff these new Hospitals and Health Centers. Doctors, nurses and technicians will be required in great quantity. The only way to achieve this objective is to train them; and Carolina's expanded four-year Medical School will provide a constant flow of physicians to man these centers.

But the University of North Carolina's functions will not cease with the training of doctors alone. Another School of the University—the School of Public Health—is also being further geared to meet the new challenge of providing personnel to support the Health achievements of the Medical Care Plan. The School of Public Health, since its inception in 1935, has developed under the leadership of the late Dr. Milton J. Rosenau, distinguished pioneer in preventive medicine, into one of the outstanding institutions of its kind in this country.

North Carolina's problem of public health personnel is growing increasingly urgent. State and Local Health Departments continue to remain in great need of trained workers, and efforts to recruit men and women to fill these vacancies have failed. It is the expressed opinion of Dr. Herman G. Baity, Acting Dean of the School of Public Health, that the expansion of Carolina's Medical School will "result in an appreciable increase in the output of Public Health personnel." Easing of this problem by the training of more Public Health Doctors will be perhaps the most valuable and visible benefit of the Four-Year Medical School." The School of Public Health stands prepared to supplement the medical studies of these men with the necessary training to equip them to perform much-needed Public Health functions.

Both Dr. Carl V. Reynolds, the State Health Officer, and Dr. Baity have paid tribute to the present two-year Medical School for its aid in the phenomenal development of the School of Public Health. But, as Dr. Baity points out, "we can make even greater advance with cooperation from the Four-Year School. We know," continues Dr. Baity, "that the expanded Medical School will open new horizons for Public Health as well." Of the existing ten accredited Schools of Public Health in North America, all but the School in Chapel Hill are associated with a Four-Year School of Medicine. Now that our School of Public Health is to have the association of a standard Medical School, increased benefits which the School might expect to receive include cooperative use of clinical facilities of the new Teaching Hospital, joint study of communicable diseases, cooperative handling of the Medical Statistical Service, etc.

Further, the students in the expanded Medical School will benefit by their association with the Public Health School. Cooperation between students of both Schools can include combined study of clinical material, and the above-mentioned joint operation of the Medical Record System and the Statistical Service. Since there is much in common between the physician and the public health doctor, such cooperation in studies will mean greater and more productive coordination in later work.

Thus, we see that the school of public health and the medical school will mutually gain in the coming expansion. As Dr. Reynolds has predicted, "adoption of the Good Health plan will pave the way for closer cooperation between the private practice of medicine and public health work."

'Imperfect Lady' Aptly Titled; Is Termed 'Shouldn't B' Picture

By Jud Kinberg

It's a good thing that they had plenty of Hershey bars in the local movie emporium yesterday. . Without them, none of us should have made it to the end of "Imperfect Lady." As it is, we dropped three men at the end of the third reel and had two wounded in the fifth.

About half way through the thing, the survivors tried to leave, but two burly ushers blocked the way. "Get back down in those seats, pals. We have to stand through this thing four times a day and we'll be darned if anyone is getting away scot free."

So back we trooped, corn to the right of us, corn to the left of us. The flicker was really a sleeper—some ten or twenty aisle occupants near me were all snoring contentedly by the second reel. It looks very much like Paramount had a scene or two left over from the "Perils of Pauline."

I didn't realize it at the time, but I'd already seen the best part of the picture when the screen credits were finished. Unfortunately, no one warned me and so I remained for the actual picture. Some joker with a cockney accent was making a Johnson-office-approved pass at Teresa Wright in the first scene. The cold shoulder she gave him put the "blighter off his feed" (authentic Hollywood cockney talk) and he never showed up for the rest of the flicker. Which should qualify the actor for "Walk-on of the Year."

With the amazing agility known only to denizens of Hollywood, we next dog-trotted to the house of Teresa's old pa—the one who doesn't want her to go on the stage, naturally. Just to keep the audience from getting bored, the pa was given a Scotch accent and a bolt of Scotch woolen to make the thing authentic.

It was here that I thought I'd run into the beginning of a dog picture. The bolt-packing pappy kept mumbling in his Scotch gruel, "Ye canno come home Lassie until ye get through the stage." Hell, I thought he was telling Lassie he couldn't come indoors until he was house broken. Until someone explained the real meaning, that was the high point of the picture for me.

Right about here it was time for the male lead to arrive on the scene. Since we was stuck someplace out in right field, they took the scene to him. Lo and behold, it was Ray Milland—sober and not half as interesting as in his slightly-crocked state. I kept looking for a bottle for three scenes before I finally gave up hope.

From then on in, the picture got drier and deader. Ray chased Teresa, Teresa hid in odd (including one man's lodgings) places from Ray. Somewhere in the middle, they managed to squeeze in a song-and-dance number, a big social brawl and a cop without a heart.

Those squirming around me during all these goings on would have been willing to trade it all for just one liquor bottle hidden in a chandelier. But as close as we came to wetting our whistle was some aenemic-looking 3.2—with Teresa following the Johnson office by swilling only lemonade and belly-bursting amounts of tea. Everytime there was nothing left to do for about 15 or 20 minutes, Teresa popped out with the tea things, one lump or two.

That is a hasty run-down on the film. Put it on your All-Time Forget-It Parade. In fact, don't fail to MISS it. As one of our colleagues observed, it's a B-film: a Shouldn't-Be film.

Moral: It ain't easy to make them that bad.

What Do YOU Say?

By Harry Snowden

Today's Question

What advice would you give to incoming freshmen?

Answers

My opinion is—first—someone, who understands it, should write a summary of each article of the student constitution and submit it to the Daily Tar Heel. One article each day for eight days. That would clarify some things for the general students as well as for the freshmen. Secondly—An interesting student lecturer should brief freshmen (say in Memorial hall) on the honor system, and student government here at Chapel Hill.—Gilbert Burnett, Burgaw.

Freshmen should take part in the many activities offered and gain a thorough understanding of the Campus and Honor codes.—Jim Kelly, Elizabethtown.

They should find out as much as possible about the university and its activities, so that they can decide which things they want to spend their time on. They should learn about the Honor system and the way Student Government works.—Margaret Whitney, Plant City, Fla.

An attempt should be made to look for and enter into the activities which appeal to the individual the most, so as to get as much as possible out of the college years ahead.—John Armand, Wilmington.

Become active in some social organization, and yet get interested in a campus political organization. Remember that one gets out of his college life only that which he puts into it.—Guy Kirkman, Charlotte.

Take advantage of every opportunity offered you. Work and play equally hard, and if you are ever discouraged take a stroll through the arboretum, and don't go alone. It works wonders in your intellectual advancement.—Joseph A. Ficarra, New York, N. Y.

Next Question

What do you think of Henry Wallace's recent speeches to foreign nations and the resulting effects in this country?

Letters To The Editor

All letters must be typewritten, double-spaced, under 300 words in length, and signed by the writer. Writer's name will be withheld on request, but letters must be signed. The Daily Tar Heel reserves the right to present the letters as it wishes and to delete all matter it considers libelous.

Is He Kidding?

Dear Sir:

I start this letter with many misgivings for the simple reason that I was ruled ineligible for the draft due to a physical handicraft; however, with circumstances being what they are, I feel it necessary that certain changes be effected on this campus. As the general concensus of opinion seems to indicate that we are doomed for a war in the not too distant future, delay would only mean chaos when the time for another conscription comes.

As most of us are well aware, there are countless ex-servicemen registered as students in the university. It has been the prevailing policy to allow ex-officers and ex-enlisted men unlimited fraternization with each other and their mutual associates, it has at times even been encouraged. This may have been due in part to an all-out effort for democratic relationship among classmates, but with impending crisis hanging over our heads the old non-caste system must go.

First and of the highest order of urgency is that there be an absolute and distinct segregation of former officers and enlisted personnel. This segregation should be so complete that if necessary, Swain Hall or some other building be designated as an officer's mess.

Secondly the officers should receive a substantial increase in their subsistence allowances exceeding that of the enlisted men by a goodly amount This would serve the important function of establishing a well defined gap in the social set-up.

Last, but also of prime importance, is the menial responsibility that every enlisted man should be made to feel. The officers will, of course, be instructed in the performance of a sort of dual role as student overseers. By this I mean that the enlisted men should be used in the same capacity and with the same toleration that is now being employed by fraternities in regard to pledges. Hazing and the like will be discouraged from going to the extremes but at the same time the enlisted men must be well disciplined and at all times show the proper respect for their superiors. (That is of course on a peace time basis.)

If these improvements can be brought about, the potential armed strength of the U.N.C. campus would be greatly enhanced by virtue of the fact that we will be able to muster some five thousand veterans at a moments notice. Carolina must always remain first and foremost in the universities in this country so let's not get caught with our pants down on this score.

Respectfully submitted,
ERIC L. TILLEY, JR.

Chapel Hill to Get Telephone Extension

The Chapel Hill Telephone company, which is owned by the University, is planning an extension on its central office. This will be completed sometime in December, after which 175 new telephone lines will be installed.

The expansion planned will not fully meet the demand for telephones but give the problem considerable relief. As extensions are made and more equipment is available, more lines will be installed.

Netters Play Virginia Today; Six Teams In AAU Event Here

Kenfieldmen Seek 14th Win in Row

(Special to Daily Tar Heel)

Charlottesville, Va., April 25—Carolina's undefeated tennis team will open its northern tour here tomorrow afternoon when the Tar Heel netters take the courts against the potent cavaliers of Virginia.

Coach John Kenfield's charges will be seeking their 14th straight win of the season and it is expected that the genial Carolina mentor will count on the same winning combination he has been using most of the season to bring home the bacon against the Virginians.

This will find Vic Seixas, Clark Taylor, Charlie Rice, Stan Gruner, Ray Morris, and Jim Nicholson playing the singles in that order, with Kenfield-Skakle, Seixas-Taylor, and Rice-Nicholson receiving the probable starting doubles assignments.

TUESDAY

Meet Will Begin At 10:30 Today

Starting this morning at 10:30 o'clock at Fetzer Field, six teams will vie for honors in the annual Carolina AAU track and field meet.

Entries have been received in the senior division from State College, Guilford, Davidson, Fort Bragg, Duke and Carolina. Several high and prep schools are entered in the junior division.

The team title favorite seems to be State, which has its team at full strength while Carolina and Duke both have key men competing in the Penn Relays at Philadelphia.

Close races are expected in the 100-yard dash, 440-yard run and all the field events. Carolina's chief hope of taking the title lies in its ability to score heavily in the distance events and the pole vault. Jimmy Miller, Alvin Smith, Sam Magill, Julian Mackenzie and Mark Burnham will carry the hopes in the mile and two mile.

Don Nelson, Ted Shultz, Ted Haigler, Walt Francis, Halstead Holden, Larry Klosterman, Norm McLeod, Billy Joyner, Tom Turner and Laddie Terrell are also counted on to bring in points for the Tar Heel cause.

Philadelphia, April 25— Chunk Simmons took first place in his heat of the 120-yard high hurdles and then finished third in the finals in the Penn Relay carnival run here today.

Jack Milne took a second place in the two-mile run while Bob Seligman was fourth in the discus throw.

Tomorrow Carolina will have a 480-yard shuttle hurdle relay team in competition plus Jack Moody in the high jump.

Navy 001 001 000— 2
Carolina 205 003 00x—10

Summary: Runs batted in: Beason, Brendle, Gregory 2, Kelly 2, Hardee, Whiteheart, Frahler, Johnson. Two-base hits: Armstrong. Three-base hits: Gregory, Whiteheart. Home runs: Frahler. Base on balls—off: Whiteheart 3, Rensberger 3, Beyslinger 3.

In fashioning his fourth victory of the season, Whiteheart whiffed eight Middies and also contributed a long triple to the winning cause. Beason collected four straight singles, three of which were turned into runs.

While Whiteheart was holding the Middies in check, Carolina proceeded to comb two Navy hurlers for 13 assorted hits. The Tar Heels clinched the tussle with a big third inning, during which nine batters took their turn at the plate and five eventually scored. In addition to Whiteheart's blow which put the finishing touches on the splurge, John Gregory also swatted a three-bagger and then departed for Greensboro to be married.

Two in First Frame

The Tar Heels wasted no time in marking up tallies in the run column. With one out in the bottom of the first, Bo Hackney clipped a sharp single to third and reached second when third-sacker Pete Boney heaved the ball into right field. Beason's bingle drove Hackney across and the Carolina outfielder tallied the second run moments later when the Navy first-baseman, Bill Brendle, bobbled Gregory's bounder along the first-base line.

Navy broke the ice on both hits and runs at approximately the same time. With two away in the top of the third, Eddy Armstrong lined a double into center field for his team's first safety and then scored on Brendle's single to right. The Middies' only other hit came in the sixth when Captain Andy Frahler walloped a homer into right-center field. That was the last time Navy had a runner on the basepaths.

Leading by only one run as they came to bat in the third stanza, the Tar Heels knocked the Navy starter, Lee Rensberger, from the mound and then greeted his successor, Jim Beysinger, in the same fashion.

Consecutive singles by Beason, Jack Hussey and Jim Kelly sent Rensberger to the sidelines and Gregory, the first batter to face the new pitcher, cleared the sacks with his triple. After Buster Stevenson went down on strikes for the first out, Buck Hardee singled to score Gregory and then Whiteheart came through with his three-base blow along the left-field line.

Carolina added three more in the sixth on three one-base knocks, a free pass, and an infield out.

DIAMOND DUST: Dub Johnson took over at first base after the departure of Gregory and turned in an outstanding performance. . .Hackney and Kelly both garnered a pair of hits. . .Next game on the Tar Heel slate is a home affair Tuesday against Wake Forest.

Hamilton Hits Cartels In Last Weil Lecture

"A cartel of cartels may assure a world at peace, but it is a terrific price to pay for peace," Prof. Walton Hamilton of the Yale University Law school, said last evening in his final address in the series of Weil Lectures on American Citizenship at the University.

"Cartel ties are not based upon efficiency, but upon monopoly and iron-clad controls," he explained. "They should be broken before it is too late to break them. A business system adjusted to efficiency not only promises the maximum of goods, but also the conditions of society in which democracy can thrive. We need a return of politics to the government," he declared. "In no other way can freedom be preserved and the great tradition live on."

American business has been concerned with guarding the domestic market against foreign invasion, he said. "The result has been agreements or contracts to divide the world. The most common pattern is for the American corporation to take the United States, its possessions and Canada; for the English company to get the United Kingdom and the rest of the Empire; and for Germany to take the rest of the world," he said.

There is a danger to nationalistic values "lurking in the whole scheme," he declared. "The military potential of a country may well be weakened, as ours was weakened by Germany before the last war."

The problem of "where we go from here," he said, "is for the younger generation. They must live in the world that is emerging. They ought to be allowed to shape it."

Representative Plans To Request Papers

Washington, April 25—(UP)—Republican Representative Hoffman of Michigan plans to ask President Truman to give Congress secret papers which allegedly tell of Army desires to turn the Marine Corps into a dress parade outfit.

NEWS BRIEFS

Marshall Rests For Broadcast Monday Night

Does Not Consider Conference Failure

Washington, April 26—(UP)—Secretary of State George Marshall tonight is taking a brief breathing spell from the rigors of the Moscow conference.

Marshall has arrived in Pinehurst, where he will take a one-day rest with his wife in their picturesque country cottage.

The former army chief of staff returned to the nation's capital from Moscow today and was greeted by President Truman and a large crowd. Shortly afterward, he hopped a plane for Pinehurst.

However, Marshall will return to Washington late tomorrow for an evening conference at the White House. There, he will give the president and ranking Republican and Democratic congressmen a first-hand account of the Big Four conference.

On Monday evening, at 8:30 (EST) the secretary will deliver a 30 minute radio report to the nation. Marshall is expected to tell the American people the fundamental differences between the Soviet Union and the western powers that led to a deadlock over the Austrian and German peace treaties. However, Marshall does not consider the Moscow meeting a failure. And his reports are not expected to be gloomy.

Patrol Keeps Watching For Hospital Firebug

Durham, April 26—(UP)—Nurses at the Duke hospital in Durham are wondering what will happen next. A heavy fire patrol is keeping watch over the hospital to nab a firebug who started eight blazes in the building in three nights. Besides, one nurse was shot as she sat in the nearby Duke gardens with her escort. And last night, another nurse was slugged by a man believed to be the pyromaniac who started the fires.

Beirne Sees Agreement Over Telephone Strike

Washington, April 26—(UP)—Labor Secretary Schwellenbach again has called telephone company and union officials to meet with him personally in a new effort to settle the three-week phone strike. Phone union president Joseph Beirne said after the conference, "I am hopeful that between now and Monday we might get an agreement."

German Club Concert Tonight To Feature Elliot Lawrence

Under the auspices of the German club, Elliot Lawrence and his orchestra will play a two hour concert in Memorial hall this evening at 7:30. The young maestro played at Duke on Friday and Saturday, and the German club signed him to appear here tonight. Admission to the concert is by card only, and German Club President Carroll Tomlinson, warned that officers of the organizations will be posted at all doors to check patrons for cups and bottles.

"In the past," said Tomlinson, "there has been too much drinking at concerts."

Play Mostly College

Lawrence's band has leaped from near obscurity to the top new band of 1946 according to a Look magazine survey. Playing mostly college dates the outfit built up a following that resulted in his becoming a popular feature at the Cafe Rouge in New York.

Scheduled to appear with the band are vocalists Jack Hunter and Rosalyn Patton who have been heard regularly with Lawrence on Columbia records. Alex Filia, young trumpeter, is also featured.

Lawrence's music is said to be "what young dancers seem to want." He has embodied into his arrangements parts for French horn, oboe, flute, English horn, and bassoon, instruments formerly reserved for symphony groups.

Reservists Will Hear Talk by Col. McNeill

Colonel R. L. McNeill, senior instructor for North Carolina ORC, will address all reserve and AUS officers attending a meeting in Gerrard hall tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock.

The session will be informative and of particular interest to AUS officers who have not converted their commissions to ORC. Such commissions automatically will expire July 1 unless transfer steps are taken before then.

Further topics will include legislation concerning reorganization of active ORC units with pay comparable with that of the National Guard, and provisions for retirement of civilian components of the armed services after stated lengths of service.

No collection of dues will be made at the meeting, nor will anyone be requested to join any organization.

CPU Will Discuss Freedom of Press

The problem of the freedom of the nation's press will be continued at the Carolina Political union's Sunday evening roundtable at 8 o'clock in the Grail room this evening. The problem, which was brought up for discussion two weeks ago aroused such lively interest that it was decided to give it another hearing this evening. As usual, visitors are encouraged to come and to participate in the discussion along with the members of the CPU.

The literary world has already begun to plan for the bicentennial of the birth of Johann Wolfgang von Goethe, to be celebrated in 1949, and Tuesday's lecture takes this anniversary into account and can be regarded as preparatory to the coming events as well as an exposition of the timeless qualities of Goethe's masterpiece.

He is the author of several books in the field of German languages and literature and is a noted collector and authority in proverb lore. His important study in the latter field, Proverbia Communia, A Fifteenth Century Collection of Dutch Proverbs, is now in press and soon to be published.

The forthcoming lecture concludes the third year of Humanities Lectures on the campus. CARLYLE SHEPARD

Shepard Endorsed By Local Chapter For Legion Post

Carlyle Shepard, veteran of World Wars I and II, and at present veteran adviser in the University has just been unanimously endorsed by the Chapel Hill Post of the American Legion for department commander, subject to the next convention in June.

All North Carolina Legionaires on campus are requested to meet with Bill Smith at the Legion hut at 7:30 Tuesday evening.

Shepard is a native of Wilmington and was graduated from the University where he received the A.B., M.A. and Ph.D. degrees. While a student he was elected to the honorary scholarship society, Phi Beta Kappa, and was active in athletics. He was elected captain of the basketball team in 1917, before entering World War I, and served as captain of the 1921 team, receiving recognition on All-State and All-Southern selections.

He enlisted in April, 1917, immediately after the outbreak of World War I, attended an officers training camp from which he was commissioned a 2nd Lieutenant of field artillery. He served with Battery E, 317th Field Artillery of the 81st Division. While overseas he was assigned to the 14th Balloon company as an air observer in the artillery. After serving in France for nine months he returned to the states and was discharged in May 1919.

Shepard joined the National Guard in 1927 as a member of the 113th Field Artillery. He had attained the rank of Major, Field Artillery, when ordered into active service in 1940. In 1942 he was promoted to lieutenant colonel and was assigned to the 30th Infantry Division Artillery with which he served in Europe.

List of New Men Remains Secret

By Barron Mills

The Golden Fleece, highest men's honorory organization on campus, will conduct their annual tapping ceremonies of new members next Sunday evening, in Memorial hall at 7:45. In keeping with the secret nature of the organization, the number and names of the men to be tapped will remain secret until the ceremonies.

A spokesman for the group stated that because of the impressiveness and solemnity of the service the doors will be locked directly at 7:45 and all who attend the services should be in their seats by that time. The annual Valkyrie Sing will be held following the tapping.

Only Public Meeting

Presentation of the tapping of new members into the honorory order marks the only public meeting of the group held each year. It has been their practice since their formation on campus forty-four years ago to conduct their meetings and activities in secrecy and also to withnold the names of their officers from the public. The officers who have served during the past year will be disclosed at the ceremonies.

The Fleece does not undertake to sponsor any action as an organization, but their members work as individuals toward a common aim. All tasks that Fleece members instigate are performed without public announcement.

No Specified Number

Members of the Fleece are chosen for their intellectual and moral character, relentless fidelity to ideals, scholarship, and dilligence. The order does not set a specified number for membership each year, but selects each member according to the number of men on campus who they believe merit membership. Last year nine men gained admission into the order.

UP Planks, Splinters

(This in the last in a series of analyzations of the various platforms of campus parties. Today the University party platform goes under the microscope.)

Genial Ed Lanier, the Central Records director and hard-working friend of every student, Friday learned that the wolves are still howling over the Lanier lottery. For the University party platform planked out with a demand for an improved registration system.

Four factors are involved in the politico's demand. One of these is already incorporated in the present system, i.e., the giving of special consideration to graduating seniors and hardship cases. A second, the preferred choice of teachers and hours on registration forms, is a measure already to be half endorsed in the new system. The choice of hours will be permitted.

The third, appointment slips, is under consideration. All three points are good. But the establishment of a priority in order of acceptance slips seems to be an undemocratic reversal of American concepts.

An excellent piece of mahogany in the platofrm is the advocation of all-out support of the new humor magazine. This also has been advocated in the Daily Tar Heel column, I'd Rather Be Right.

Other good points include the conversion of the Emerson field boxing pavilion into recreation rooms for men's dormitories, the revival of inter-dormitory dances, improved janitorial service, and improved seating at football games.

However, the improved janitorial service, like the installation of telephones in the quonset huts, is a direct bit of propaganda to gain votes. For everyone who has taken the trouble to investigate the situation, is well aware that the University is extending itself in an effort to effect these improvements as rapidly as possible. But the University party isn't the only one to use this vote getting plank. Voters should use it as a paddle, nonetheless.

As for the improved seating at football games, the Daily Tar Heel heartily endorses this, has advocated it for sometime. Still we need a statement of what improvements, not just a request for the change for the better.

Plank number seven in the eleven wants to instigate vigorous support of a movement to obtain appropriations from the state legislature for a student union building which will include small ballrooms, post offices, and a soda fountain. This would constitute a major improvement in the University. But until the materials shortage ends, it must remain on the future agenda with the establishment of a University printshop. Maybe in ten years, one or both may become possible.

Planks three and four seem to be closely correlated, may be considered as one.

There is a definite need for a town association composed of town, trailer camp, and Victory Village students to have an organized voice in campus affairs, to conduct social activities, and to have a social center.

One part of this is political, i.e., the establishment of an organization to have a voice in student affairs. It is commendable that the University party desires this organization. It is equally commendable that it desires social life for these students.

However, both factors would seem to be the affair of the students involved. Help should be tendered them if they desire it. But there should be no move to force these planks upon them.

The sole remaining plank in the platform is the demand for a Daily Tar Heel dedicated to more coverage of campus news, a most wonderful and wondrous piece of timber.

Editors of the DTH have fought long, loud, and hard for a larger paper. In a recent column, Desk Editor Barron Mills cited the increased enrollment, the advances made by the University of Texas Daily Texan corresponding with its increased enrollment and the inability of the DTH to grow due to shortage of funds.

Newspapers cost money, lots of it. When its funds are limited, its excellence is limited in a direct ratio.

So while the DTH can thank the University party for advocating more coverage of the news, it can only do so with a mental reservation as it trusts the party means it will support demands for a larger paper to provide this increased coverage.

Mathematically, it is impossible to put more news in the paper when the space remains constant. Even Houdini would find it beyond his magical feats were he still alive.

And this completes the University party platform. It is a fairly good one, has some excellent points, has some bad ones, has some that must be relegated into the agenda of the future.

All of this should be expected from such a number of planks. And it has some planks to be used only to get votes. But, after all, a political party is dedicated to such a campaign.

Generally we may agree that the University party, like the Campus and Student parties have good platforms. But it is a sad commentary to note that no major issues seem to exist on campus. If there are, the parties have ignored them. Hence, the election, like all others, will be settled on personalities, not issues. And campus politics fails to stride forward. The issue? No issue!—

russia also wants sane, just peace

By Manny Margolis

The seven-week conference in Moscow has ended. What Secretary Marshall has aptly termed the "first round" is over. There was much collective bergaining, but the participants were unfortunately unable to negotiate a "contract."

Mr. Marshall has laid the entire blame for the recent "agreement to disagree" at the doorstep of the Kremlin. Perhaps a more objective observation, however, is to be found in C. L. Sulzberger's recent report from Moscow attributing the impasse to "the basic facts of a complex world and not because any single nation is trying to prevent the making of peace."

In the April 13th issue of the New York Times, Mr. Sulzberger makes the following sober and refreshing analysis:

"Many Americans ask each other 'Does Soviet Russia really wish to make peace at this time?'. The answer is emphatically yes. The U.S.S.R. is every bit as anxious as the United States to obtain such a peace, and the sooner the better. This coutnry (i.e., the U.S.S.R.) suffered untold damages during the war. The average American simply hasn't any visual idea of what losses in blood, energy, industry, and investment were here."

All of which might give some insight into the recent Molotovian immobility on the issue of German reparations. It is no longer a question of a "hard" or a "soft" peace. It is a question of a safe and a just one. This is the question which has loomed so large particularly for the French and Soviet delegates at Moscow—men whose nations suffered incalculably from the rebirth of German militarism and Fascism.

Moreover, the conference itself has been by no means a failure. The positions of both the Soviet Union and the U. S. have been brought into the public focus of the entire world.

The United States insists upon economic unification, a decentralized democratic government, and a Big-Four 40-year pact for German demilitarization. The Soviet Union, on the other hand, stands firm for German reparations, support of the Potsdam Agreement on Germany's eastern frontier, and a centralized democratic German government.

These views are divergent. But they are far from irreconcilable. Competent observers were quick to admit months ago that a German peace treaty could not possibly be thought of this year.

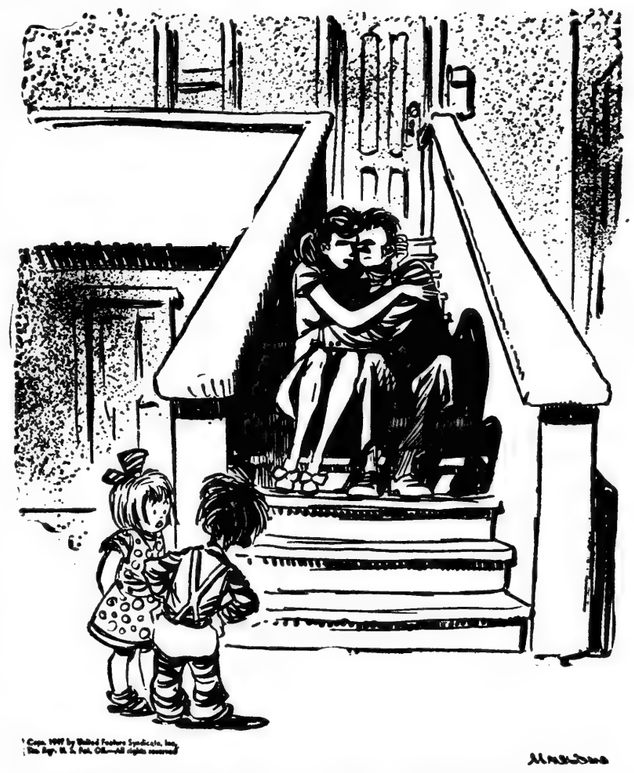
Another factor which the hasty headline-hunter might quickly lose sight of was made painfully clear in AP correspondent Wes Gallagher's report from Berlin on October 28, 1946:

"Many Germans, naturally, are out to save all they can from the wreckage of their country. When the war ended, they recognized as inevitable the loss of their industries. Now in the split between the East and the West they see a hope of salvaging something."

Perhaps "World Report" might keep such a report in mind when they present a headline over a map of Silesia, as they did this week, which reads as follows: Power for Poland or Food for Germany? (Or has Herbert Hoover been hired as their new "rewrite man"?)

In the days of the Weimar Republic, they used to tell the story of a German worker employed in a baby-carriage factory. It seems that his wife gave birth to a child and he asked the management for a carriage, which he promptly received, but in parts which he had to assemble by himself. The next day, the worker appeared before the manager and slightly embarrassed said, "Sir, no matter how I put it together, it always comes out as a machine-gun."

Humanity cannot afford to sacrifice peace once more on the altar of a resurrected German will to power!



Chapel Hill Students Have New High School

The students of the Chapel Hill high school moved to a new location last week and a new school in the first block of West Franklin street.

The new building of 13 classrooms is about one-third the projected plan and with further expansion there will be space for the school cafeteria.

The present members of the 1947 graduating class have spent most of their high school careers in all sorts of makeshift places, including the basement of the First Baptist church.

The Third Part....

Facts Show Fraternities Kings of Campus Politics

By Jimmy Wallace

The commendable effects which fraternities have upon the campus cannot be overlooked any longer. It appears that belonging to a fraternity is synonymous with hobnobbing with leadership. Many people will think that this is a crazy assertion, but the record will substantiate it.

Before one looks at the record proper, however, it is necessary to consider some campus statistics. There are currently 7000 students enrolled. Of these, a very distinct minority (less than 20 per cent) belong to fraternities and sororities. According to traditional democracy, one would think at first blush that this would mean that fraternities and sororities would get only a proportional share of the high offices on the campus. But that is where everybody is wrong.

Consider these facts:

1. John Robinson, Charlie Benbow, Charlie Vance, (all from Winston-Salem), Turk Newsome, Bill McKenzie, Dewey Dorsett. These names include five presidents, one acting president, one who was also speaker of the legislature. For the past five years, fraternity leadership has completely outdone the rest of the campus. All of these men were fraternity men. All ran on the slate of the University Party except Dewey Dorsett, who ran as an independent with University Party backing. The University Party, which is predominantly fraternity and Sorority, continues to serve the campus and give us men who are leaders in the fraternity world. These men get elected. Occasionally, it is true, some men who are in fraternities run on the other side of the fence, but almost without exception they are defeated.

Thus, seven times in a row, the student body in its wisdom has chosen a fraternity man, and a University Party man for president. With the exception of Douglass Hunt, the Speaker of the Legislature last year, the last six speakers of the legislature have been fraternity and University Party men. With the exception of Bob Morrison (who was once an SPE pledge at Davidson) the last seven editors of the Daily Tar Heel have been fraternity men. Six of the last seven editors of the Carolina Mag have been fraternity or sorority members.

2. Not only in the realm of politics has fraternity leadership shown itself. In the Order of the Grail, founded by Horace Williams, a philosopher of note who graced Chapel Hill with his presence for many years, one finds that the organization was founded with the idea of its being a service organization, slightly honorary, with its membership equally divided between fraternity and dormitory men. The proportion was to be strictly 50-50. During the war, however, fraternity leadership grew so superior that fully 75-85 per cent of the members of the Grail were fraternity men. One day, in fact, the Grail took in eight members and there was only one dormitory man among them.

3. There are also certain customs among the ruling class. It has been the custom for the University Party to give the Presidency of the Senior Class to the Delta Sigma Pi professional commerce fraternity (not to be confused exactly with social fraternities). In fact the Delta Sigs have had five or six in a row. Each fraternity produces a few leaders, and the University Party in all its wisdom sees to it that the leaders of each fraternity are recognized. Not only does this do a service to the campus, but it also insures the cooperation of all the fraternities, which, having the public interest at heart push their boys to the limit in the swap.

Thus it can be seen as clearly as the nose on one's face, that the University Party will win the election to be held early in May. Big Bill Miller has nothing to worry about. The University Party will take care of him. Of course, there are one or two exceptions to the universal harmony. Johnny Clampitt who has filed on the independent ticket will take his fraternity, ATO, with him, and Miller will have to use his, SAE, to offset that deficit.

As for Tom Eller; he would be better off out of the race, having little fraternity support, and therefore little chance of leadership. At the same time, the Campus Party secedes from the Student Party and thereby cuts the throat of any and all chance of beating the University Party.

There is one thing which the fraternity leadership on the campus will tell you: The University Party loves to see third, and even, fourth parties. Let everyone else split. The fraternities will remain together and will thereby win the election, athough they control less than 20 per cent of the total votes possible.

Carolina will go far with its fraternity leadership. The dormitories have, in the past, and will, in the future, cooperate to the fullest with the leaders of the local government.

Letters To The Editor

Less 'Liberalism'

To the Editor:

To save the trouble of writing two, this letter will be sent to both the Daily Tar Heel and the Durham Morning Herald, one of whose readers is somewhat disturbed about the possibility of us wool hat boys hating somebody. (Familiar old "liberal" smear word, "hatred." Of course, we pick up ideas pretty much as a mule's hide picks up cockleburs, but I do wish people would be more careful where they get them.)

Despite all the flaptrap rantings of the frantic fanatics who think "democracy" requires giving up our political heritage, our racial identity, and whatever else is worth keeping, I shall insist on the privilege of disagreeing. In my more audacious moments, I may even insist on the right to disagree. (Regarding your readers I only urge them to read more carefully.)

As far as Franklin Roosevelt is concerned, I dislike seeing him used as the convenient hitching post on which to hang every lurid scheme that comes along. If, while he was alive, he could not be persuaded to sponsor them, why should they be assigned to him after he is dead?

Speaking of soldiers and ex-soldiers, although I do not like having to bring in personal matters, the soldier I knew best was my own eighteen-year old brother, a pfc. in the Seventy-eighth Division. He was buried in Margraten, after putting up a pretty good fight on behalf of the esteemed D. P.'s and others who are continually slandering the South.

In general, I'm fed up with the tactics of the pseudo-liberals. I'm thoroughly tired of listening to the same old attempts to enlist the ghost of Roosevelt in support of schemes that it probably laughs at, and I hardly think they can claim every "veteran" as their own.

As a student of the scientific method, I have seen enough of the mumbo jumbo jungle magic that the Commies, the miscegenationists, and the rest of the "liberals" call "science."

It seems to me that a little less frantic "liberalism" and a little more reason might help things.

Yours sincerely,
JOHN M. RUTH

With the completion of this meet it is worthy to note that Carolina entrants did exceedingly well in all their specialties.

Fourteen Straight

Tennis Team Opens Trip By Routing Virginia, 8-1

Charlottesville, Va., April 26.—The strong Carolina netmen opened their nine-day jaunt northward by trouncing the University of Virginia, 8-1, in a match played before a capacity crowd here today.

The victory was the 14th straight for the men of John Kenfield and sends them on to West Point for a match Monday with a clean slate.

Vic Seixas turned back his adversary in the number one slot by taking Burroughs, 5-7, 11-9, 6-1. Burroughs had Seixas at match point several times in the second set but Vic kept applying the pressure and finally won the set.

Clark Taylor had an easier time by downing Hollander in straight sets, 6-1, 6-2.

Seixas and Taylor teamed in the doubles for another exciting match which finally saw the Tar Heel duo emerge victorious, 8-6, 4-6, 6-3, over Burroughs and Hollander.

Another close match saw the only Carolina loss, when Charlie Nicholson and Don Skakle dropped a [illegible] match to Rixey and Bain, 6-4, 7-5.

Ray Morris turned in a 6-3, 7-5 win over Wyche in the number five singles match.

Other Results

Gruner (NC) defeated Rixey, 9-7, 8-6. Rice (C) defeated VanMonde, 2-6, 6-3, 6-3. Nicholson (C) defeated Valentine, 6-1, 6-1. Kenfield and Rice (C) defeated Wyche and Valentine, 6-4, 6-1.

Golfers Face NCS At Home Tomorrow

Carolina's undefeated golfers will be seeking their sixth win of the season tomorrow afternoon when they tee off against the Wolfpack of State College at Hope Valley country club. The starting time is set for 1:30.

Coach Chuck Erickson will probably use the same combination that stopped highly-touted LSU in Georgia last week. This will see Harvey Ward in the No. 1 slot, Junie Bailey at No. 2, Dick Doeschler at the No. 3 position, Ray Taylor at No. 4, Mike Nolan at No. 5, and Bob Cox, yesterday's football hero, holding down the No. 6 berth.

The match will be the Tar Heels' [illegible] as the local linksmen have been spending their time of late competing in the South intercollegiate and North-South amateur tourneys.

Coach Erickson announced yesterday that all interested fans may follow the linksmen around the 6,700 yard layout if they wish to, and a large gallery is expected to turnout.

Potent Play of Both Lines Keeps Scoring at Minimum

Crowd of 7,000 Witnesses Rough Clash; Kennedy, Fitch Pace Teams Offensives

By Morty Schaap

The magic toe of Bob Cox spelled the difference between a win and a tie for the White team yesterday afternoon and "ole true-toe" Cox split the uprights for an extra point to give the Whites a 7-6 victory over the Blue team in the second annual Monogram sponsored affair before 7,000 football fans in Kenan stadium.

The Blue team completely dominated the statistics by racking up 12 first downs to their opponents' 3. They accumulated 112 yards rushing to the White team's 55.

The White team sparked by Bob Kennedy and Charlie Justice marched down the field 69 yards to push over the first touchdown early in the third quarter. Kennedy and Justice carried the ball 14 out of 15 attempts and it was Kennedy who plowed over on the second attempt from the one-foot line. Mike Rubish missed the extra point.

After Rubish kicked to the Blues it took only six plays to even the game up. Jack Fitch went around end with excellent blocking to cross the goal line and then Cox, making his only appearance of the day, booted wide of the mark. However the Blues were offside and the second attempt produced the winning point.

After that score neither team could gain enough momentum for a sustained drive and the mammoth lines played each other to a standstill.

Sunshine Galore Spills On 'Battle of Brothers'

The much-heralded "Battle of Brothers" was reeled off in Kenan stadium yesterday afternoon with old man weather beaming brightly down on some 7,000 delighted and sunkissed fans.

Everyone seemed satisfied with the outcome of the contest as the Monogramers put on a show complete in every way with the possible exception that there was no announcement concerning the clock on the scoreboard not being the official time.

Some of the fans were a little confused by the off-season grid display with one such rooter being heard to inquire, "Who was the winning pitcher?"

Along the baseball line, Justice collected two hits during the afternoon, one off of Haywood Fowle in the first and another off of Ken Powell in the fourth.

Best conditioned competitors on the field were the canine clansmen who romped on and off the gridiron with midseason form. It wouldn't have been a ball game without them.

At halftime of yesterday's football classic Charlie Tietjen and Jim Camp made the presentation of the first annual Monogram Club coaches trophies.

The assistant coach or jayvee mentor award went to popular Jim Gill of the football team.

The varsity award was presented in absentia to tennis coach John F. Kenfield. The cup award was accepted for him by his daughter-in-law.

Cancelling Hell Week Wins Thank-You Party For Chi Phi Fraternity

To show their appreciation for not having to go through hell week recently, members of the pledge class of the Chi Phi fraternity presented their brothers with a humorous skit and several kegs of refreshments on Wednesday evening.

Although the Playmakers and the Laboratory Theater enjoy the reputation for professional dramatic offerings, the pledge class walked away with top acting honors as far as their critics were concerned.

Harold Morris of Fayetteville, president of the pledge class, acted as director of the show, while A. B. Coleman of Wilmington was master of ceremonies.

After a few opening jokes by Coleman, some funny, some corny as you-know what, the stage became a typical rush-week scene. Good-natured satire followed, with frat brothers being butts of all the jokes. Imitations by the pledges brought rousing applause and hearty laughter from all the brothers.

Marshall Tells Futile Story Of Conference

Says Russia to Blame For Meeting's Failure

Washington, April 28. — (UP) — Secretary of State George Marshall has told the American people the story of his 46 futile days at Moscow.

In his sober account of the recent Big Four Foreign Ministers conference, Marshall reiterated his charge that Russia was responsible for the failure of the meeting. Speaking over most major radio networks, Marshall accused Russia of blocking agreement on all major issues in the German and Austrian peace treaties by refusing to compromise on her demands—demands that Marshall said inevitably would lead Germany and all Europe back into dictatorship and strife.

Marshall also revealed for the first time some of the things that Stalin told him during their man-to-man talk just before the conference ended. Marshall says Stalin told him he did not expect any "great success" from the Moscow meeting. Stalin advised the Secretary of State to have patience and not become pessimistic because eventually all the deadlocked problems would be resolved.

With a slight touch of emotion in his voice, Marshall said, "I sincerely hope the Generalissimo is correct."

VA Will Grant Leave Period For Trainees

Forms to Be Ready Within Two Weeks

By Earl Heffner

"The old Army game has taken a twist for the better." Student veterans studying under Public Law 346, the GI Bill of Rights, in some cases are eligible to an ersatz furlough during periods of asence from the academic grind.

In a release yesterday from Veterans Affairs Officer Col. F. C. Shepard, this information was made public with the following announcement coming from the Richmond Branch office of the Veterans administration:

"It has been determined that authorized annual leave may be granted to veteran trainees at the end of the spring term in cases where the veterans have stated an intention to continue in school for the summer quarter, or to return to school at the beginning of the fall quarter.

"It will be necessary for the veterans to request such leave in writing, and veterans should be fully advised that this leave will be charged against their period of eligibility.

"In cases where school records are not available to indicate the amount of leave that the veteran trainee has already taken, the veteran's signed statement as to the amount of leave he has taken may be accepted.

"Accrued leave may not be granted to veterans who have finished their courses or who do not signify an intention to re-enter the same institution with the opening of the summer school term or the next regular session."

Col. Shepard revealed that forms for requesting such leave will be available within the next two weeks at the office of the veterans adviser, 208 South building, or the Veterans administration office, 119 Peabody. Notice will be published when the forms are available.

Requests for leave must contain the veterans C-number, the number of months, and the number of days of leave used during the 12-month period. However, the used leave will not include vacation periods between the fall and winter, and winter and spring quarters, but will include the 15 days granted last fall upon the request of the veteran and the days of absence from school during the regular session. In regard to the latter, the signed statement of the veteran will be the final authority as to how many days he has been absent from class.

Leave is accrued at the rate of two and one-half days a month with a maximum of 30 days allowed for each 12-month period.

Institution of this leave system has come as a direct result of intensive efforts sparked by Col. Shepard and the University Veterans association led by former President Roy C. Moose and the present UVA head, Hugh Wells.

Further information may be obtained from Col. Shepard or through the medium of letters addressed to the Daily Tar Heel editorial department.

EDDIE ALLEN

Special Session Of Legislature Called by Warren

Speaker Charlie Warren has called a special session of the Student legislature for tomorrow evening at 7:30 in Di hall to complete consideration of the elections bill which has been hanging fire for some time.

At last Thursday's session, the assembly passed all sections of the measure except article six which deals with polling places. The bill, as drawn up by Johnny Clampitt's elections committee, provides for voting boxes to be placed in the lower quad, McIver, Gerrard hall, Lenoir hall, and the Carolina inn.

Numerous amendments were offered to this set up last week, but all were turned down since the legislature districts have not yet been reapportioned, and a bill is pending on the re-precincting of the town district.

Until these measures come off the table, lawmakers feel that final action cannot be taken on the elections bill.

In letters sent to the legislators, Warren made a statement urging members "to assume more responsibility and make the legislature an efficient body."

He also urged quick passage of the government record bill which would provide for the publication of an organ "to inform students of the progress of student government."

Journalists Enter Contest As Co-Editors

Columnists of DTH To Run for Office

Campus publications men, Eddie Allen and Jud Kinberg, were announced last night as candidates for co-editors of the newly-created humor magazine. This move by the two well-known Daily Tar Heel-Carolina Magazine writers is the first double-entry for a top post in the coming elections.

Allen, Charlotte Observer sports columnist before coming to the University, and Kinberg, New York Times deskman and former editor of the U. S. Army newspaper for the Berlin area, have both been active on campus publications this year. In releasing their candidacy, the two men gave as their prime objective, "a magazine that will present the top humorous writing on campus. Only by achieving that high standard can we hope to make permanent the publication of a humor magazine here."

Between them, Allen and Kinberg have a record of newspaper-magazine experience in collgiate, professional and armed services ranks. At UNC, Allen has been Associate Editor of the DTH, special writer for the Carolina Magazine and a contributor to its May humor issue.

Kinberg served as managing editor of the DTH before leaving for the Army in 1943. Since returning to school this fall, he has been active as managing editor of the Carolina Magazine and as a regular columnist for the DTH.

Both men have gained a reputation as humor writers through their newspaper columns, Kinberg being best known for his creation of the column-writing character, Dan the Dog. The two writers have also been active in the University News bureau, where Allen served as sports department head last year.

In their joint statement, the candidates said, "If we are to make the infant humor magazine successful in the year to come, we know that it will take the cooperation of just about everyone on campus. Together, we can establish it as the equal of any in the nation."

Study Results From Action By Legislature

Trustees Will Act On Recommendations

By Ed Joyner

As a result of action instituted by the Student Legislature, Robert A. Burch, State Highway commission traffic engineer, will come to Chapel Hill this week to begin a traffic survey preparatory to making recommendations to help solve campus and town traffic problems.

Burch, a graduate of the Yale school of traffic engineering, will study the problems of campus parking areas and make a survey of traffic passing congested points about the campus and town at rush periods. Following his survey, which will last a week or ten days, Burch will make recommendations for improvements to a safety committee which has been appointed by Chancellor Robert B. House.

With the increased University enrollment in the last year and a half a corresponding influx of motor vehicles brought new traffic problems to Chapel Hill. Recognizing these problems, the Student Legislature last fall passed a resolution asking Chancellor House to appoint a traffic safety committee to investigate and make recommendations to meet the situation.

The safety committee set up by House was chairmaned by Walt Brinkley and consisted of Clifford Face of the Institute of Government, Sgt. R. S. Harris of the State Highway patrol, T. W. Bruton of the Attorney General's office, Town Manager T. E. Hinson and Town Attorney C. P. Hinshaw, P. L. Burch and J. A. Williams of the University Business office, and J. B. Linker and J. C. Lyons of the faculty.

During the winter quarter Duke Wilder replaced Brinkley as chairman and Allen Pannill was added to the committee.

One of the first problems that the safety committee came up against was the discovery that neither the Chapel Hill police nor the State Highway patrol or any other agency had authority to enforce traffic regulations on University streets.

To remedy this difficulty, T. W. Bruton of the Attorney General's office drew up a bill which provided that the highway "rules of the road" as set forth in chapter 20 of the North Carolina general statutes be made applicable to the streets of the University. The bill authorized the board of trustees to adopt any further regulations they deemed necessary.

After the proposed bill was considered and approved by the safety committee, the Chapel Hill board of aldermen, and the executive committee of the board of trustees, it was presented to the state legislature by the representatives of Orange, Wake, and Guilford counties and passed on April 5.

Since passage of the bill a subcommittee of the safety committee, composed of Duke Wilder, Clifford Pace, J. B. Linker and J. A. Williams, has been working out traffic and parking regulations to apply to the campus.

Final recommendations of the committee will be submitted to the board of trustees meeting in June and will go into effect during the summer sessions.

ITS ORIGIN a debating society established in 1795, the Phi assembly is now in its 150th year on the Carolina campus. With its brother society, the Di senate, the Phi is credited with enlarging the University library, originating the Carolina white and blue colors, and of publishing the forerunner of the present Carolina Magazine.

Vandalistic Violation

Campaign literature of the various candidates has already begun its appearance on the bulletin boards, but the candidates themselves have begun the cry that their literature is being trampled under foot almost before the thumb tacks are inserted.

The tearing down of campaign literature is a violation of the campus code. The printed matter is the property of the individual candidates since it is paid for out of their campaign expenditures. Therefore, a student caught in the act of destroying campaign literature may be tried by the Honor council for violation of the campus code.

Even though this petty vandalism were not a direct violation of the campus code, a student would be doing a great injustice to the campus and the candidates themselves by tearing down the one means that an office aspirant has of contacting the student body and presenting his qualifications, viewpoints and platform.

Since the beginning of student government the University has prided itself that it has held democratic elections and each student has been given the opportunity of exercising the right of deciding for himself the campus leaders. If all candidates are not put on equal footing with each other in presenting their campaign literature then the principles of a democratic method of selecting our campus leadership will have been abolished.

Annual Problem

With the coming of elections fever the Daily Tar Heel annually finds itself out on a limb somewhere between the proverbial devil and the deep blue sea. The deep blue C in this instance stands for Carolina's campus politicians.

We are sure to be deluged by campaign letters, stories on and about various candidates and every type of publicity angle that can be used. Trying to weave impartially through such a mass of propaganda is a tough and trying job. It is a task we do not particularly relish. Yet it is one we shall do our best to handle to the best of our ability.

Next Tuesday is election day. Next Tuesday we are offering the greater part of our editorial page to the candidates for president of the student body, editor of the Daily Tar Heel, and vice-president of the student body to print their platforms and we ask that they make them as brief and concise as possible.

These are but three offices, but since they are the three biggest offices from standpoint of prestige and work, we will allow them the use of editorial space so that the student body will get a chance to see what their candidates stand for prior to the election.

Letters to the editor will be used as space permits. We will do our best to print all acceptable letters in support of candidates, but ask that students refrain from writing merely because "so-and-so is my best buddy." Those letters with something to say will be given first choice, and the printing of one or all must be left to the discretion of the editor.

We will do our best to give every candidate an even break and to keep every student accurately-informed and acutely-aware of what is being done politically on this campus.

To one and all, we honestly urge a large turnout next Tuesday when the all-important day arrives. All-important, because you, as students, will be passing judgment on the men you want to handle your money and run your government for the coming year. It is not a decision to be made hastily or wildly. Consider your candidates. Vote for the best men.

You can only die for your country once, but you can live for it daily.

Unselfishness will work when we work unselfishly.

Tempers Bound to Explode In Pre-Election Outbursts

By Earl Heffner

Without a doubt the most explosive element in the modern world is that ageless nemesis, Temper, the father of Mars who gains in strength with each atomizing outburst. And the onery gentleman bids fair to dominate the campus during the next weeks as the political wolves howl while the voters writhe in the throes of electioneering.

Politicos and their supports will zealously ply their arguments as though the very fate of the nation hangs in the balance. As a result it is going to require a Spartan courage from those close to and distant from the broiling pot.

It is to be hoped that the mud doesn't fly; if it does, let us pray that the cooling substance will temper the tempest, that when it's all over the fundamental Carolina issue again will be Beat Dook.

* * *

On page one of today's issue, there is a story dealing with the newly announced "furloughs" which will be available for veterans training under the GI Bill of Rights, Public Law 346.

This benefit allowed by the Veterans administration can be a boon when understood. However, the foolhardy man who rushes in where devils fear to tread can find that utilizing this leave may result in his losing some valuable and needed time under the GI Bill.

For time taken as leave will be sliced off the total period of eligibility for each veteran. Briefly, this means that if a student trainee has four years of eligibility and can and will finish within three years, he may accept the leave available during the last 12 months. This would take only one month off his total eligibility, would leave him with 11 months more than he intends to use.

On the other hand, should a trainee have too little time in which to complete his training, he would be foolish to take the proffered leave thus slicing his training period even thinner.

Unfortunately, a student trainee cannot accumulate this leave and take it all after completion of his schooling. He is merely eligible for 30 days at the completion of a 12-months period, the compilation of the leave being at the rate of 2½ days a month.

Nor can a veteran take advantage of this furlough arrangement after finishing his academic training. In short, if he's not returning to school for one of the summer sessions or for the next regular fall quarter at the same school wherein he is now studying, the veteran cannot get the leave time.

Should a veteran who entered school in September wish to apply for the leave, here is what he will get.

For the nine months of schooling he will have accumulated 23 days. So at the end of the spring quarter the Veterans administration will pay him subsistence for this period of time if he asks for it.

Of course, for every day of absence from class, the trainee will lose a day of leave. But his word is necessarily the final authority on this since the University does not keep an individual compilation of absences.

* * *

As yet there are no more reports from the fate of the Rogers Bill, HR 870, advocating increased subsistence for veterans.

However, action on this is to be taken sometime this week. Something should be forthcoming soon through the Chapel Hill chapter of the American Veterans committee.

Statement to the Students

(Ed. note—This is the first in a series of statements prepared by student body president Dewey Dorsett to acquaint all students at the University with the proposed constitutional amendments.)

In the general campus elections next Tuesday, six amendments to the constitution will be submitted for the approval of the student body. Acceptance of these amendments will bring about a considerable increase in the effectiveness of our student government. The purpose of this statement is to submit for your consideration some of the more important advantages and concrete improvements which these amendments offer.

Eleven months ago your student government began operation under a new constitution. The transition from the old to the new was not an easy one and many mistakes have been made. Yet, in this first year the several branches of student government have carried on their functions in a creditable manner and many valuable lessons have been learned.

It was never supposed that the constitution was a perfect document or that it was a panacea which would at once remedy our ills. It remained only for time and actual experience to point out which parts of the constitution were strong and which parts were weak. Most of the branches of student government were functioning well and efficiently, but others found that provisions of the constitution were detrimental and severely handicapped their work.

Accordingly, a committee was appointed by the President of the Student Body to study the constitution and recommend any changes which they thought necessary to the best interests of the students of the University. The committee was composed of men and women students who were closely associated with student government and who had actually experienced both the advantages and disadvantages of the constitution. They were: Charles Warren, Speaker of the legislature, Johnny Jones, secretary-treasurer of the Student body, Pete Pully and Bill Tate, members of the men's council. Fran Golden, chairman of the women's council, Ray Jefferies, chairman of the student council, John Surratt, former member of the legislature and treasurer of the Junior class, and Dewey Dorsett, president of the Student body. This committee worked long and hard and sought the advice and opinion of many students before making their final recommendations.

Following the report of the advisory committee to the legislature bills were introduced concerning these amendments. Six of these bills were passed by the legislature and now the remaining step is the approval of the student body.

Let us examine each of these proposed amendments and consider the improvements which they offer.

Amendment Number One—Student Audit Board

The Student Activities office is one of the most important agencies of the student body. It supervises the funds of student government, the athletic association, and most of the extra-curricula organizations and fraternities on the campus. As set up in the constitution, the board of trustees of this office is the Student Audit board, composed of a chairman and four members appointed by the president of the student body. The importance of the work which this board must do is obvious. It is even more obvious that a certain continuity must be provided to the membership of this board so that from year to year the policies and experience of previous boards will not be lost because of a yearly turnover in student membership. Accordingly, this amendment provides for the addition of two non-voting faculty members to be appointed by the chancellor of the University. Thus, the greatly needed continuity is provided for in the membership of the board.

Amendment Number Two—The Dance Committee

The present dance committee has been severely handicapped because its present membership of twelve students is not sufficiently large to handle efficiently the duties assigned to it. This amendment would increase the membership of the dance committee to eighteen by providing for the election of six holdover members. It also provides for a faculty adviser to be appointed by the chancellor of the University.

The constitution also requires the dance committee to report all violations of the dance rules to the proper judicial body. This works a tremendous hardship on the councils, who are already overburdened with work. To remedy this situation the amendment requires the dance committee to report to the proper council only those violations of dance rules which in their judgment constitutes a serious violation of the campus code or the honor code and possibly merits suspension of the violator from the University.

CHARLES WARREN, Vice-Pres.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

LEWIS GOES TO COAL CONFERENCE UNDER HANDICAPS; BRITISH WIT WINS MARSHALL AT MOSCOW.

Washington.—Today John L. Lewis and the coal operators tee off to a discussion which will decide whether the nation's industry, just after escaping steel, motor and rubber strikes, will suffer a paralyzing coal shutdown.

Lewis goes into the conference very much on the spot. First, the Government is now doing exactly what he has long urged—turning the mines back to private industry—effective June 30.

Second, Lewis is not in good shape with his own men. They have lost a total of around $900 per man in the past year through three strikes called by him. The miners lost 59 days last spring; 17 days in November and December and about two weeks this spring. In other words, they lost all they could have made by increased wages—and then some.

Lewis, therefore, has to stage a dramatic move to recapture the complete confidence of his men. To that end he is demanding a program the operators will never grant: 1, ten cents royalty on each ton of coal mined (with the 5 cents present royalty, the welfare fund is now $20,000,000); 2, continued mine safety committees; 3, present pay of $75 for a 54-hour week to be continued for a 40-hour week.

While the operators will give the same 15 cents an hour raise now granted in steel, motors and other industries, they won't yield on the heavy increase demanded by Lewis.

Yet Lewis's influence is slipping so badly that he is certain to try to stand pat for spectacular new gains. Result may be that the miners again will lose more while on strike than from increased wages—while the country suffers another deadly paralysis.

MOSCOW DIARY

Notes from a Moscow diplomatic diary—During the final days of the conference, General Marshall was shown a cartoon by David Low of the London Evening Standard depicting three of the Big Four at the conference table. The fourth, Marshall, was entering the door. A flunkey announces: "The Secretary of State of the United States," whereupon in walks Marshall dressed in the skirt and stockings of a Greek soldier. . . Marshall was so amused that he asked Low for the original cartoon. . . According to French Foreign Minister Bidault, "General Marshall speaks French quite well. He is very sympathetic. He says he listens to me for the accent, to the interpreter for the sense, and then to himself to understand what is meant.". . .Dinner for four at the Hotel Moscow last night cost 138 rubles, or about $90. . .We drank vodka instead of cocktails because the cocktails were $6 each.

A Soviet Intourist guide escorting General Clark about the town pointed to a big building and remarked with pride, "That's the Lenin Library." "Oh, yes," replied Clark. "We have those at home." (You have to say it out loud to appreciate Clark's humor). . .Went slumming today. Soviet life in the realistic ray—poverty, slums, crowded unhealthy living. We live in such splendid isolation at Hotel Moscow that we have no idea what the Russian people are really like. . .Everyone in the Hotel Moscow gripes about the slow dining-room service. However, it took a French Communist to bawl out the waiter. "Bring me some chorba," he said, "and see that I get it some time before the end of the third five-year plan!"

John Foster Dulles, much-touted diplomatic adviser to Tom Dewey, is more on the fringes than in the center. His excuse: "There is little opportunity to be anything but scenery in the Big Four meetings." Dulles considers General Clay "politically naive" because Clay trusts the Germans to accept Democracy instead of Communism if given a free choice. Such tactics merely lead to a competitive campaign between Russia and the United States, explains Dulles, to see which side can give greatest favors to Germany.

ALEMAN AND "HARRITO"—bf

The exchange of visits between President Truman and Mexico's President Miguel Aleman is the greatest shot in the arm to the good-neighbor policy since Sumner Welles left the State Department.

President Aleman is convinced that Mexico must solve its economic headaches or be swept up in the rising tide of extremism now sweeping much of the world. To keep Mexican employment high, the Mexicans want loans from the United States, but on a partnership basis, not with Wall Street motives behind them. These points were quietly discussed during closed-door talks between Truman and Aleman in Mexico City. That's why Truman is arranging for Aleman to talk to top bankers and industrialists as well as to key government economic experts while he is a guest of the United States. Truman wants to make sure the plan gets off to a solid start.

Demon Deacons Engage Tar Heels In Big Four Tilt Today

Softball Meet Begins Friday

Big Four All-Star Teams to Compete

A Big Four intramural softball tournament will be held on the local diamonds this Friday afternoon when all-star teams representing Carolina, State, Duke, and Wake Forest will battle for this year's softball championship.

The tourney, which will be of the double elimination type, will get underway at 12:45 o'clock when the pairings and the first round of play will be drawn.

Carolina's all-star combination will be selected this week by the local fraternity and dormitory mural managers.

Softball play continued yesterday afternoon, and several teams added more to their unblemished records. The Pikas, playing an excellent game on both offense and defense, made it four in a row by trouncing Zete No. 1 17-1. Aycock downed Alexander No. 2, 13-5; and Lewis No. 2 remained undefeated with a 15-2 win over Whitehead. Phi Delta Phi easily defeated DKE No. 2, 17-0, and Pi Lamb defeated Chi Phi No. 2, 15-5.

Entry blanks for the horseshoe and tennis tournaments must be turned in by tomorrow afternoon, according to an announcement by assistant mural director P. A. Lee. The entries are to be deposited in room 211 Woollen gym.

DiLorenzo, Bauer Expected To Hook Up in Mound Duel

Carolina Lefty After Fifth Straight Win; Victory Gives Locals Tie for First Place

By Bob Goldwater

After a 10-day absence, Carolina returns to Big Four warfare this afternoon at 4 o'clock when the Tar Heels battle Wake Forest on Emerson field in the second clash of the year between the two clubs.

Currently situated in second place, one-half game behind State's league-leading Wolfpack, the locals will be attempting to move into a tie for the top position at the expense of the Deacons, over whom they already hold a 4-3 decision. Coach Murray Greason's outfit rests in the cellar spot in the circuit.

Another southpaw duel between Carolina's Vinnie DiLorenzo and Wake Forest's Moe Bauer looms this afternoon. The Tar Heel lefty, who

Carolina	2	1	.667
Duke	3	3	.500
Wake Forest	1	4	.200

worsted a five-hitter in the first meeting, will be after his fifth straight success of the year. He is undefeated, the only Carolina hurler still in that category.

Probably the batter Bauer will dread most today will be big Jack Hussey, whose slugging provided the margin of victory in the first outing. Hussey went three-for-four, batted in all four runs, and gave the Tar Heels a lead they never lost with a three-run homer in the sixth inning. His outfield mates are expected to be Harry Bowers and Tom Clayton.

The infield will have John Gregory at first, Bo Hackney at second, Dallas Branch at short, and either Buster Stevenson or Jim Hamilton at third. Behind the plate will be Buck Hardee or Jim Hayworth.

The Deacon lineup is expected to have Edwards, Teague, Hoch and Hooks in the infield, Batchelor catching, and Cochran, Fulghun and Whitner in the outfield.

DIAMOND DUST: Whitey Black is still out of action with an injured wrist, but Coach Walt Rabb has hopes that he might be ready for Saturday's tussle with Duke . . . Carolina is currently tied for third place in the Southern conference with Furman and VPI, all with 3-1 records . . . Clemson, with 5-1, tops the list.

CAROLINA'S ACE southpaw, Vinnie DiLorenzo, will be on the mound this afternoon when the Tar Heels battle Wake Forest in a Big Four tussle.

McKinney Selected On All-Pro Quintet

Bones McKinney, Carolina sage star in 1946 and now an outstanding performer with the Washington Capitols, was selected at a forward position on the all-league team recently announced by the Basketball Association of America.

Others on the first five included teammate Bob Feerick, Joe Fulks of the Philadelphia Warriors, Stan Miasek of Detroit, and Max Zaslofsky of Chicago. All received awards of $200.

Linksmen Edge Out State In Thrilling Contest; Doeschler Fires Record 67

Nolan Also Stars As Tar Heel Golfers Remain Undefeated In Dual Match Play

By Billy Carmichael

Carolina's undefeated linksmen almost picked the wrong afternoon to have a bad round yesterday, but the Tar Heels finally came up with a late rally to eke out a 16-11 victory over the previously impotent Wolfpack of State college. The match was played at Hope Valley Country club.

It was dependable Dick Doeschler along with mighty Mike Nolan who carried the burden of their erring teammates throughout the day to pace the locals through to their sixth win of the season.

Doeschler shot the finest card of the campaign as he turned in a 34-33—67 in a truly outstanding display of golfing. The Jacksonville junior produced five birdies for the afternoon and would have been a couple of strokes lower except for a pair of penalty shots he picked up on the ninth and 11th holes.

Nolan fired a slightly less spectacular 70, but was an all-important factor in producing the Carolina lads' six winning tallies.

Harvey Ward, Tar Heel No. 1 man, shot an acceptable 72, but met his match in State's Bob Turnbull. The Tarboro Terror took the opening four holes, but in the end had to capture the 18th to halve the match.

The rest of the locals, Bob Cox, Junie Bailey, and Ray Taylor just weren't on their respective games. Cox and Taylor didn't get the putting range all afternoon, and Bailey wasn't able to hit at all.

Coach Chuck Erickson commented following the match that he considered the Tar Heels "lucky to win" considering the fine play of State coupled with the erratic game of his proteges. "It was just one of those afternoons," the links mentor concluded.

The summaries:

Ward (NC) halved with Turnbull, 72-72; Dixon (NCS) defeated Bailey, 2½-½. Best ball: State, 1-0.

Doeschler (NC) defeated Gibson, 3-0; Taylor (NC) halved with Card 1½-1½. Best ball: UNC, 3-0.

Nolan (NC) defeated Ham, 3-0; Dearstyne (NCS) defeated Cox, 3-0. Best ball: UNC, 3-0.

Doeschler's card:

Netters Gain 7-2 Triumph Over Army; Seixas Beaten

(Special to the Daily Tar Heel)

West Point, April 27.—North Carolina's touring tennis crew registered its 15th straight triumph with a 7-2 verdict over Army here today, but the Tar Heels' top racquetman, Vic Seixas was upset in the feature match of the afternoon.

Playing in very cold weather, which affected the games of all the visiting netmen, the Tar Heels captured four singles clashes and swept all three doubles engagements. But it was the two encounters that went to Army that provided the surprises of the day.

Seixas' setback came from the strokes of the Cadets' ace, Charlie Oliver, by a 6-3, 6-2 count. The loss was the second of the season for the Tar Heel star, who dropped his opening match of the year to Rollar Ray of Yale.

Nicholson Loses

Army's other win came at the number six berth, where Stillson defeated Carolina's Jim Nicholson, 8-6, 6-2. In the other singles tilts, all won by the Tar Heels, Clark Taylor topped Dougherty, 6-1, 6-3; Stan Gruner [illegible] Wellborn, 7-5, 6-2; Sam Daniels registered a 6-3, 8-6 decision over Geraci; and Ray Morris trounced Calloway, 6-3, 6-2.

The doubles results: Seixas-Taylor topped Dougherty-Wellborn, 6-4, 6-4; Jack Kenfield and Charlie Rice defeated Calloway-Stillson, 2-6, 6-3, 6-2; Nicholson and Don Skakle turned back Hatch-McMullen, 6-4, 6-3.

The Carolina team continues onward to New England after today's victory and plays Williams college at Williamstown, Mass., tomorrow. Then follow encounters against Amherst, Wesleyan and Yale, after which the [illegible] end Saturday against NYU in New York.

HONORED WITH the "Most Valuable Coach" award at the Blue and White football game Saturday, Coach John Kenfield leads his net crew into New England today after yesterday's 7-2 victory over Army.

Splash Club Sponsors Coed Tank Meet Today

Members who will participate in the formations are: Kitty Ryan, Barbara Biggers, Jean Fisher, Dot Henderson, Sarah Montague, Elva Warner, Rachel Woodley, Cathie Rankin and K. D. Durham, Prince Nufer, one of the state's outstanding women swimmers, is scheduled to compete for Kenan dorm.

Semi-Finals in Track Slated for Tomorrow

The final qualifying rounds for this year's mural track meet were held yesterday afternoon, and the semi-finals are slated to begin tomorrow.

Assistant Mural Director P. A. Lee said that the list of those who have qualified for the semi-finals will be released this afternoon. This list will appear in tomorrow's Daily Tar Heel.

Somewhere in the neighborhood of 500 students have turned out to participate in the tournament, and from this field a large qualifying contingent has been drawn. The field is wide open, and one of the closest and biggest mural track meets in history is in the making.

Monogramers Meet Tonight At 7:15

The Carolina Monogram club, whose annual intra-squad football game drew a crowd of some 7,000 last Saturday afternoon, will hold an important meeting tonight at 7:15 in the Monogram clubhouse.

Secretary Charlie Tietjen announced last night that all members should bring in their tickets and proceeds from the game, and that plans for the next social function would be discussed.

Tietjen also revealed that members who ordered keys could pick them up at the meeting, and that certificates for letter winners in winter sports were available.

Campus Politicians To Speak Before Di

Members of the student body will have their first opportunity to hear the candidates for major campus offices tomorrow night in the Di Hall, according to Maurice Braswell, president pro tempore of the Senate. All nominees for president, vice president, secretary-treasurer, and editor of the Daily Tar Heel have been invited to speak. In addition anybody in the audience may talk in behalf of any candidate or party, Braswell declared. Herman Baker, chairman of the Student Party, Alex Davis, UP chairman, and Johnny Jones, head of the Campus Party, are also expected to be present.

Braswell said there will be an opportunity for questioning the candidates, and a "straw vote" may be taken after discussion is concluded.

Before coming to Chapel Hill he was on the faculties of the University of Minnesota and Washington university, St. Louis.

He is the author of several books in the field of German language and literature and is a noted collector and authority in proverb lore. His important study in the latter field, Proverbia Communia, a Fifteenth Century Collection of Dutch Proverbs, is now in press and soon to be published.

Political Mass Meeting Set For Memorial Hall Tomorrow

All Candidates Must Be Inside Building 15 Minutes Before Program Is to Begin

A political mass meeting of all students will be held in Memorial hall tomorrow night at 7:30 to introduce candidates for the Tuesday elections, announced Student Body President Dewey Dorsett yesterday evening. The meeting will be compulsory for coeds.

All candidates are requested to be in Memorial hall at 7:15, 15 minutes before the convocation is scheduled to start. Persons running for president and vice-president of the student body and for editor of the Daily Tar Heel will be requested to make talks of four minutes each.

According to the elections bill passed by the Student Legislature, candidates must be introduced to the campus at a mass meeting scheduled at least five days before election time.

Barbara Cashion, newly-elected speaker of the Coed Senate, says the meeting will be the only compulsory gathering for coeds this year. All girls in dormitories, sororities, and town are required to attend.

The roll will be checked by dormitory floor proctors., sororities and town representatives. These checkers will be stationed under signs denoting the dormitory, sorority, or town district. Town girls not attending will be fined unless they submit excuses to Betsy Ann Barbee, town girls' president at F-2591.

Coeds living in dormitories or sororities may be excused by proctors or house presidents; otherwise, they will either be fined or put on social probation.

Legislature Votes To Redivide Town, Provide Five Polls

By Bookie Jabine

The Student Legislature last night approved of a bill to redivide the town district, and the article six of the elections bill which provides for polling places to be set up at five different points on the campus.

According to the amendment, introduced by Jimmy Wallace, ballot boxes will be available at Alderman dormitory, Aycock, Gerrard hall, Lenoir hall, and the Carolina Inn. In an elaborate plan, Wallace also recommended that five different colors of ballots be used for the five different types of voters who will cast their ballots Tuesday.

The town districting bill, put forward by Charlie Long last week, divides the town into two separate voting entities. Town district A includes all men living in fraternity houses, Pittsboro road trailer camp, and Victory Village, while town district B takes in all others residing in town.

Simultaneous with the redividing bill, Al Lowenstein chairman of the reapportioning of the legislative districts, rendered his report and moved that the legislature seats be divided as follows: town women, 2 seats; dormitory women, 5 seats; dormitory men, 18 seats; and town men, 25 seats. The town seats are divided so as to give 17 seats to town district B while the remaining go to district A.

The redividing bill drew considerable debate from the floor. Johnny Clampitt opposed the bill on the grounds that it would create a line between fraternity and non-fraternity students.

Charlie Long, sponsor of the bill, stated that there was no such spirit in the bill, that it was drawn up merely to provide for a more even apportionment in town. Observers were of the opinion, however, that the measure took on a political hue.

Bill Miller, chairman of the Ways and Means committee, introduced a bill to provide for a new registration system next year. Under the provisions, the signing for classes will be handled by the colleges.

'Tookie' Hodgson Receives Endorsement Of UP for Editorship of Humor Magazine

By Chuck Hauser

Matt "Tookie" Hodgson was nominated by the University party yesterday afternoon for the post of editor of the newly-established campus humor magazine. This gives Hodgson a double endorsement, the Student party having nominated him last week.

"Tookie," a rising junior from Murfreesboro, Tennessee, is present secretary of the Publications board, and is a contributor to both the Daily Tar Heel and the Carolina Magazine.

Having worked for some time to get a humor magazine established on campus, when it was decided recently to have a May humor issue of the Carolina Magazine published, Hodgson received the position of guest editor.

Vice-president of his freshman class at Carolina and a member of Phi Gamma Delta fraternity, he is experienced in both college and professional newspaper and magazine work, and plans to work this coming summer on the Nashville, Tennessean daily newspaper. He has received an offer of the position of feature editor of the paper's Sunday magazine supplement.

Well-known for his humor writing, Hodgson is the creator of such DTH and Carolina Mag characters as Foo Foo Jellyroll, the Campus Queen; Seymour Sinkhole, XIII, the Machine Politician; Willy E. Clung, the Messiah of the Campus; and Histrionicus O'Leary, the Noted Playmaker.

Why You Should Vote

(1) The new constitution gives the student legislature the power to levy and collect fees from each student in the University. Next year's planned budget deals with over $109,000 of your money. See that you put good men in the legislature to regulate this budget.

(2) The Daily Tar Heel is the voice of the student body to the outside world. Through it your parents and friends, and the alumni of UNC find out what is going on in school. It is a $50,000 a year business—see that YOU elect a good man for the editorship.

(3) The president of the student body has the power of veto over the legislature. He is an "ex officio" member of all standing committees—he appoints vacancies in student government between elections and appoints the chairman of many important boards and committees. Know the man you vote for.

(4) The vice-president of the student body serves as speaker of the student legislature. He must be a man that can demand decorum from that group. By the way he arranges the agenda, so goes the business of that body. It takes a good man, See that YOU vote to put a good man in that office.

Horseless Buggy Doctor

Chapel Hill's congested public arteries, whose unnatural swelling has of late moved both carowners and pedestrains alike to general grousing and various impractical panaceas, are finally going under the care of an expert. At the behest of the Student Legislature, the State Highway commission's traffic engineer will come here this week to attempt to solve our little town's big parking and traffic problem.

Robert A. Burch is the trouble-shooter's name, and after a survey expected to last from a week to ten days, he will report his findings and recommendations to a saftey committee appointed by Chancellor House.

Our only experience with practical traffic problems is in trying to stay among the class of the quick and not the dead along Franklin street's convertible-studded length. Nevertheless, because we realize the magnitude of the campus' congested condition, we can eagerly await the day that the engineer's findings can be put into effect and the two-horse atmosphere of the past can be relatively restored.

The Legislature, along with the administration can be commended for its altertness in moving to ease this thorn in the town's automotive side.

Our only recommendation to Mr. Burch is that he leave his car in Raleigh when he comes to survey the problem, and that he look carefully before attempting to cross our main thoroughfare at the rush hour.—E. B. A.

Those who continue to shrink from responsibility continue to shrink.

There is one thing more important than having a good man in the White House, and that's having a good man in every house.

Yelling at children isn't likely to make the home a howling success.

The man who knows how to say, "I'm sorry" to his wife and children knows how to end deadlocks with his associates, his boss, or employees.

What can happen tomorrow depends on how we are living today.

Build on what unites. Then we can unite to build.

Constitutional Amendments

(Ed. note—This is the concluding article of a series prepared by Dewey Dorsett and Charles Warren to acquaint students with the proposed amendments to the constitution at next Tuesday's election.)

AMENDMENT NUMBER THREE—THE HOUSE PRIVILEGES BOARD

The house privileges board was created during the war. Its purpose is to make all rules concerning coed visiting privileges in fraternity houses. The fraternities were put on their honor to uphold the rules, but in addition the board made spot checks to see if the standards were being upheld. Is this not an unusual procedure to put students on their honor and then go around checking up? Such a system was doomed to failure from the beginning and this year the board has to all intents and purposes ceased to function. The coed visiting privileges agreement was drawn up by the parties concerned: the fraternities, the coed, and the administration meeting together. It is enforced by the honor system and has worked successfully all year.

The amendment provides for the complete elimination of section 7, Article III, pertaining to the House Privileges Board.

AMENDMENT NUMBER FOUR:—ELECTIONS DATES

Sec. 3 of Article V provides that General Campus Elections shall be held on the first Tuesday in May and that the inauguration shall be held on the third Tuesday in May. This means that the general campus elections comes barely three weeks before final exams and hardly gives the old officers a good opportunity to orientate the new officers in their respective jobs. Sec. 2 of Article I provides that half of the legislature shall be elected on the second Tuesday in December. This date too comes too close to examinations and works an undue hardship on both the candidates and the elections board.

The amendment provides that the date of general campus elections shall be moved up one month to the first Tuesday in April. The inauguration will be held on the third Tuesday. The date of the December elections will be moved up one week to the first Tuesday in December. The adoption of this change will eliminate conflicts with the examination schedule and allow the returning officers sufficient time to instruct the new officers in their duties and responsibilities.

AMENDMENT NUMBER FIVE—THE HONOR COUNCIL

By far the most important amendment to be submitted for your approval concerns our honor councils. The foundation of student self government at the University rests upon the honor code and the campus code. If the enforcement of these codes is encumbered by a complex, unwieldy organization of our honor courts, constitutions will be of no avail. We will have lost student government by virtue of the ridicule and contempt of the student body. Accordingly, the proposed amendment tremendously strengthens our honor code and simplifies the whole judicial system by eliminating the appeal procedure from the men's and women's councils to the student council. The Student council thus becomes a court of constitutionality, hearing all cases involving the alleged constitutionality of acts passed by the legislature and deciding cases of jurisdiction in conflicts between various organizations. All honor and campus code violations will be tried by the men's and women's councils. Appeals from their decisions will be sent directly to the faculty executive committee instead of the student council.

The absolute necessity for this change is prompted by so many important factors that the chairman of the councils are submitting statements to you which will go into greater detail.

AMENDMENT NUMBER SIX—CONCERNING FORM

This amendment simply provides for the renumbering and rewording of the parts of the constitution affected by the amendments which will be passed and for a better classification of the powers and duties of the officers and ing of any part of the document, but will enable the improvement of the committees provided for. This amendment will cause no change in the meaning of any part of the document, but will enable the improvement of the form and the style of the constitution.

We heartily recommend that you vote for the approval of all these amendments. They were designed for one purpose: to strengthen student government. It is imperative that the change be made now.

DEWEY DORSETT, Pres. of Student Body
CHARLES WARREN, Vice-Pres.

Daylight Saving Problem Leaves Columnist in Dark

By Jud Kinberg

One thing that has been worrying me ever since I was able to steal the watch out of my dad's vest pocket is what the devil they do with the hour they save up north when they go on daylight saving time.

I haven't said anything about it in the past because as a died-in-the-cotton Southerner, I didn't want to embarrass the Democratic administration up in Washington. After all, they probably had an alphabet agency to take care of allocating that extra hour to the dust bowl or—more likely—some punch bowl. But now that them Republicans are in, I refuse to keep quiet any longer. It seems to me that if no answer is forthcoming quickly, if they don't have an item in the budget for allocation of that hours, our lawmakers may well find themselves facing a charge of malfeasance in and out of office.

It is just this sort of lethargy on the part of voters that has perpetuated many an abuse in our fair country. Somebody passes a law and the next thing you know there are only 23 hours in the day. Now if that doesn't fly in the face of everything democratic and godly, I've been reading out of the wrong pew.

I'll be frank, Senator Taft, there's no use trying to pettifog me back into indifference. I know my constitutional rights and I want an answer. You boys up there have gone and done it, now account for that hour.

I don't believe the Senators have quite considered just how much ruckus daylight saving time is bound to cause. That justly-famous line from every gangster film, "Ratface, you have only 24 hours to live," will have to be changed to "Ratface, you have only 23 hours to live."

Then too, yesterday is no longer yesterday. In the parlance of the big Army brass, it's yesterday-minus-one. As for the Navy, they'll have to revise their system of belling out the time aboard ship. Of course, no one ever understood what the chimes meant anyway, so maybe that won't be too bad.

What it will do to the lunar system is beyond description. The moon's going to get awfully confused unless somebody explains the new setup to her in a hurry. And I'm willing to wager that not a commission in a carload on Capitol Hill has thought about finding out how the constellations feel about the whole thing.

Of course, if the hour is put to some good use such as designating it official "Cocktail Time" for North and South America, I might be willing to withdraw my objections. Or if some provision has been made to collect that hour each day and when they're all totalled up to set it aside as a "Cocktail Week" for North and South America—sort of a Found Weekend—then I guess I'll drop my suit and even my BVD's.

All local legislators I've talked to about this business have insisted that I go ahead with proceedings immediately. But I'm willing to give the Republicans a chance. I just don't want them to think that because they were elected on a "Had Enough?" ticket that we meant for them to go and take that hour away from us.

I'm glad to see that the sovereign state of North Carolina has kept its head and not been sucked in by this daylight-saving time. Together with the other flowers of Southern statehood, it can form a base from which to fight this latest Northern-Republican grab for power.

Let's get started on our campaign before its too late. Right now I bet Vandenberg is offering all those hours stolen from the taxpayers of America to the United Nations. Such stuff must cease. It's all right to help out in a pinch, but I'll be damned if I want to see that hour go without a fight. It's bound to ruin all the wage-hour and portal-to-portal systems we've just worked out.

And for me, it's going to cut my sack time down considerably. I'll only be able to sleep 23 hours a day now.

What Do YOU Say?

Today's Question

What do you think of Henry Wallace's recent speeches to foreign nations and the resulting effects in this country?

Answers

I think Mr. Wallace is much overrated as to both his influence and his following. He is like many another agitator except that he once was a government official. His utterings are of course resented by all thinking people but I think that in the long run they are uite inconsequential and should be tolerated as an example of our type of democracy.—Paul Mullinax, Gastonia.

I think that Mr. Wallace should mind his own business and let Secretary Marshall handle our foreign policy.—Mason Thomas, Siler City.

Mr. Wallace is still bemoaning the fact that he was kicked out of the government and he's crying on an international scale. In my estimation, his opinions and attitudes toward the international problems are as spineless as the amoeba.—Camest West, Kinston.

I believe Mr. Wallace is definitely a communist. Probably a member of the Third International which takes its orders from Uncle Joe.—Dick Council, Salisbury.

Deacons Fight Tar Heels To 9-9 Deadlock

Netters Capture 16th Win in Row; At Amherst Today

(Special to Daily Tar Heel)

Williamstown, Mass., April 29.—The touring Tar Heel tennis team from the University of North Carolina recorded its 16th match in a row here this afternoon, breezing past outclassed Williams college by an 8-1 score.

Vic Seixas, the Carolina national ranking star had easy pickings in the feature match of the day, and only in one doubles skirmish did the going really get tough for the Tar Heel netters. This No. 2 doubles match went three sets before Williams finally won in the final set 10 games to eight.

Seixas, who just yesterday was defeated by Charlie Oliver of Army, was in his regular form as he set Williams' Robinson down, 6-2, 6-1. Clark Taylor, the clowning Tar Heel No. 2 contestant, also slipped by his opponent by a 6-2, 6-1 margin.

The undefeated Tar Heel combination, which already holds impressive victories over such eastern teams as Colgate, Cornell, Yale and Army, moves to Amherst, Mass., tomorrow for a battle with Amherst college. They play Wesleyan Thursday, Yale Saturday and NYU Saturday.

The results:

Singles: Seixas (C) over Robinson, 6-2, 6-1; Taylor (C) over Schribner, 6-2, 6-1; Gruner (C) over Schaaf, 6-3, 6-2; Rice (C) over Takemine, 6-2, 6-1; Nicholson (C) over Wright, 6-2, 7-5; Daniels (C) over Platt, 6-3, 6-3.

Doubles: Seixas-Taylor (C) over Schribner-Schaaf, 6-4, 6-3; Robinson-Takemine (W) over Kenfield-Rice, 8-4, 6-8, 10-8; Nicholson-Skakle (C) over Spencer-Thrasher, 6-2, 6-4.

Milne Breaks Two Mile Mark

New Time Fastest Ever Run in South

By Morty Schaap

Back in 1928 one John Henderson of the University of North Carolina set a record in the two mile that remained on the books for a long time. In fact, until last Saturday when at the Penn Relays Jack Milne, a sophomore here, cracked the old mark by almost 18 seconds.

Henderson's time for the two mile was 9:38, while Milne finished second to Curt Stone of Penn State in 9:20.5. Stone was clocked in 9:19.4.

It is believed that Milne's mark was the fastest time turned in by a collegiate in the history of southern track. It bettered the conference mark by Tommy Fields of 9:26 and also the meet mark of Lumpkin of Richmond set in 1937.

On Saturday at the Relays before 43,000 screaming fans, the Carolina 480-yard shuttle hurdle team finished in a dead heat with Virginia in the trials and then went on to the finals where Indiana nipped them by an inch at the tape. The race was close all the way with never more than a foot separating the runners.

Dick Taylor turned in the two finest legs on the relay team, and much can be expected from this quartet in time to come.

Chunk Simmons took a close third in the individual 120-Invitation high hurdles and also anchored the blue and white relay team.

Jack Moody took a sixth place in the high jump with a leap that tied his University mark of 6 feet 3 inches. Five men tied for first with leaps of 6 feet 4 inches.

Bob Seligman completed the Tar Heel entrants with a fourth in the discus, only five inches out of third and a foot out of second.

Basketball Clinic To Be Ended Tonight

The final Carolina basketball clinic will be held tonight at 7:30 and brief spring drills for about 20 Tar Heel 1947-48 cage candidates will begin Monday afternoon, Coach Tom Scott of the White Phantoms announced last night.

Tournament Deadline

All entry blanks for the intramural tennis and horseshoe tournaments must be turned in by this afternoon, Assistant Mural Director P. A. Lee announced last night.

Contest Halted By Darkness At End Of 10 Wild Innings

Beason's Blow Knots Count For Carolina In Eighth; Game May Be Replayed Later

By Irwin Smallwood

They settled exactly nothing in Emerson stadium yesterday afternoon, nothing that is in the Big Four baseball race, for the Tar Heels of Carolina and the Deamon Deacons of Wake Forest fought it out nip and tuck for 10 wild innings before their Southern conference contest was called because of darkness with the scoreboard indicating a 9-9 deadlock.

There was no decision made as to whether the game would be replayed or not, but Carolina Coach Walter Rabb indicated that the encounter would be played at a later date if it became evident that it would have any effect on the final Big Four standings.

The tie ball game left Carolina with a 2-1 record in Big Four competition and Wake Forest with a 1-4 mark. The Tar Heels are idle the rest of this week until Saturday when the Duke Blue Devils make their second invasion of Chapel Hill of the season. The Carolina-Duke series is knotted at 1-all.

Lefty Vinnie DiLorenzo and Monk Whiteheart shared the pitching duty for the Carolina nine, and Whiteheart's steady hurling in the last two frames saved the day for the Tar Heels after Centerfielder Harry Beason had sent the tying runs in with a Texas league double to left in the bottom of the eighth.

At the end of four innings of play, Carolina rested comfortably with a 4-0 lead, but the Deacons exploded for two tallies in the fifth, three in the sixth and three in the seventh to go into the lead, 8-7 at that point. The Tar Heels had scored three times themselves in the sixth to match the torrid scoring pace set by the slugging Baptists.

Wake Forest put together a single, a double and an error to make their margin 9-7 as the Tar Heels came to bat in the eighth, but Beason's timely two-base blow with Bo Hackney and John Gregory on base evened the score. Both teams went three up and three down in the ninth and 10th cartos.

Jack Hussey led the Tar Heels in runs batted in, his triple with two on in the third accounting for two of them. Jim Hamilton also registered a triple for Carolina—with one on in the second.

Five bobbles afield on the part of each team added to the looseness of the ball game, and Coach Rabb of the Tar Heels used a total of 16 men in the fray.

In Annual Festivities....

'Queen of May' Will Be Crowned Sunday

The question, "Who will be the Queen of May," which has been asked hundreds of times on the campus will be answered next Sunday in Forrest theatre at the annual May Day festivities.

A Queen to reign over the occasion was selected several weeks ago in a mass coed balloting, but her name will remain a secret until she and her attendants are revealed next Sunday.

The event will be sponsored by the Panhellenic council, and the CICA with the cooperation of the Dramatic Art department, Chi Omega, Phi Literary society, and the modern dance group. Chancellor Robert B. House has been selected to crown the Queen in the ceremonies which will include the Woman's Glee club, a modern dance group directed by Nancy Brock and a pageant. Henrietta Cooper is pageant director which will include Vincent Cassidy as the prime minister; James Riley, jester; and Bill Taylor, prince.

Last year's pageant which took place in Sleepy Hollow and featured Rip Van Winkle and his dream drew much campus attention and comment. Patty Harry and 12 attendants were crowned in the ceremonies.

In case of rain May Day exercises will be held in the Forrest theatre on Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

300 Homeless

An official of the Fairmont chamber of commerce estimates that 300 persons are homeless, but that no one was injured. New York, April 30.—(UP)—The largest of four independent unions involved in the New York telephone strike has voted to reject the settlement reached this morning by their negotiators. Dorsett Vetoes Two Legislature Bills

Subsistence Checks To Be Ten To Fifteen Days Late

Legislators Yet to Allot Needed Funds

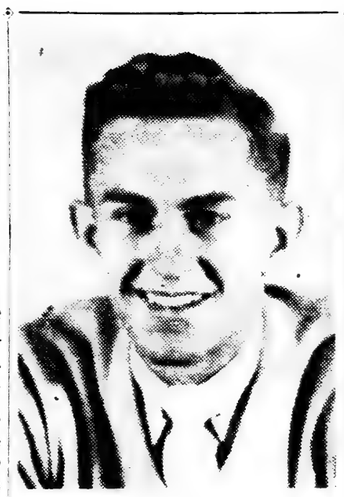
Congress Has Bill To Cover Payments

By Roy C. Moose

Top officials from the State Veterans Administration headquarters in Winston-Salem visiting the University yesterday advised veterans on the campus to "look elsewhere for subsistence money to last them for at least 10 to 15 days" in reply to questions posed concerning the unexpected delay in subsistence checks due April 30.

"We don't know when the checks will reach the veteran in training since they cannot be mailed until Congress passes a deficiency appropriation bill to cover the payments. If the bill were passed today, there would still be a delay of at least ten days," stated the officials.

Funds Exhausted



Delay in sending out the checks resulted when funds appropriated by Congress for the purpose of unemployment and educational allowances were exhausted. The delay affects the monthly subsistence of more than 2,780,000 veterans who are now in training or unemployed, 1,660,000 of whom are in colleges and universities.

At present a deficiency bill is before Congress to cover the payments to veterans, but as yet the bill has not been acted upon. The Washington Veterans administration office released data that "the delay is expected to be of short duration since Congress should make the funds available within a few days." However, the Winston-Salem group stated that the bill would have to go to the Budget office after passage by Congress, which will extend the delay somewhat.

Checks Made Out

Checks have been made out by the Winston-Salem office and are now in Richmond "in the mailbag awaiting the go-ahead signal," according to the officials visiting the University.

The delay affects only those veterans in training under P. L. 346. All disabled veterans in school under P. L. 16 will receive their checks on time as their subsistence is taken care of under a different appropriation which passed Congress in March.

SAM DANIELS, rising junior from Coral Gables, Fla., is the Student party candidate for secretary-treasurer of the student body. Daniels, who holds down one of the singles spots on the tennis team, was president of the 1945 freshman class at Carolina and is a member of the Sigma Chi fraternity.

Seniors to Find Delay in Getting Their Sheepskins

Due to an inadequate supply of sheepskin, there will not be enough of the traditional diploma material to go around to all members of the academic graduating class this year, it was announced from Central Records office.

However, engravers who supply the University with sheepskin have promised to deliver the 1947 diplomas next September.

As soon as the sheepskin diplomas are received here, they will be sent to seniors by registered mail. If, in the meantime, any 1947 class member needs a certificate of graduation or wants to ask any questions regarding the diploma, the following address should be used:

Central Records office, University of North Carolina, Attention Diploma Inquiry.

All candidates are asked to be in Memorial hall by 7:15 so that the convocation can get under way as scheduled.

Award Praises Work of Paper In War Period

Editor Woestendiek Accepts for Staff

A certificate of achievement was awarded the Daily Tar Heel yesterday by the United States Navy Bureau of Naval Personnel. Presentation of the award, given in grateful recognition of outstanding services to naval personnel during World War II, was made to Daily Tar Heel Editor Bill Woestendiek by Lt. Paul G. Sumrell, officer in charge of the U. S. Navy recruiting station in Raleigh.

Lt. Sumrell, in making the presentation before Chancellor Robert B. House in the Chancellor's office yesterday at 11 a. m., congratulated the personnel of the University of North Carolina Tar Heel on the receipt of the award and expressed appreciation on behalf of the recruiting service for the service rendered the country during the war effort.

Accepts Award

Woestendiek, in accepting the award on behalf of the Daily Tar Heel, expressed the newspaper's thanks and appreciation. "Although the present staff is not the same one as that which published the Tar Heel during the war period, it gives me great pleasure to accept it on behalf of the newspaper and the University. It is our hope that the paper can continue to serve the campus, the University, and our country to the best of our ability," the editor said.

Chancellor House also expressed his appreciation as a representative of the University to the naval officials. He stated that the University, as always, was grateful of the opportunity to serve the nation in any manner.

The certificate will be framed and hung on display in the Daily Tar Heel office.

JACK FOLGER, UP candidate for vice president of the student body, has served on the freshman honor council, student legislature, elections committee, and freshman basketball and football teams. He is also a veteran of three years as a naval officer and a member of Kappa Sigma fraternity.

Move Follows Message Sent By President

Student Body Head Explains Decision

By Chuck Hauser

Student Body President Dewey Dorsett yesterday vetoed two bills passed by the Student Legislature in their Tuesday night session, one redistricting the town voters, and the other reapportioning the legislative districts.

Dorsett stated yesterday afternoon that he sent a message to the Legislature a week ago expressing his unqualified opposition to the bill to redistrict the town vote, and also urging immediate action on the elections setup to avoid last-minute confusion. The Legislature apparently heeded neither request.

Dorsett Statement

Dorsett went on to say, "While I do not for one moment question the sincerity or motives of the sponsors of this (the redistricting) bill, I nevertheless believe that its effect is to segregate the voters of our campus who are members of fraternities.

"This is highly undesirable to my way of thinking because it tends to draw the fraternity members and non-fraternity men farther apart instead of closer together. Theoretically, we are all supposed to be working toward a common goal—a better student life on campus, regardless of whether or not we are members of fraternities.

"I will always be opposed to any measures which I believe might jeopardize the spirit of cooperation and harmony which has existed between these groups."

As to the reapportionment bill, Dorsett had the following comment: "At least two of the major parties having already completed their slate of legislators based on the present apportionment, if a change were made now in the number of legislators to be elected from each district, endless confusion and misunderstanding might well result.

"Therefore, I feel compelled to veto both the redistricting bill and the reapportionment bill in the best interests of the students of the University."

Clarification

The student body president clarified himself further by pointing out that if the existing districts are to be redivided, they should all be redivided at the same time.

Dorsett said that he had spoken to several proponents of the bill Tuesday night, and that it was suggested to him that it would be a wise move if the Student Legislature should pass a bill prohibiting the changing of any elections laws within 30 days prior to the date of elections.

"I would like to recommend to the Legislature that this be done," Dorsett concluded.

Editor Jacobson Reveals. . . .

April Issue of Carolina Mag, Boasting Of 40 Pages, Went to Press Yesterday

The first 40-page Carolina Magazine since 1943's Centennial issue went to press yesterday. That's the good news released by Editor Fred Jacobson.

Jacobson, who is currently a candidate for re-election to his top editorial post, also gave a quick run-down of the many features that crowd the king-sized issue. "Humor, fiction, photographs, features and cartoons have been blended to give the campus a full, well-rounded Carolina Magazine in this April issue."

The April Carolina Magazine is the final issue to be edited by Jacobson and his editorial staff. The May monthly has been turned over to campus humorists, under direction of "Tookie" Hodgson.

Early-morning extra work by all staffs of the magazine was credited with playing an important part in making possible the record increase in size for the current April Magazine from normal 24 pages to the almost-double 40. On the financial side, the business staff financed the additional pages through ad sales which tripled the amount set in the budget.

Lead Story

Lead story in the magazine is a hard-fact survey of current professionalism in college sports. Written by humorist-sports authority Eddie Allen, it concludes that only a realistic, "pay-'em" attitude can untangle the present undercover snarl.

Top humorous feature of the issue is titled, "No Butts About It."

New Officers Chosen By Phi Kappa Sigma

Lambda chapter of Phi Kappa Sigma in a recent meeting elected the following men as officers: Oma H. Hester of High Point, president; George McLeod of Durham, vice-president; W. H. J. Hipple of Philadelphia, secretary; Ed Shumate of Goldsboro, treasurer. Other officers elected were Richard L. Barab, Jim Hauser, Floyd Huffman, Fred Mills, Harvey Wrenn.

For a Quick Runoff

The Daily Tar Heel is strongly behind the idea of democratic student government and the wholesome campus politics which goes with it. But any good thing can go too far.

Starting back last January, only a month after fall elections, the spring political campaign began, and has been boiling at top force for five weeks now. And a great number of students, even some political aspirants are beginning to get pretty tired of the haggling which inevitably results from a good political campaign.

Thus, for the good of the whole campus, and in order to get our new student government officers well oriented in their jobs before the summer session, we strongly recommend that the runoff elections which will be necessary in a number of races, be held by Friday, May 9 at the latest, instead of a full week after the general elections next Tuesday.

Nothing at all is to be gained by stringing out political ward heeling another week. Doing so will only create an even greater apathy towards student government on the part of the multitude of already politically tired back-slapping politicoes and over-politicked students trying to cram for mid-terms and finals.

Looking at last year's vote count, less than 33 per cent of the student body voted in the initial election. The runoff, held a full week later, which was marked by the hottest campaigning in a half-decade, brought a poll count of only slightly over 1000—out of a student body of 5000 at that time.

The benefits of a quick runoff were recently shown at the University of Texas which held annual elections a week before last Tuesday. Though only one-third of the student body of 16,000 voted in the general polling, a run-off was held two days later on Thursday, and almost the same number voted!

So in the interest of keeping student interest in campus government at the highest possible level, we strongly recommend to Elections board Chairman Jabie Heyward, that he set the necessary runoff elections for next Thursday, and get them over with.

The Student Legislature, in effect favored this move when considering the elections bill Tuesday evening, and Legislature Elections committee Chairman Johnny Clampitt has openly declared his group to be in favor of a quick runoff.

The only possible hitch in this is seen in the counting of votes and printing of a runoff ballot. With efficient work on the part of Heyward and his aides, there is no reason why all of this could not be accomplished by Wednesday afternoon, and the polls opened for a final election on Thursday morning.

We suggest that Heyward enlist the help of campus religious groups, such as the YM and YWCA, and Wesley foundation, Canterbury club, and other unbiased student groups to expedite this matter, and show the student body that an efficient election can be held. Let's do a good job on our campus politics, but let us not forget our main objective in college!

Not Funny

Good advertising and publicity has its place in our rushing sequence of events both locally and nationally, but it can be in bad taste.

Such was apparently the case in Lenoir hall yesterday when a graphic description of how New York was being destroyed by an atom bomb explosion terrified numerous students who were calmly eating their noon-day meal.

The stunt was done to advertise a local movie about the atomic bomb. But when such tricks become so realistic as to scare students, especially those with families in the New York area, it is in bad taste and should be prohibited.

"Open City"

Only Cheesecake in Italian Movie Is Found in Bakery

By Eddie Allen

The Pick Theater played "The Open City" yesterday. In the jaundiced eyes of everyone not previously immunized against such films from the ravioli circuit, "The Open City" lost—English subtitles and all.

Maybe I was prejudiced. In clothing myself with atmosphere for the opus, I somehow got hold of some green spaghetti, thereby suffering stomach pains along with the cast. Then, along about the third reel a hefty gal with a post-Easter chapeau sat in front of me, obscuring the lower part of the screen. By the time I got caught up with the translation again, I didn't know whether Romoletto was getting ready to drop an anti-fascisti bomb or sign with the New York Yankees.

Those difficulties, notwithstanding, I still must admit that as foreign films go—and they can for all I care—The Open City was on par with a good U. S. Class B war scarer. It had its moments of well-bloodied realism and some superior acting by the Priest and the leading man, the Milano version of Jean Gabin. That many of its scenes were made under trying conditions of Nazi occupation was appropriate. Many of the scenes were pretty trying to the audience, too.

I don't know who writes the English subtitles for these foreign films, but anyone who can boil down conversation like this man can would be a natural for the book section of Reader's Digest. On the screen the heroine is muttering something that sounds like:

"Giovanni pastrami, pizzeria, Il Duce kaputee, bambino vino mia!" for about three-minutes running time, punctuated by appropriate gestures. At the end of this romanized Gettysburg address, with the audience holding its breath in anticipation, the subtitle blithely announces that the gal has just said:

"No."

Let down by it all, everyone misses the next short burst of dialogue, while the cast freezes on the spot to allow the translation to catch up with the action. A good time to go out and catch a cigarette, at that.

With all its bad points, the main disappointment for most in The Open City was the complete lack of the rampant, drooling sex flagrantly advertised by the billboards. Being normal in most ways, I had been dragged into the film by something more than its possible dramatic excellence and my girl friend. As it turned out, though, the only real cheesecake scene came when the hungry populace stormed the bakery. As a sex picture, The Open City is about as appealing as the semi-finals of the Grand National Trapshoot, and Jane Russell's bosom can stop its anxious heaving for fear of competition in that line.

"Its plain sexiness has rarely been approached by Hollywood." Yeah, it was pretty plain all right.

Anyone who shared my slight dyspepsia over yesterday's spaghextravaganza would have acquired honest-to-gosh ulcers should they have eaten lunch in Lenoir Hall before attending the show. While a thousand students and dogs were quietly having their noonday meal, a voice over the loudspeaker system excitedly announced that Manhattan Island had been rocked by an atomic blast, that scarcely a skyscraper was left standing, that the populace was fleeing in panic. The announcer went on into gory details, saying that thousands of bodies were lying in Central Park for other than the usual purpose.

Coeds dropped their Ry-Krisp, canines went into howling frenzies, trays were devoured at one gulp and a good time was had by all. There was a catch to it, of course. A few moments later the voice announced that the Orson Wellsian prank had been merely in advertisement of the coming picture, "The Beginning or the End."

I don't know about you, but I'm getting tired of Hollywood sensationalism. If there is anything really hot in the picture, you can be sure the censors get to it first. Ah, there's a job, at that!

Letters To The Editor

Unpardonable Offense

Dear Sir:

During lunch in Lenoir Hall today, the public address system bellowed forth with an announcement that a terrible explosion had occurred on Times square in New York, that the whole area had crumpled, trapping thousands of people. Later it was announced that the "news" flash was a hoax. It was to stimulate interest in an atomic movie, the voice said.

Such a device for attracting attention is cheap, deceitful, and absolutely unforgivable. People hearing such an announcement possibly have friends or kin living or working near Times square. Such sensational misrepresentation of fact could cause undue concern or even more serious repercussions.

Steps should be taken immediately to prevent a recurrence of this sort of irresponsible action. The public address system is supposedly a source of authoritative information; such misuse of it is unpardonable.

THOMAS G. LYNCH

Inward Approach

Dear Editor:

I heard Bayard Rustin speak Sunday night in the basement of the Methodist church and Monday afternoon in Gerrard hall. This young Christian Negro revealed sentiments and intentions so far divorced from any political leftist-versus-rightiest limitations and so charged with spiritual conviction that those of us who had ridden our horizontal hobby of liberalism with smug pride—suddenly felt ourselves shamed, suddenly were forced to realize that, at the depths of the new creative forces rising in America, there is a vertical impulse of direction, a spiritual experience far transcending our quick angers or our intellectual condescensions.

Bayard Rustin is not a reformer but a prophet. And in his actions, he reveals a creative outlook, a positive approach to the world through a serene view of the Infinite. Recognizing that American Negroes are beginning to take advantage of the 1946 Supreme court ruling on non-segregation of races on interstate public transportation, recognizing also that many human beings are not inwardly well enough disciplined to resist arrest and insult without violent reactions, these pacifist Fellows of Reconciliation have begun their tour through the South with the specific idea of setting up a non-violent example of resistance, a dramatic symbol upon which racial minorities can seize to find their freedoms courageously but without debasing their spirits with anger. The whole approach is inward, through love, through spiritual clarity, through strength of conviction—through a positive experience of Christ.

It is humiliating that many of our most intelligent persons have misunderstood and misinterpreted this Christian sincerity and creative insight. But the sin is upon us all. We do not expiate it by further anger. As Rustin said in closing his two talks, "It is not equality we need so much as it is Christian love we must reveal."

These Fellows of Reconciliation, many of whom have been in prison for their convictions, and who number such persons as Harry Emerson Fosdick and Mahatma Gandhi, are the genuine creators of a new age. It is time we should re-examine ourselves and our conventions. We must realize that we shall have to suffer, that we deserve suffering. Only by humility can we see the full truth of the situation and know that man's mistreatment of man is merely a material expression of an infinite wrong. When we recognize these truths, our petty grub prides will be shed . . . and the mature creative phase will have been reached.

Sincerely,
BILL McGIRT.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

MRS. MCLEAN WAS VICTIM OF HOPE DIAMOND; CHIEF JUSTICE VINSON TURNED FROM MCLEAN DOOR; BILL GREEN OFFERS CONCESSIONS TO CIO

Washington.—The death of Evalyn Walsh McLean of Hope Diamond fame closes a unique chapter in the life of Washington—a chapter featured not only by poker parties and politicians, jewels and caviar, but by humanity and humility.

The latter was a side of Mrs. McLean that the public did not know about. Probably no one person in the capital did more for servicemen during the war than Mrs. McLean.

Though she went in for celebrities, Mrs. McLean had an even longer list of friends whose names meant nothing in the society columns, but who were just plain folks. They were invited to her house because she liked them.

Mrs. McLean always said that the Hope Diamond brought her bad luck, yet she clung to it. Her first child was killed in a traffic accident. Her husband died in an asylum for the insane. This winter her only daughter, the wife of ex-Senator Robert Reynolds of North Carolina, died of an overdose of sleeping tablets.

Friends sometimes asked Mrs. McLean why she did not sell the Hope Diamond. Her reply was that it would bring bad luck to other people. Once she temporarily traded the diamond to Elliott Roosevelt—for a dollar.

She had met Elliott accidentally in the Kit Kat Club in New York and invited him to her table. Elliott was so critical of his father and other members of the family that Mrs. McLean, a Republican and close friend of Warren Harding, remonstrated.

"You shouldn't talk that way about your father," she said. "After all, I don't agree with a lot of things he's done. He's conscripted wealth and so on, but personally he's a fine man."

Finally, she gave Elliott the Hope Diamond, and he in return gave her a silver dollar which he carried for luck. Then, remembering the bad-luck reputation of the diamond, Elliott got almost panic-stricken and started to retrieve his dollar by force. At that point, Mrs. McLean traded back her diamond.

CHIEF JUSTICE REBUFFED

Mrs. McLean was so crushed at the death recently of her daughter that she shut herself up for weeks. Friends worried about her long seclusion, but she refused to see them. Only the servants remained with her in the spacious, brick Georgetown house, formerly owned by Ambassador Alexander Kirk of the Kirk soap millions.

Finally, kindly Fred Vinson, whose dignified robes as Chief Justice have never detracted from his human qualities, decided to try to cheer Mrs. McLean. He and Mrs. Vinson walked up to the McLean front door and knocked. A butler opened the door but did not let them in.

"Mrs. McLean is not seeing anyone," he said.

"Will you tell her that the Chief Justice and Mrs. Vinson just wanted to say hello for a moment?" requested Vinson. "Won't you just please tell her that we are here?"

But the butler was adamant. The Chief Justice and Mrs. Vinson turned away from the McLean door, and the sorrowing owner of the Hope Diamond remained in virtual seclusion until the end came last week.

LABOR'S MOSCOW CONFERENCE

Two men representing more people than the population of Australia sit down today to negotiate peace for American labor. They are William Green of the A. F. of L. and Phil Murray of the CIO. Their unity talks may be even more difficult than the Moscow Conference.

Green's attitude on labor peace has always been snobbish. He has offered the CIO a chance to return to the AFL, but little leadership inside the AFL. This the CIO has constantly rejected.

But today the grass-roots pressure from the ranks of labor is too strong, even for "Mother" Green. Labor all over the country has been demanding that the AFL and CIO forget their differences, work together to block the Hartley Labor Bill.

Originally, one wing of the AFL, led by John L. Lewis, carpenters' boss Bill Hutcheson and George Meany of the plumbers, thought they could do business with the Republicans. But the GOP labor blitz has left them disillusioned. Result is that the great majority of the AFL, led by teamsters' head Dan Tobin, and garment workers' David Dubinsky sincerely feel that there must be labor peace.

A. F. OF L. DEMANDS

So, at today's labor talks, Bill Green will abandon his hitherto high-and-mighty attitude. However, he'll demand certain concessions from the CIO, and this will be his program:

1. Purge all Communists from the CIO.
2. Withdraw from the World Federation of Trade Unions.
3. Abolish the CIO Political Action Committee.

In return Green will offer the CIO equal membership on the AFL executive board; also complete autonomy for all CIO unions in industries where the CIO has a majority of the members.

Murray will accept some but not all of these proposals. Also, he will have some counterproposals of his own. He will remind Green that the CIO is now twice as big as the AFL which it left eleven years ago. He will point out that much of the AFL's size and success today is due to the dynamic competition given it by the CIO. Finally, he will express fear that creating a labor monopoly and abolishing competition will stunt, rather than spur, unionization.

LABOR MERRY-GO-ROUND

Most people don't realize that today labor is big business. The unions have investments in real estate running into tens of millions. Some of them own banks, and have even loaned money to industry.

Tar Heel Tennis Crew Scores 7-0 Whitewash Over Amherst

Rain Causes Halt To Match; Netmen At Wesleyan Today

(Special to Daily Tar Heel)

Amherst, April 30. — The powerful North Carolina tennis crew rolled onward to its 17th straight triumph of the season here today by scoring a 7-0 sweep over Amherst college before rain halted the final two doubles engagements.

The victory was the Tar Heels' fourth on their current northern tour and sends them on undefeated to their match against Wesleyan tomorrow.

All six singles matches went to the Carolina players by easy scores, with Clark Taylor, at the number two position, posting the best result with a 6-0, 6-1 verdict over Soliday. The number one match of the afternoon saw Vic Seixas stroke his way to a 6-2, 6-3 triumph over Daniels of Amherst.

Straight Sets

At the number three berth, Stan Gruner continued his winning ways by downing Graham in consecutive 6-3 sets. Carolina's number four netter, Jim Nicholson, found the going easy against Bandeen and registered a 6-1, 6-1 win. In the other two tussles, Jack Kenfield triumphed in straight 6-3 sets over Keevil and Don Skakle trimmed Gould, 6-1, 6-3.

Only one doubles encounter was reeled off before the rain, which had been threatening to fall all day, finally put a halt to the match. In the only completed tilt, Seixas and Taylor romped in consecutive 6-1 cantos over Amherst's Daniels and Steketee.

In the two encounters that were called, Kenfield and Charlie Rice were leading Keevil and Gould by 6-1, 2-0, and Nicholson and Skakle held a 6-1 advantage over Graham and Mitchell.

After the Wesleyan clash, Carolina plays Yale and NYU before returning to Chapel Hill.

Hussey, Cheek Near Top in Big Four Hitting; Ramsey of State Leads in Batting, Hurling

Carolina's two husky outfielders, Jack Hussey and Emmett Cheek, continued among the leaders in the Big Four batting race despite a poor day at the plate in Monday's 10-inning contest.

Hussey, who collected one hit in four trips to the plate, is still sporting a healthy .455 average. Cheek is belting the ball at a .400 clip, despite going hitless in two times at bat.

State's Curt Ramsey is currently leading the pack with a .500 mark, not counting yesterday's tilt against Wake Forest. Jerry Frye, Duke infielder, follows the State pitcher with .476.

Ramsey is also leading in the pitching department, having won two games without a loss. Other undefeated pitchers in the league are DiLorenzo, Carolina, Strauch, Duke, and B. Edwards, State.

CAROLINA MAG

Fashioned by Allen and Magazine Managing Editor Jud Kinberg, current candidates for co-editorship of the new humor magazine, "No Butts . . ." surveys the catastrophe that can occur if the No Smoking edict is carried to an extreme on campus.

Following up the success of the Sam Beard pictorial feature in last month's Carolina Magazine, the coming issue will present two photo sections. The center-spread, "Hot Dogs 'n' Horses," follows an afternoon-evening picnic of two UNC couples. Photographed by Stan Croner and Gerald Conrad, it pictorializes a typical Carolina hot-dog roast, with the added attractions of horseback riding and a cool man-made lake.

The other pictorial section is devoted to outstanding shots from the recent Carolina Photographers Guild exhibition. Pictures range from U. S. scenes to a Buddha temple in Burma.

Topical features include Clyde Stallings' full-page cartoon lampooning the "typical candidate" in the coming election. Drawn in bitter ink by Satirist Stallings, the page takes a crack at all would-be winners in the May vote.

Marks Return

The new issue also marks the return of the popular two-page feature, Carolina Parade. Written in Time-style by Kinberg, it hits on current news and news-behind-the-news at Chapel Hill and the University. Fiction includes "The Austrian" by John Sink and "Conqueror's Bargain" by Wyatt Helsabeck.

Alan Smith, writer of last month's popular "You Were Never Born," has another of his humorous fiction pieces in this issue.

Pre-publication survey shows that this April issue is the fullest and most-diversified Carolina Magazine since the 1942 "Baby Esquire" issue which won top honors for UNC in that year's press competition.

Women's Glee Club Begins Short Entertainment Tour

By Doris Newburn

The Women's Glee club is planning to entertain North Carolinians and Marines again. Today and tomorrow it will be on tour to Camp Lejeune and Kinston, and on May 7 to Henderson. Under the direction of Paul Young, associate professor in the music department who has earned a wide reputation for his choral work, the group has been highly praised for its entertaining programs and musical excellence. Last year when the girls sang at Lejeune, the men rated them "tops" above Broadway professionals who had given shows the same week. At the time, the club also toured Cherry Point.

In addition to the tour, the group is planning a spring concert of folk songs, sacred music, opera and modern pieces. This concert will be presented on May 12 here in Chapel Hill. They also will present several selections on the May Day program.

House Rejects Moves to Halt Rent Controls

Local Governments Can Check Program

Washington, May 1—(UP)—The House has overwhelmingly turned down two moves to end all rent controls on June 30. The House by votes of 117 to 44 and 130 to 60 rejected two technically worded amendments by Representatives Smith of Ohio and Worley of Texas which would have ended the rent program.

Amendment

However the house tonight tentatively approved an amendment to the Republican-sponsored rent-control bill that would permit state, county, or city governments to end rent controls whenever they found that a housing emergency no longer exists.

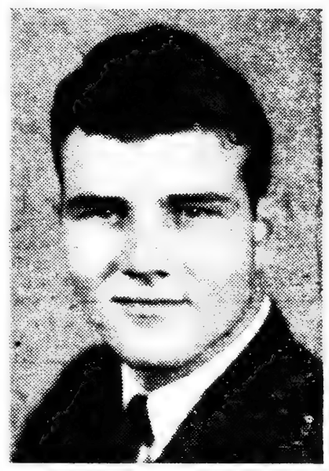
Lee M. Wiggins Will Address Golden Fleece



University Alumnus Gives Feature Talk

Lee M. Wiggins, Undersecretary of State and a former president of the American Bankers association, will speak Sunday evening at a banquet given by the Golden Fleece in the Carolina Inn, scheduled to follow the Fleece tapping ceremonies in Memorial hall.

Wiggins, a University alumnus and member of the Golden Fleece, is the third University graduate to hold the undersecretary's position out of the last four in office. A member of the class of 1913, his home is in Hartsville, South Carolina, where he is well-known as a banker, newspaper publisher and editor, and farmer.

Mr. Wiggins was a Phi Beta Kappa student here, and was tapped into the Golden Fleece in 1913. His son, Lee M. Wiggins, Jr., and daughter, Libba Wiggins, are both graduates of Carolina, the former in the class of 1941 and the latter, 1945.

The undersecretary succeeded the late O. Max Gardner in that position when Mr. Gardner was named U. S. amassador to England shortly before his death.

WALT TALLEY, junior from Bradenton, Fla., has been nominated by the University and Campus parties for junior representative to the Men's council. Talley has been serving in the legislature since last fall.

CHESTER ZUM BRUNNEN, rising senior from Salisbury has been nominated by the Campus party as men's dormitory representative to the student legislature. Before the war Brunnen attended The Citadel and Catawba college.

MARRIOTE STEWART, rising senior from Hendersonville, has been nominated by the Campus party for Vice-President of the student body. He is a member of the Phi Kappa Sigma fraternity.

In a statement of his platform, the PiKA said that he stands for a better organized cheering squad and cheerleaders at all University sports events.

Second Meeting Called For Candidates Today

There will be a meeting today at 2 p.m. in Gerrard hall for all candidates who missed the special meeting Wednesday night. All candidates who miss both meetings will be disqualified. All candidates must turn in an excuse for missing Wednesday night's meeting at this time.

Stealing a March....

Victory Village to Elect Mayor, Representatives

Victory Village will steal a march on the general campus elections when residents of the growing veterans community hold street meetings tonight for the purpose of electing representatives to a proposed village council. It is also planned to accept nominations for a mayor who will be elected in the near future at a general election.

Announcement of today's election followed a meeting Wednesday evening when a small group of interested residents led by Bill Bragaw of Southport convened to discuss possible methods of village organization. The group were encouraged to take such action by P. L. Burch who is at present managing the village.

Tom McDade, a member of the steering committee which is sponsoring tonight's election, said yesterday that there are many problems facing the infant community which can only be met through organization. Among these are the matter of playgrounds for the children and establishment of adequate fire protection. In addition McDade indicated that there have been numerous complaints against reckless driving in the area that constitutes a serious menace to the children.

Still in the process of contsruction the village now numbers over 200 families. Tonight's election will mark the first attempt that has been made to select officials for the fast-growing village.

Coeds Establish New Point System At Last Session

The Coed Senate in its last session Tuesday evening passed a bill establishing a point system devised to regulate the offices and extra-curricular activities of women students.

The Senate, acting in accord with coed opinion, passed the bill with the provision that the point system will not aply to those coeds elected to office this spring, but will go into effect after coed elections this fall.

The point system, which was worked out after consultation with leading figures in student government, restricts the number of points a woman student may hold to 14. The offices of president of the Woman's Interdormitory councils, the speakership of the Coed Senate, and the editorships, managing editorships, and the position of business manager for any of the major campus publications are each awarded 14 points. Other offices are awarded points in descending value.

The Coed Senate also passed a bill which changes the closing hours of coed dormitories from 1 o'clock on Friday and Saturday nights to midnight during the summer sessions. Dormitories will still close at 11 o'clock during the week. Graduate closing hours will be shortened one hour during the week, graduate students also being required to come in at 11 o'clock rather than their accustomed 12 o'clock. This legislation of the Senate was made at the request of infirmary officials who stressed that the schedule of summer school requires earlier closing hours as a health protection measure.

Kit Coleman, treasurer of the Woman's Athletic association, outlined to the Coed Senate a program of expansion for the WAA. Her request for $400 from the Senate to aid in the expansion program was left to be decided upon by the incoming 1947-48 Senate.

Slow Ticket Sale May Force Seniors To Cancel Banquet

Due to the slow response in the sale of tickets to the annual senior banquet for next Thursday, Senior Class President Dotson Palmer has announced that, unless 200 tickets are sold today, last day of the ticket sale, the banquet will be cancelled.

Tickets will be on sale at the Y from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. today. The banquet will be held Thursday night in the Carolina inn. Dr. Frank Graham and Chancellor Robert House will be present, and James Street, noted author and lecturer, will be guest speaker. Tickets are $2.00 apiece.

The senior banquet is one of the events scheduled on the gala three-day senior week program next Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday.

"It will give all of our graduating seniors their last chance to get together," said Palmer, "but the Inn must be notified as to how many guests to expect and if we do not sell at least 200 tickets today, we will have no alternative but to cancel the banquet."

GROUP PRACTICES

Group practices for the Valkyrie sing will take place from two until five o'clock today in Memorial hall. Again on Saturday, practice will be held from 10 o'clock until 12:30 noon.

AVC Sponsors Move to Help In Emergency

University Officials Reacting Favorably

By Ben Rouzie

A proposal for temporary credit on meal tickets at Lenoir hall until GI subsistence checks arrive was advanced yesterday by the American Veterans committee and taken under consideration by University officials.

Simultaneously, AVC began negotiating for loans to its student members from the Orange County Credit union, in which the chapter has deposited funds.

The AVC meal-ticket plan, to be a strictly temporary measure, would provide meal tickets to veterans only. Tickets now in use at Lenoir would be issued on identification and charged to students' accounts in the University Accounting office.

Favorable

The plan was reported receiving favorable consideration by University officials last night. Full details will be released when and if the plan is approved.

L. H. Gooch, manager of Lenoir hall, said yetserday that the plan seems feasible and "probably will offer no problems that can't be handled by the available staff." Other officials emphasized that "the University will see to it that no veterans go hungry" during the current emergency.

F. Carlisle Shepard, veterans' adviser, announced that any veteran faced by real hardship should consult him in his office on the second floor of South building.

Student Union Bingo To Be Held Today

The free bingo party at Graham Memorial this evening from 8:30 until 11 in the main lounge will not feature movies, as announced yesterday. The party will be held, however, with valuable and practical prizes being awarded game winners.

Bob Coulter, producer of the two movies mentioned yesterday, announced that he will start work with Martha Rice, GM director, on a "Premiere Night" for two other Carolina-made movies as well as the two originally scheduled for the bingo party. The showing will be held at an early date to be announced soon.

"Glory That Was Greece"

Hatch Address to Be First Since Return from Europe

In his first public address since returning from the Mediterranean area, Senator Carl A. Hatch will give a first-hand account next Thursday, to the campus on his recent visit to Greece and Turkey. Hatch's visit to the University is sponsored by the International Relations club.

Hatch, who was a member on the congressional delegation to the Intra-Parlimentary Union conference in Cairo, stated upon his arrival in this country that his trip had strongly confirmed his "previous conviction that the (Greek-Turkey) loan is an absolute necessity." He feels that Greece and Turkey rely on the United States as the only nation that could help assure their freedom.

Hatch has shown leadership in moulding our bi-partisan foreign policy. He has been characterized as a "cautious New Dealer" and "an ardent internationalist".

In 1943 Hatch joined with Republican Senators Joseph Bell and Harold Burton and fellow Democrat Senator Lister Hill to introduce what is popularly known as the B2H2 resolution. This called for a permanent world organization with power to protect member nations by means of an international armed force. This bill is generally considered as instrumental in the establishment of the United Nations.

Esky for the Coeds

Humor Mag Candidates Plan To Publish Esquire Takeoff

"Esky will be on campus," stated humor-mag co-editorship candidates Eddie Allen and Jud Kinberg yesterday.

The two DTH-Carolina Magazine writers, who are running for the newly-created editorship, explained that they have contacted Esquire magazine representatives and that the national publication has already tentatively agreed to aid them in publishing a take-off on Esquire. This special issue would be the first humor magazine of the year if the two men are elected.

Although full details must await a trip to New York City, Allen and Kinberg plan to use plates and cartoons from Esquire to give the burlesque issue the closest possible make-up resemblance to the national publication. "Of course, the writing and most illustrations would be by campus authors and artists, but we feel that the idea and counsel from Esquire men will make certain an outstanding humor issue to start off the magazine and the year," stated the co-editorship candidates.

A number of universities, notably Yale with its New York Daily News takeoff, have adopted this technique recently with great success. Use of the Esquire motif for the one issue of the UNC magazine would correlate closely with campus interests, since the national publication places strong emphasis on collegiate topics.

Completion of all details would take many days work with the Esquire staff and the two candidates plan to spend a number of weeks in New York this summer to do this. The cover, many inside pages and possibly even type would closely resemble Esquire magazine. Takeoffs would include Esky's "On The Town," clothes section, cartoon pages and leggy illustrations.

All for Seniors

There comes a time in the life of every college senior when he must doff his cap and gown and pass forever from the scene of his higher education in the role of a student.

Graduation day is always tinged with varying amounts of sadness, regardless whether or not a person be a sentimentalist or a cold-hearted realist. Even the most ardent critics of this University finally find themselves a little reluctant when the time comes for them to graduate.

And even the most unsentimental members of the senior class willingly admit they have developed many close friendships at Carolina which they hope will last into the future. This June will see the end of these friendships on a daily basis, even though they continue everlasting after graduation by means of correspondence and visits.

All of which is good reason for every senior to take advantage of senior week next week to get together with and meet his or her classmates in their final big "fling" before graduation. Under the guidance of the senior class executive committee, a big senior week program full of fun and friendship has been planned.

Wednesday will be "Barefoot Day" and will feature the "saddle shoe stomp" in the evening—an evening of music and informal dancing in the Y court. Even the YMCA fountain will be open to provide drinks for the dancers.

Thursday night will be the occasion for the annual senior class banquet in the Carolina Inn. This will give the seniors their final chance to assemble socially before graduation. Tickets are now on sale and should be purchased before it is too late.

Friday night will feature the junior-senior semi-formal dance with music by the Duke Ambassadors. Membership cards for the dance are also on sale daily in the Y.

Three days of next week will be set aside for the benefit of graduating seniors. These seniors will have their last chance to meet and know one another better before entering the much-talked-about outside world. We urge all of them to take advantage of the opportunity offered by next week's special senior week program. It will be something to remember in years to come.

Campus Crime

It seems a shame that, what with so many so-called mature politicians and their mature followers running for campus offices, they seem intent on carrying on the immature acts of tearing down campaign posters.

It is becoming increasingly difficult to keep a poster up for any length of time. Someone is always tearing one down to make room for another. We are not that crowded for public space on this campus.

Besides, such vandalism is an offense against the campus code and we urge anyone seeing such action to report the offender. While it may seem like a joke to many, this vandalism is a campus crime. As such, it should be punished.

Another Feather

Through the passage of time as the Daily Tar Heel has come down through the years it has receivevd numerous awards and prizes for service and high standards that have justified its high standing among collegiate dailies throughout our nation.

Therefore, it gave us great pleasure to see that the Bureau of Naval Personnel has awarded a certificate of achievement to the Tar Heel for outstanding service to naval personnel during the second world war.

Credit for receiving the award is due the small group of men and women who staffed this newspaper through the crucial war period when it went from a daily to a weekly publication. Their work and honest efforts have earned for the DTH another feather in its publications' cap. We hope that in years to come, this newspaper plumage may continue to grow.

Middle Road, Unity Called Way to Peace

By William Patterson
International Relation's Club Member

The apparently victorious conclusion of the late war, coupled with the advent of Atomic Energy, has brought the world into a position which is without parallel in the recorded history of man.

In the near future it may be possible for the first time for realists to join with idealists in bringing to fruition the ever-budding promise of the democratic ideal. Once the Russian problem is solved, there will be no further external barrier to our goal of making real justice appear where we now have but relative justice.

The ideals of the French Revolution were thwarted by the combined reaction of a fearful, hostile world. The ideals of Wilson died under the onslaughts of a fearful, selfish world and an unthinking homeland. The ideals of Jefferson were forced into less desirable patterns under the pressure of our democracy-fearing, home-grown reactionaries.

The forces of Jeffersonian-type liberalism in America are now too great to be overwhelmed by our native reactionaries, provided we liberals do not allow ourselves to remain divided and therefore vulnerable to the divide-and-conquer tactics of our neo-fascists and ultra conservatives.

A step in the direction of liberal unity has been taken on this campus for example with the formation of a local chapter of Americans for Democratic Action.

We must prepare now for the fast approaching time when the only significant opposition to real democracy will be found right in this country. We should now support the enactment of laws which tend to promote equality of opportunity for all. We should fight the enactment of laws tending to restrict or cripple the rights of man.

To take these stands will be, at times, difficult, for to be effective we must fight not only for those things we believe in, but at the same time against the influence of those who align themselves beside us not to promote democracy but to exploit the contradictions of democracy to the benefit of a foreign Power.

As long as this country has its Rankins, Bilbos, Talmadges and McKellars, duly elected to high office by their own approving people, it will take courage to stand up and be counted as proponents of the same things our Russophiles cry for, and as opponents of the same abuses our quasi-quislings loudly claim to oppose.

We've got to march down the middle, swinging alike at reaction and communism, toward the building of a world in which our part will amount to something more than lip-service to the ideal of the brotherhood of man.

No Scenery, No Nothing

Danzigerite Gets Lowdown On Drama-- Modern Version

By Tookie Hodgson

One bright, sunny day last week, I had a peculiar urge to acquaint myself with what is known to the denisons of Danziger's, as the "Drama." Being a man of impulse, I immediately set out towards the local patisserie in the hope of encountering some of the local thespians, and acquainting myself with their views on "ars gratia artis."

When I arrived at Pappa Danziger's Emporium, which is famed far and wide for its plebian food at patrician prices, I accounted myself fortunate to find a seat at the table of the Honorable Histrionicus O'Leary, the noted actor and Playmaker extraordinaire.

The Hon. Histrionicus was, at the time, engaged in an animated conversation with Petunia Fidelio, the eminent female dramatist, and H. Laughingham Snode, one of the numerous literary editors of the Carolina Mag.

Mr. O'Leary spoke first. "Yes, my friends, the drama at Chapel Hill is at a low ebb. Why, last night, when we presented "Kumquattugooga," an Asiatic folk-play, with the dialogue in the original Mongolian, only seven people showed up! To add insult to injury, five of the seven were taxi drivers out looking for Pastor Jones, while the other two were R. Haskell Hamilton and his secretary! I'll teil you here and now, something must be done."

Histrionicus' announcement shocked his friends. Mr. Snode's monocle fell from his eye, while Miss Fidelio, all aflutter, bit her cigarette holder in two. Finally H. Laughinghpuse Snode recovered himself sufficiently to speak.

"The trouble, my dear Histrionicus," quoth he, "is that your plays are much too obvious. Why hell, EVERYBODY can understand what you're trying to put across. Now what WE do down at the Carolina Mag—"

But Mr. Snode's expose of artistic literary endeavor was abruptly cut off as his charming companion, the lovely Petunia, began to speak HER mind.

"Your stuff lacks guts, Histrionicus" began Miss Fidelio. "You got to be tough on the stage. Take my plays for instance. I include at least one throat-cutting per scene. Sometimes, I hang my heroes, sometimes I has them boiled in oil. Right now, I'm working on a little cremation scene, that's—"

At this point, Mr. Snode took refuge on a nearby chandelier. Everybody thought he looked like an African Edgar Allan Poe, when they saw him perched quiveringly on the swaying chandelier. It was apparent that Mr. Snode's aesthetic soul had been done a grave injury.

"Ah, Petunia!" exclaimed Hon. Histrionicus. "Another weakling gone astray. It reminds me of the time that I was successfully portraying an elm tree in Eugene O'Neill's play, 'Desire Under the Elms.' Right after the second act some drunk tried to chop me down with an axe, but I held staunch even after I had lost my left leg. As I always have said, 'One must give his all to the theater'."

"The theater!" echoed the Danziger habitues raising their frothy glasses of Hot Viennese and downing same.

"That gives me a great idea," yelped Petuna. "I will write a play having NO dialogue, NO scenery, NO stagelighting, and NO actors."

"Will the audience like such a drama, Miss Fidelia?" quavered H. Laughingham Snode from his chandelier.

"Fool," replied Petunia, "there will be NO audience!"

"What, pray, will be the name of this highly effective epic drama?" asked Hon. Histrionicus, a demitasse poised delicately before his lips.

"The Spirit of the Theatre," majestically responded Petunia.

"The theatre," echoed the Danzigerites, downing their Hot Vienneses like the men they were.

"The theatre," murmured Mr. Snode, adjusting his monocle.

"The theatre," I cried, heading for the Pick, where Roy Rogers was currently appearing in "Six-Gun Saga."

UNC Coed Takes Part In N. Y. Discussions

The Unversity of North Carolina's Sara Tillett served as student delegate to a College Forum on Soviet-American relations at the Hotel Commodore in New York City last week.

Delegates were addressed at the forum by some of the country's leading authorities on international relations and by internationally known journalists and foreign correspondents. They themselves participated in group discussions of the issues involved.

Allow me also to take this opportunity to express my profound gratitude to those who honored me with such a position and who worked so hard in my behalf in preparation for the spring elections. Such shall always be remembered with a true feeling of gratefulness.

Although I will be away until fall, I shall watch the prograss of the elections and consequently Student government, with much interest. To those who are sincere in their efforts to pick the best men for every office may I present the names and records of two men who can lead your government with experienced and capable hands—Tom Eller and Charlie Long.

About Spirit

Dear Sir:

Finishing my last lab period at approximately twilight, I hustled to my room to prepare for the evening. It took me no great time, my thirst drive naturally being the strongest, to dress and be up town. After paying my respects to Carl Marx at his Chateau, I sauntered into Jeff's, where the elite and the baseball team gather. It was there that I met Dan, the Dog. Dan, accompanied by a French poodle from the Canine Corps, was in a very dejected mood as he mustered a bottle of "Arf and Arf." Apologising for an abrupt intrusion, I asked the wise old dog the reason for his vapour.

"John," he said, "I have been a part of Carolina for almost a decade. I have seen the years and the students come and go, and I have worked hard to keep U.N.C. foremost in the nation. But John, it has been in vain. You see, there is no more school spirit at Carolina. Literally, it has gone to the dogs, and we don't want it. John, it's the end. I'm through. I have a very good offer from the Education Department at Duke, and I have decided to take it."

Seeing that Dan was in earnest, I quickly put forth this question.

"Dan, isn't there some way we can arouse the school spirit that Carolina is famous for?"

"There is only one way, and that is by electing Grey Adams as head cheerleader. I've known the lad for years, and he has got the stuff it takes. With his showmanship, talent constitution, and truthfulness, he would make every student proud of the White and Blue. He is our only hope. Our only hope."

With that, Dan broke down completely, and I left to avert embarrassment. Grey Adams for head cheerleader? It sounded pretty good. I felt a lot better for there was still hope for Carolina. Grey Adams for head cheerleader. I saw it. Do you?

Sigma Chi, Med School Capture Track Honors; Softball Today

Phi Gams, Aycock Runners-Up In Fraternity, Dorm Divisions

Rockwell, Flamish, Halsey, B. Walker, Nisbet Star In Huge Intramural Classic

By Gil McLeod

The Med School and Sigma Chi of the respective dormitory and fraternity divisions overwhelmed all opposition in the mural track meet held yesterday afternoon on Fetzer field to walk away with team honors. Med School amassed a total of 102 points, and Sigma Chi finished going away in the fraternity division with 72½ points.

In the runner-up spot in the fraternity division was Phi Gam, with 41½ points, and in the dormitory bracket it was Aycock, with a total of 23.

The Med School runners met little competition in gathering in six first places and a like number in each of the second and third place slots.

Sigma Chi got off to a slower start, but they put on a burst of speed in the relays and field events to win going away. They copped first place honors in five of the 13 events, came in second in the same number, and finished third in four.

In the meet, which was run off smoothly through the efforts of Assistant Mural Director P. A. Lee and meet clerk Morty Schaap, two fraternity records were broken and one mural record was equalled. Bert Nisbet, who was Phi Gam's one-man marathon, tied his brother's old 120-yard low hurdle mural record of 14.2 seconds. In the semi-finals yesterday, Nisbet broke the record by crossing the line in 14 seconds flat. Bill Halsey broke the fraternity record in the three-fourth-mile run with a time of 3:33.6. The old record was 3:35.4. Richard McDonald, Sigma Chi, broke the discus throw record of 120 with a toss of 123 feet, five inches.

The complete results:

Netters Clinch 18th Win By Topping Wesleyan, 8-1

(Special to Daily Tar Heel)

Middletown, Conn., May 1.—The University of North Carolina tennis team, paced by the nation's No. 16 ranking amateur, Vic Seixas, easily downed the Wesleyan college netters 8-1 in chilling weather here this afternoon.

For the Tar Heels from down South, it was their 18th consecutive triumph this season as against no defeats, and tomorrow they move to New Haven for their third match this year with the powerful Yale aggregation. The Tar Heels stopped Yale in two straight matches in Chapel Hill, N. C., at the outset of the current campaign.

At New Haven tomorrow, Carolina's Seixas will be up against Roller Ray, New England inter-collegiate champion who defeated the Tar Heel from Philadelphia in their opening match in North Carolina. This match will be the feature attraction as the Yale netters attempt to redeem themselves for the earlier defeats.

The visiting Carolina team dropped only one match, that being the No. 3 doubles contest. The Tar Heel aces, Seixas and Clark Taylor, had little difficulty in sweeping their respective No. 1 and No. 2 matches. The final two singles matches were played indoors.

The Results:

Singles—Seixas (C) over Salann, 6-2, 6-4; Taylor over Baxter, 6-2, 6-1; Gruner over Buschmann, 6-4, 6-2; Nicholson over Bruster, 6-2, 6-0; Rice over Brownlow, 8-6, 7-5; Kenfield over Cowan, 6-4, 3-6, 6-2.

Doubles—Seixas and Taylor over Salann and Baxter, 6-3, 6-4; Nicholson and Skakle over Bruster and Brownlow, 6-3, 6-4; Buschmann and Cowan (W) over Rice and Daniels, 6-4, 6-8, 7-5.

JV Baseballers Face Marines Here Today

Carolina's jayvee baseball nine will swing into action against the Marines of Cherry Point this afternon at four o'clock on Emerson Field.

Coach Henry House will call upon the mound talents of Ray Blair for the contest with George Davis handling the duties behind the plate. The rest of the Tar Heel starters include Greg Hobbs at first, Doe Crawford at second, Walt Kirk at short, and Jack Gregory at third.

In the outfield there is still some doubt just who will get the nod, but the starters will most probably be drawn from a quartet composed of Ott Evans, Lel Austin, Jerry Alsen and Mutt Thrift.

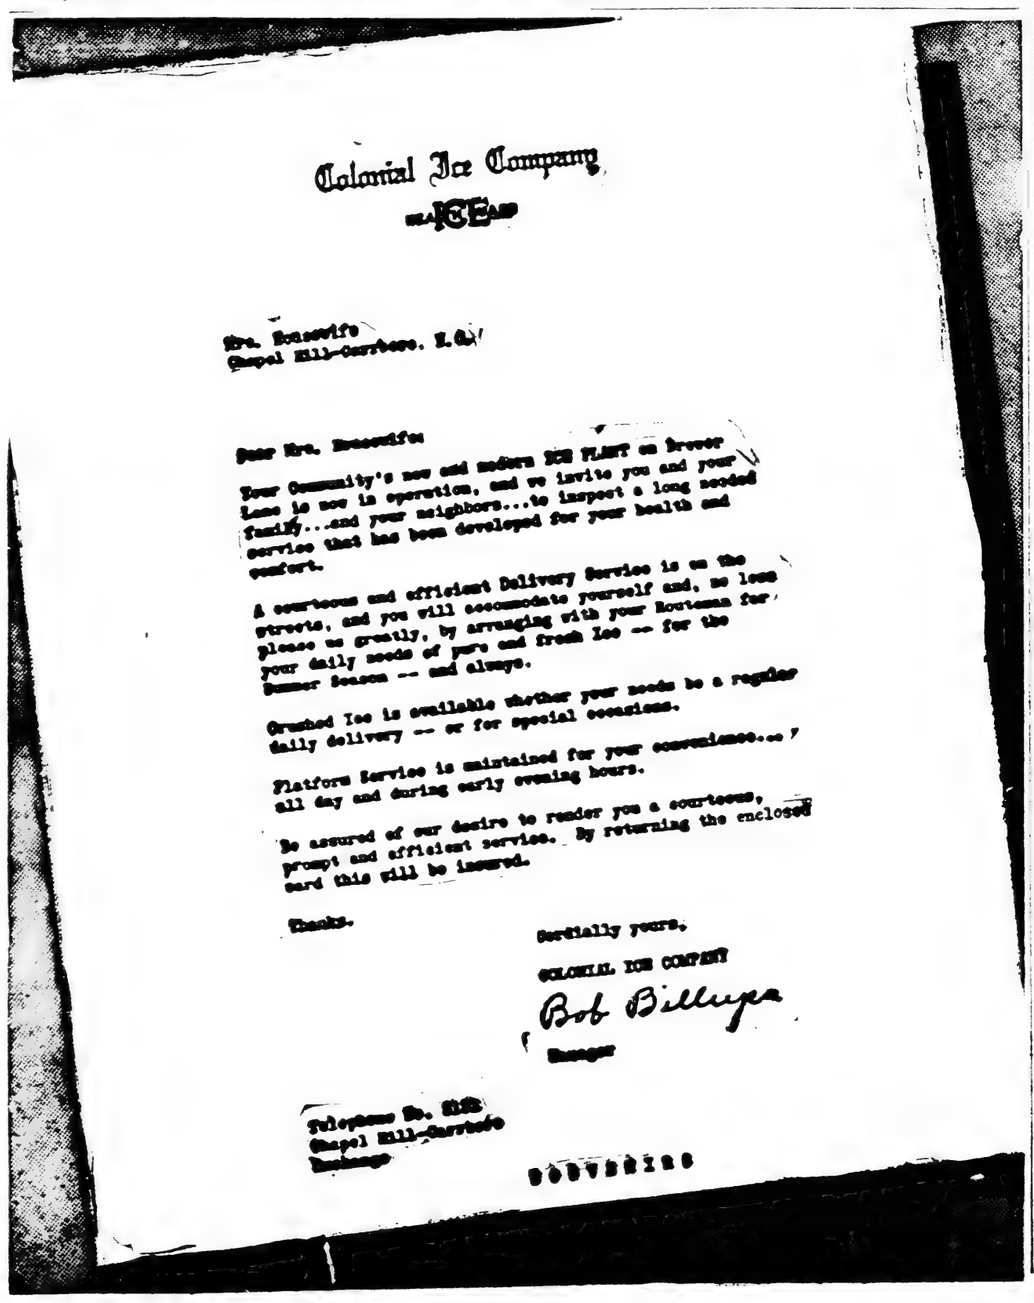
Pi Phi Cops Second In Coed Swim Meet

By Barbara Brinson

Alpha Gamma Delta sorority swam off with top honors in the women's intramural swimming meet held this week under the sponsorship of the Splash club and took over possession of the swimming plaque held by Pi Beta Phi since 1943, the last year of competition.

The winners scored a total of 28 points to eke out a narrow victory over Archer House, with 26 pionts, and Pi Phi, which placed third with 25. Fourth and fifth places went to Chi Omega and Alpha Delta Pi, respectively.

During the intermission, the club presented several tank formations. Barbara Biggers and Jean Fisher swam in tango time, Dot Henderson, Catherine Rankin, Sara Montague, Rachel Woodley, Kitty Ryan, K. D. Durham, Jean Fisher and Elva Warner, performed in waltz swimming, and the entire club demonstrated tandem swimming.



Individual Races

In the individual races, Nancy Carter of Archer captured the 25-yard free style, Prince Nufer of Kenan took first-place honors in the 25-yard backstroke and Jean Darrow of Alpha Gam scored a double triumph by copping firsts in the 25-yard breaststroke and 50-yard free style.

In the 60-yard medley relay, Archer, with Jean Killey, Irene Williams and Camilla Ray, registered a close win over the rest of the field. K. D. Durham of Chi Omega placed first in the diving competition.

The final event of the program, team form swimming, was won by Pi Phi.

Women's and children's wear manufacturing...

AN ILLUSTRATION OF INDUSTRIAL MATURITY

For 14 years there has been no major strike in the women's and children's apparel industries . . . and only one in the past 21 years.

In the first post-war year, while American industry in general was losing 120 million man-days of work as a result of labor-capital disputes, the women's wear trades were again setting an inspiring example of continuity of operation.

The history of employer-worker relationship in these industries is a story of consistent progress. The freedom from strife affords them the necessary opportunity for concentrating their attention and effort upon product improvement—enhanced beauty of design and perfected skill of craftsmanship.

This attainment of industrial maturity places the women's and children's wear industry in the vanguard of American progress.

This is the second in a series of interpretations of the general economic highlights of the women's and children's wear industry of possible interest in the choice of a field of endeavor. Series sponsored by Women's Wear Daily, a Fairchild Publication, 8 East 13th Street, New York 3, N. Y.

It is estimated that it cost about 1.7 cents a mile to operate a motor car on paved roads.

Legal Fraternity Initiates Fifteen New Law Students

The Battle Senate of Delta Theta Phi, one of the foremost legal fraternities of the country, was reactivated here recently with the initiation of 15 first year law students.

Paul O'Bryan, capitol district chancellor, and Jim Hunt of White Senate at Georgetown University came from Washington, D. C., to perform the initiation ceremonies in the Carolina inn with Dean R. H. Wettach of the University law school, former member of the Gibson Senate at the University of Pittsburgh.

After starting here in 1924, the Battle Senate discontinued its charter during the 1930 years of the depression. The new Senate is already well organized under the following officers: Preston White, dean; Dave Henderson, vice-dean; George McDermott, clerk of the rolls; William Smith, clerk of the exchequer; E. O. Brogden, master of the ritual; Robert 'Altamose, bailiff; and John W. Campbell, tribune.

Others initiated Monday night and entertained at a dinner party in the Inn dining room were Thomas Adams, Junius B. Lee, C. A. York, William Snow, Charles Gordon, Nick Long, Edward Coppola, and J. C. Barefoot.

How a city's voice was restored!

Early on December 14, 1946, flames gutted the Central Office at River Grove, Illinois. Telephone service for 10,000 families ceased to exist.

Even as the fire burned, restoration work was begun. Emergency telephone headquarters was set up. Mobile equipment arrived to handle calls of first importance.

Telephone men from distant points came to aid the local forces. Bell System standardization proved itself again for all men were able to use the same methods, the same tools, the same Western Electric equipment. From Western Electric plants hundreds of miles away the needed supplies—the right kinds and amounts—were started toward River Grove.

In a matter of just 11 days . . . a record accomplishment . . . two Quonset huts were erected, new switchboards installed, splices and connections made. River Grove's communications system was restored.

Planning well in advance for both emergencies and normal growth, is a task of telephone management. The many and varied problems presented offer a stimulating challenge—promise adventure and opportunity—to men who choose telephony as a career.

Cherry Decrees Own Policies On Phone Issue

Strikers Turn Down Tel and Tel Proposal

Raleigh, May 2—(UP)— Governor Cherry has stepped into the telephone strike. He says that if striking telephone workers have not settled their dispute by Monday morning, he will ask Southern Bell to hire new operators. Cherry is head of the Southern Governors' conference. However, he made this request only as the governor of North Carolina.

National Scene

Meanwhile, the American Telephone and Telegraph company has made its first wage offer to striking phone workers—an offer the union immediately turned down. Federal mediators report that the rejected raise offer ranged from two to four dollars a week.

Senate Votes to Stop Unfair Union Methods

Washington, May 2—(UP)— The Senate has begun toughening its already strict labor bill by passing the first of four more restrictive amendments. The proposal passed by the upper chamber would make it an unfair labor practice for a union to "restrain or coerce" workers in the choice of union representatives. The amendment is aimed at stopping threats and violence in union organizing drives.

Public Hearings Ended On Income-Tax Policy

Capitol Hill, May 2—(UP)— The Senate Finance committee has wound up its public hearings on income-tax proposals and is ready to begin the job of writing a tax bill. Committee Chairman Millikin of Ohio predicts that the committee will report a measure essentially the same as the one already passed by the House, which provides for income-tax cuts of from 20 to 30 per cent.

US and Russia Agree To Hear Jews' Claims

New York, May 2—(UP)— The United States and Russia have agreed on a plan to let the Jews tell their side of the Palestine story during the current emergency session. Great Britain says it also will reverse itself and support the idea "if it is constitutional."

Marshall to Negotiate War Debts with China

Washington, May 2—(UP)— Secretary of State Marshall announces that the United States will open negotiations with China soon to settle outstanding war accounts.

Disabled Veterans Get Subsistence Increase

Capitol Hill, May 2—(UP)— A House Veteran sub-committee has approved a bill to raise subsistence payments to some 331,000 disabled veterans taking on-the-job training. The increases would be from 10 to 0 dollars.

Pre-Election Dance To Be Held Monday

The annual Pre-Elections Prom will be held on Monday night in the Y Court, Graham Memorial director Martha Rice announced today. Since the dance must end at 10:30 sharp, starting time has been set at 8 o'clock. It will be informal.

Dewey Dorsett, president of the student body, will be on hand to introduce candidates for campus offices to be voted upon on Tuesday.

Ned Reap and his Graham Memorial "Dream Serenaders" will provide music for the dance. In case of rain the prom will be held in the main lounge of Graham Memorial.

Sammy Fletcher and his 18 Duke Ambassadors will provide the music for the semi-formal junior-senior dance Friday night. Fletcher, shown above, is featured on the drums and vocals besides doing most of the arranging for one of the South's outstanding college dance bands. Male vocalist Clarence Smith of Louisville, Ky., and vocalist Sally Waddell of Greensboro will also be featured. Memberships to the junior-senior dance are being sold daily in the Y and by class agents about the campus for $1.50.

Morehead Planetarium Work May Begin Before End Of Term

Fleece Tapping Set Sunday; Sing Will Follow Ceremonies

Student's Campus Honorary Organizations Stage Traditional Events at 7:45, 8:30

Two annual events of great campus significance will occur tomorrow evening in Memorial hall. At 7:45 the Golden Fleece, highest men's honorary organization on campus, will hold a tapping ceremony as its only public meeting of the year. At 8:30 the Valkyrie Sing will show University fraternity, sorority, and dormitory men and women in vocal competition for two loving cups.

The Fleece will keep the name and number of men to be tapped secret until the ceremony tomorrow. Membership in this organization is based upon intellectual and moral character, relentless fidelity to ideals, scholarship, and diligence. The order sets no specific number upon itself but selects its initiates according to the number of men on campus who qualify for membership. Last year nine men gained admission.

Work Undercover

Secrecy is the policy of the Fleece with all its regular meetings, activities, and services witheld from the public along with the names of its officers. The Fleece does not sponsor any action as an organization, however, its members, working individually towards a common goal, instigate many tasks for the University without open recognition.

The doors will be locked promptly at 7:45 because of the solemnity and impressiveness of the tapping ceremony. It is advisable that those attending the evening's entertainment be in their seats before the ceremonies begin.

Outstanding Coeds

The Valkyries, on the other hand, are a group of outstanding campus women not exceeding two per cent of the coed enrollment, who encourage University advancement publicly with such presentations as their traditional sing. Each of the singing acts representing different campus factions will be judged tomorrow for harmony, stage presence, and originality by three faculty members. Last year's winner were Alpha Gamma Delta and Phi Gamma Delta.

The contesting groups will be restricted to six minute performances, including active participation by at least eight singers. Pantomine without dancing or dialogue will be permissible with a maximum of five dollars spent on costumes and hand props.

Institutes Designed To Help Businessmen Planned For Summer

Ten businessmen's institute will be conducted here from June 16 to August 29, it was announced yesterday by Dean Dudley D. Carroll, of the University school of commerce.

To be one of the most extensive adult education programs ever attempted in the South, the plan will set up these institutions with an eye toward actual case problems dealing with small business enterprise, labor law, industrial relations, personnel administration, executive training, bank management and trade association management.

All of these institutes will be held on the campus, where dormitories, class rooms, library and laboratory resources have already been assigned to the program.

"No formal education requirments are prerequisite to admission."

Bids on Edifice To Be Submitted Early in June

John Motley Morehead, donor of the Morehead Planetarium to be erected on campus, hopes to see excavation of the building already begun when he attends the commencement exercises here this June. Plans for the planetarium are out to contractors now and bids will be open around the middle of the month and will be submitted to Morehead.

The Board of Trustees passed on the proposed gift at a meeting of the board February 1946. The gift was to include the Genevieve B. Morehead gallery and art collection and a memorial to Morehead's wife. $1,000,000 was the estimated cost of the building and the planetarium instruments at that time; however, due to the increase in prices and construction costs the present estimate of the project is nearer $2,000,000.

Law Does Not Apply

State authorities have nothing to to with the construction and therefore the appropriations law enacted by the last legislature authorizing a delay in construction of buildings until lower prices does not affect the construction.

It may not be possible to open the Planetarium as soon as the building is completed, as the rare Zeiss Planetarium instrument, which costs $75,000 alone, is built in Germany, and it is difficult to have one built at the present time.

Negotiations have already been initiated through the government and private channels and the trustees of the Foundation are making every effort to secure the instrument and open the Planetarium to the public at the earliest possible date.

Located Near Alumni

The preliminary plans for the Morehead building, which will be located between Graham Memorial and Alumni building, have already been drawn up by Eggers and Higgins, of New York, who have designed some of the most famous public edifices in this country and Europe. Among these are Constitution hall, the Jefferson Memorial, and the National Gallery, and the National Archives in Washington, the Frick Art Museum and Library in New York, the U. S. Government Offices in London, and the addition to the British Museum and Tate Gallery.

May Queen Will Be Revealed In Pageant Here Tomorrow

The hour is approaching—the final moment is almost here. "Who will be Queen of the May" will be answered tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Forest theatre.

This year's May day will be quite a contrast as compared with last years, when Carolina students thrilled to the characters of Bugs Bunny, Snow White, and Little Red Riding Hood. Two gala days of celebration were held with music furnished by Claude Thornhill. This year, however, things on the May day slate are much different, in that the festivities will last only one day.

The event will be sponsored by the Pan-hellenic council, the CICA, the DA department, Chi Omega, the Phi Literary society, Nancy Brock's modern dance group, and Henrietta Cooper, pageant director.

The Queen along with her lovely attendants will be crowned by Chancellor Robert B. House at the ceremonies in Forrest theatre. They were all selected by a general coed balloting several weeks ago and will remain a secret until tomorrow afternoon.

One of the main hits tomorrow will be the dances presented by Nancy Brock's modern dance group. The following dances will be presented: Siamese dance, Dotty Donelson, soloist, Anne Garreaa, Bill Hooks, Frances and Dick Johnson. Arabian dance, Anne Garrett, soloist, Bill Hooks, Byrd Cornwell, Venitah Sanders, Helen Xanthos, and Mae Belle Enman. Highland Fling, Janet Green, soloist, Venitah Sanders, and Byrd Cornwell. Spanish dance, Anne Dubs, soloist, Bill Hooks and Dick Johnson. Russian dance by Mae Belle Enman, and a Russian dance by Frances Johnson. Nancy Brock is director of the Modern Dance group.

Words Are Cheap

We feel that some of the recent speeches made by some of the candidates for student government posts on this campus in the forthcoming election are rather inane in respect to campus publications.

Numerous candidates, who are not candidates for DTH editor, have come out with the comment that they are going to have more complete coverage of campus news. Which is all well and good, except that it is impossible as the Daily Tar Heel now exists. And some of these same candidates frown upon giving the DTH any added money with which to enlarge.

We honestly feel that this newspaper is giving the most adequate campus coverage of news as is possible under the present set-up. We are also sure that the next editor of the DTH will give excellent coverage to campus news, but even so it will not be more complete than as it now exists, because the Daily Tar Heel is too small to serve an ever-growing campus population without enlarging itself.

Prior to the war, with a student body of about 2500-3000, the Daily Tar Heel furnished pretty adequate campus coverage, although complaints could be heard then, too. Now the paper's circulation is at the 6,500 mark. Next year rumors have Carolina's enrollment at anywhere from 9,000 up.

The only solution is increased funds for an enlarged student newspaper. And the future leaders of the student body who are announcing their intention to have more complete campus coverage by the DTH are talking through the hats they have recently thrown into the political ring on a subject about which they are hardly qualified to talk.

And we feel sure that the first three men who would admit the increased problem faced bythe DTH because of increased enrollment and more campus news are the three candidats for Daily Tar Heel editor.

Lesson in Boredom

A lesson should have been learned at Thursday night's political mass meeting, a lesson that should eliminate in the future such pointless, boring sessions as that which took place in Memorial hall the other evening.

The mass meeting idea is a good one—for the purpose of introducing the candidates to the student body and allowing the principal candidates to make short speeches.

But Thursday night saw the candidates make lengthy long-winded speeches that, regardless of their value and content, bored and annoyed the audience. In fact, only six candidates got a chance to speak in a meeting that lasted for an hour and a half.

If the speeches had been limited to but a few minutes, the audience would have been more receptive, more speeches could have been made, and more would have been accomplished.

And it seems wrong to us to make attendance at such a meeting compulsory for all coeds, who have just as much, or little, voting sense as the majority of men students. Compulsory attendance for the coeds is not in keeping with the principles of campus government.

Meetings like the one Thursday do more to kill interest in campus politics than to foster it. In the future let's make what is a basically good idea work by strictly limiting the speeches.

AVC Deserves Credit

An active, progressive organization since its inception, the American Veterans Committee rang the bell again with its proposal to give all veterans temporary credit on meal tickets at Lenoir hall while the no-subsistence emergency lasted.

Although the emergency has been alleviated and the plan will not be necessary, it still must stand as an example of quick and considerate action by the AVC to help struggling veterans.

The plan would have given many veterans a chance to bounce off the ropes and continue to exist even without their checks. The local AVC chapter is to be congratulated for its action in this matter.

School of Public Health Will Train Many Workers

By Harold F. Elkin

Carolina's School of Public Health will train many of the new workers other than physicians. Technical and scientific personnel will also be needed to staff the proposed County Health Centers. In many of these Rural Centers, Public Health offices will serve under the same roof as the Doctor's offices.

Besides the medically trained Health Officer, many of the following will be needed: Medical administrators of specialized Health Activities (such as school physicians); Public Health Nurses whose work carries them into homes, schools, clinics and a variety of agencies concerned with health. School and Industrial Nurses will be needed and trained. Public Health and Sanitary Engineers, who are concerned with such phases of environment as protection of water supplies, food and milk, disposal of wastes, housing, etc., are being required in even greater quantity than ever before. Sanitarians, employed by state, county, and city health departments to carry out inspection duties in the field of environmental sanitation, Public Health Laboratory workers in the fields of Chemistry, Biology, and Medicine, and Industrial Hygienists who are concerned with the health of the industrial population are all being trained in increasing force. Public Health Statisticians, Nutritionists, Health Educators, and Public Health Dentists are among other workers who are keenly desired.

Many of these people are being trained by our Public Health School, but the impetus provided by the expansion of health facilities in North Carolina will call for an even greater number of well-schooled personnel. Located in the Ground and Fourth Floors of the Medical Building and supplemented by two adjoining structures and the unit behind Phillips Hall, the School of Public Health now consists of the following departments: Sanitary Engineering, Parisitology, Health Education, Nursing, Public Health training for physicians, and the Reynolds Research Laboratory. In addition, two new Departments of Public Health Nutrition and Public Health Statistics are being organized. The School will be further strengthened in September by the arrival of the new Dean, Dr. McGavran, current head of the Department of Preventive Medicine and Public Health at the University of Kansas Medical School.

The School of Public Health has recognized and accepted the challenge to aid in making North Carolina's Good Health Program a successful one. It will convert the challenge into an opportunity—an opportunity to materially and substantially improve the health of the people of this State.

Dr. Frank Graham's words of two years ago are more keenly felt now than ever before: "Through the School of Public Health, the University cooperates for improving the health, vigor, productive power, and happiness of the people of North Carolina and the Southeast, and, in the long run of all the people of the United States."

Chat with Dan Proves How Effective Are Results of Campaign Literature

By Jud Kinberg

"Do you realize just how portentious the ensueing election can [illegible] columnist?"

It was Dan the Dog, speaking a hedonistic language nothing like [illegible] usual Broadwayese. I took a quick second take on my erstwhile fellow-wr[illegible] but there was no doubt. The slightly-damaged iron derby, the soiled checke[illegible] vest, the two-for-five cigars in the top pocket were all there. The only thing that seemed to be missing were some buttons—from Dan's brain.

"Are you trying to ruin us,' 'I exploded. "Where in hell did you gather those poetical poesies in your language? Here I spend months building up your bad grammar and you undo all the good work in one speech. Don't tell me you've been sleeping in Dr. Taylor's Shakespeare class?"

"Calm down ,pal. Do not get your typewriter ribbon in an uproar. I am merely exhibiting the ill effects of your escorting me to the Memorial Hall candidate clambake this Thursday p.m. past. Do you wonder why I sneak out during the intermission?"

I was so overjoyed to hear Dan mangling the English language like his old self that I forgot to chastise him for pulling a run-out DDT. In fact, I even forgave him for chewing off a few of my fingers the last time we brunched together.

"One thing, typewriter-pusher, my slight taste of politikin wets my salivary glands. I am now in the fight, paws first. Even as I speak with you, my dogs are lining up the canine contingent. It is more than likely that this election will go to the dogs."

I winced slightly at that gag, but since Dan had the solid support of every wee beastie, I refrained. After all, four paws and seven years ago, or votes to that effect. "Are you active in any more nefarious manner, Dan."

"If you mean the mustaches that sprout recently along the various posters, I pass the word around only yesterday for my boys to lay off. They mean nothing malicious, they just have playful tails."

"That wasn't even in my mind, Dan. But reports have filtered back that you were seen playing ghost late last night."

"Explain, columnist."

"Well, that red setter that's been following you around said you were pulling down campaign banners last evening. You realize, of course, that the Honor Council will have pish-and-tush with you about that."

"Now he tells me! I mean nothing by the action."

"Likely story. Just what is your reason for pulling down the banners?"

"It is all the fault of the local wash-and-tear boys. My laundry is away for three weeks now and last night I get tired of sleeping on dirty sheets. So. . ."

"So. . .?"

"So, I grab down two of the less flamboyant campaign sheets and sleep very well. But I think I make it up to the boys—I vote for them."

As Dan padded out the office, I realized for the first time just how effective campaign literature can be. There were two posters that had cinched the Carrboro Canine vote—strategic precinct in the Tuesday votefest.

What Do YOU Say?

By Harry Snowden

Today's Question

What do you think of the proposed merger of the C.I.O. and the A.F. of L.?

Asnwers

It would tend to create an excessive labor monopoly. The political aspect of such power is obvious.—T. R Hagood, Spartenberg, S. C.

Such a merger would give gargantuan power to labor, would work with the Wagner Act in establishing labor despots in a position of controlling the government. Thus, the curfew tolls the death of our system of government.—T. Earl Heffner, Charlotte.

From the point of view of organized labor the merger would obviously be strategic. But from the point of view of the patriotic American citizen such a move would be dangerous to our solidarity. We may thank the guardian angels for the squabbles among leaders which have heretofore prevented such a merger. May these squabbles long continue.—George Stenhouse, Goldsboro.

For labor fine; for the capitalistic business influences, tough.—J. C Wood, Chapel Hill.

A merger between the CIO and the AF of L would facilitate the possibility of a general national strike that could easily paralyze our entire national economic system and do away with freedom of enterprise.—Ed Wess, New York, N. Y.

Next question: Why are you voting?

Piano and Clarinet Artists to Appear In Concert Tuesday

Miss Augusta Harper, pianist, and William Fitzgerald, clarinetist, will present a joint recital Tuesday evening at 8:30 in Hill hall.

Miss Harper, who is a senior from Minden, La., is a pupil of Dr. William S. Newman of the University music department, and has served as accompanist for the Women's Glee club.

Fitzgerald, a junior from New Bern, is vice-president of the Men's Glee club, and a member of the University orchestra and band. He is a pupil of Dr. Glen Haydon.

Miss Harper will play compositions of Scarlatti, Beethoven, and Shostakovitch; and Fitzgerald, accompanied by Carolyn Bowman, will play works of Brahms, Saubert, Debussey, and Grovles.

Letters To The Editor

All letters must be typewritten, double-spaced, under 300 words in length, and signed by the writer. Writer's name will be withheld on request, but letters must be signed. The Daily Tar Heel reserves the right to present the letters as it wishes and to delete all matter it considers libelous.

Acting Like Gentlemen

Dear Editor:

Well now we are going into that time of the year when our budding campus politicos look into the mirror remarking "I love you" followed up with a day long song of "More Than You Know." During this time promises to the Student Body come very easy concerning improvements.

The preceeding part of this letter was purely for the benefit of the politicians themselves; the remainder I hope will be of some help to the rest of us. Much literature has been placed at various and sundry places in the dormitories. Much of this has been torn down and replaced by other candidates' material. Of course some of our candidates have littered the dorms with repetitious trash. I only live here but I would like to see our political aspirants act at least as gentlemen part of the time. The men who tear down another's literature needlessly are not really fit to hold office. We had the Ku Klux Klan which could probably welcome such characters were it not outlawed. Also certain unions and certain groups in the Communist Party seem to love such tactics. They seem to always mark a desperate and frustrated group. Of course I am very sure that the candidates for at least some of these offices did not personally do the work. Let's try to have a decent pre-election battle with every one of our little gems of the campus having his share of the glory.

Well if anyone is still reading I would like to remind you that the Constitutional amendments we are to vote on should be read and thought over by the voter before he puts his little mark on the paper. If we don't start getting some thought by the Student Body as a whole into this, we might as well sing "It Ain't Necessarily So" about Student Government at Carolina.

Name withheld by request.

Quite a Bird

To the Campus:

Too long we college students have shunned our social responsibility. A situation has arisen which we must cope with. We cannot. . .we must not fail. Committees must be formed, conferences must be called together, the legislature must be met in special session to see that Eddie Allen is properly cared for.

Is there need for me to elaborate on how fortunate we are in having him with us? Is there need to point out the archeological rarity of this puffy Peter Pan, unhampered with sensitivity, conscience or even the distressing ability to comprehend a newspaper headline? Is there need, or have his columns on fraternity pranks and his review of "Open City" shown his stunted whimsey to proper advantage? Quel poie de vivre!

Agreed. We must do something. Do not let our preoccupation with the atomic bomb, national problems or the mere strain of living distract us from preserving the charming Mr. Allen for prosterity. Once before our ancestors erred. Once before.

Once before there was a Dodo bird, and it was neglected and left to die by some cavemen who were busy with the mundane matters of food, shelter, clothing and what should be done about Gog hitting Wog with a war club. Dwelling on this "well bloodied realism" they let the Dodo bird become extinct. (At least it was assumed extinct).

When the Dodo bird went the world grew older overnight Students, I appeal to you. . .in the name of the Dodo bird. . .

VIOLET FIDEL

New Low

Dear Sir:

This past evening Campus Politics reached a new low in "Democratic" action. I had best preface my remarks with the statement that I have no bones to pick with any of the candidates for office, and that I have yet to miss voting in a Campus election.

It is certainly a sad state of affairs when the worthy candidates can not stand on their own Political feet and command the attention of enough of a following to produce an audience for their pre-election campaign speeches.

It was indeed a low trick on the women students when they were forced to attend the Mass Meeting called by student body president, Dewey Dorsett. I fail to see how any believer in a democratic student government can condone the coercive technique used to force the women students to attend—virtually no excuses were acceptable—under penalty of being put on Social Probation this coming Friday evening which merely by coincidence happens to be the night of the Junior-Senior dance.

Carolina Nine Faces Duke In Tilt Here Today

Sport--Spins

—with—

Irwin Smallwood

SPORTS BYSTANDERS who shout to the heavens their claim that collegiate athletics will soon be "all-pro" or "all-subsidized" would have been shocked had they been present in the Fetzer track field stands Wednesday and Thursday of this week. To those who could remember, it looked like an afternoon of mass athletics for the late Navy Pre-Flight school, only there weren't any gold braided ushers in direction.

It was the annual intramural track spectacle, and according to substantial estimations, one in every 10 male students enrolled at Carolina took part at one time or another. That means that between 600 and 700 fraternity and dormitory residents came out and gutted their way over the cinders and timbers and tried their fortunes in the field events.

Sigma Chi—whose representatives in varsity sports haven't done so bad for themselves during the past year or two in addition—huffed and puffed down the home stretch in accelerating motion to carry off fraternity laurels by a 31-point margin. And the Med School, whose enrollment includes inumerable athletes, made easy pickings in the dormitory division, and the aspiring "docs" turned in a final aggregate of 102 points.

No praise is too manifold for those who directed this classic intramural event, for the efficiency with which things were run was spectacular if not amazing. Walter Rabb, the quiet gent who also holds the position of acting baseball coach, is director of that mural department which gave us the meet, and it was the unceasing efforts of Assistant Director P. A. Lowe and Clerk of Course Morty Schaap that kept operations in an ever-active state. That's not mentioning the invaluable aid rendered by tract squadmen Jack Milne, official starter, Don Nelson, Jack Moody, Labbie Terrell, Julian Mackenzie and Rusty Russell. And also the numerous mural officials were no less important.

It was a great meet, and it was made that by the terrific turnout. Let's see more of the same in the murals to follow!

While we are on the subject of deserving persons, we don't want to overlook quite a few who went a long way toward making the second annual Blue and White football game last Saturday such a success. And it's for the Monogram club as well as ourselves when we thank these people for their part in producing the game.

First of all, there is thanks to the football team, to their coaches, Mr. [illegible], Mr. Murphy, Mr. Reed, Mr. [illegible] and then to all the rest, Mr. Earl Slocum and the band, Mr. Jamerson and Dr. Jerry Markham, the announcers, Mr. Crook, Mr. Erickson and the athletic association, Mr. Hutchins of the grounds department, Mr. Kenan Rand, Mr. G. B. Cline, Eddie Teague, Bill Grice, Joe Ferebee, Quack Saunders, Frank Alspaugh, Buddy Crone, Kit Coleman, Ginny Peel, Doris Nunn, Charlie Stancell, Margo Martin, Estelle Boyce, Fern Hughes, Nan Guy, Gloria Gautier, Gene Stokes, Mr. Kutz of the Varsity shop, Mr. Morrow of the utilities department, Jake Wade of the news bureau. These plus all those who sold tickets and did all the sundry tasks that were necessary in the staging of the very successful event.

Late Notes: All the outstanding performers in the mural track meet have been invited by Coach Dale Ranson to take part in the jayvee meet with Guilford scheduled for next Thursday afternoon. . . The Tar Heel tennis team and the golfers have their big tests on the same day next week—Wednesday. The powerful William and Mary net team will play Carolina on the local courts, and the linksmen will match strokes with Duke over the Hope Valley country club course. Both Duke and Carolina are rated as strong contenders for this year's national intercollegiate golf crown.

Blue Devils Take Top Honors In Mural Softball Tourney

Carolina Takes Second Place Position; State, Wake Forest Also Participate

By Billy Carmichael

The Blue Devils of Duke combined a display of powerful hitting with some masterful pitching to hang up three straight wins and capture the first annual Big Four softball tourney played on Navy field yesterday afternoon. Carolina, State, and Wake Forest also took part in the play.

The Dukesters got off to a flying start by defeating the Tar Heels, 4-0 in the opening clash of the day while State was winning by forfeit from Wake Forest, which didn't show up in time for the opening encounter.

In the second round of play, the Carolina crew eked out a 3-2 victory over the late arriving Deamon Deacons behind the fine pitching of Pete Arniz; Duke at the same time taking the measure of State 4-1.

The tournament being a double elimination affair, Wake Forest was now out of the running by virtue of its two defeats and in the next round the State college entry also fell by the way before the unlimbered war clubs of the Tar Heels. This contest was a real slugfest with the Carolina lads outlashing their opponents by a 10-6 count.

In the final game with Duke, the Tar Heels were in the hole from the start. The Dukesters again took a four run lead in the first by combining an odd assortment of plays which included a single to center, a safe bunt, a passed ball, a walk, a pair of errors and a lazy fly ball.

The locals finally got a tally in the fourth which the Blue Devils promptly matched, and two more in the fifth also accounted for by two enemy tallies in the bottom half of the inning. Then in the Duke half of the six the roof fell in.

The smoke finally did clear though, but to the disappointment of the Tar Heel fans as the scoreboard now gave evidences of seven more Duke runs.

Officials of all the participating schools were well pleased with the results of the activity and all indications to another tournament being played in the near future.

Wet Weather Cancels Tennis Match at Yale

(Special to the Daily Tar Heel)

New Haven, Conn., May 2—The rains came, and thus slowed the Tar Heel net contingent up in their quest for their 19th straight win.

Due to repair work in the field house the netters were unable to play their matches in the mamoth indoor stadium here.

Tomorrow, the tennis team moves on to New York City, where they engage the Violets of NYU in their last match of this extended road trip. NYU is always the strongest of the Metropolitan squads but is not figured to give the power laden men of Coach John Kenfield much trouble.

Per usual, Vic Seixas will play at the number one position with Clark Taylor in the two slot.

The squad will return to Chapel Hill some time Sunday and engage Davidson, here on Tuesday, as a warm up for the all important clash with William and Mary, on Wednesday. The latter tilt will decide the winner of the Southern Conference dual match title.

Fourteen Horses to Run In 73rd Kentucky Derby

Louisville, Ky., May 3—(UP)—Early yesterday morning, the officials at Churchill Downs opened the entry box for tomorrow's running of the 73rd Kentucky Derby.

By noon, when the box was closed, the Blue Grass classic's $100,000 pot of gold had attracted 14 probable starters, 14 of the nation's classiest, speediest three-year-olds.

That was two more than expected to start when the strains of "My Old Kentucky Home," calls the thoroughbreds to the post about 5:45 P.M. (EST).

The weatherman says it will be fair and warmer in Louisville tomorrow. And, despite the muddy track, the Churchill Oval is expected to be "fast" since it dries off quickly.

So, unless the rains come, the field probably will narrow down to an even dozen at posttime. C. V. Whitney's stretch-driving beauty, Phalanx, with Eddie Arcaro up and shooting for his fourth derby win—still is favored at 2-to-1.

Blair, Hobbs Pace Tar Heel Jayvees To 11-4 Triumph

Carolina's junior varsity nine saw its first action of the season yesterday afternoon on Emerson field and, behind the steady hurling of Bud Blair, breezed through to an 11-4 triumph over the Cherry Point Marines.

Completely in charge all the way, Blair gave up 10 scattered hits, with the Marines gathering no more than two in any one inning. Fanning six, he allowed no walks and also no earned runs.

The contest was virtually settled as early as the first inning. After the locals had loaded the bases, first-baseman Will Hobbs stepped up and blasted a homer into deep leftcenter-field to provide Carolina with a 4-0 lead.

Marines Score

Cherry Point finally broke into the scoring column with two tallies in the fifth and another in the sixth, but the junior Tar Heels more than made up for these with four in the same two frames. Catcher Buck Davis duplicated Hobbs' round-tripper by clouting one in the same direction in the fifth with the bases empty. In the sixth stanza, two singles, a pair of errors, and a fielder's choice produced three markers for an 8-3 margin.

The Tar Heels rounded out their scoring with two runs in the seventh and a lone one in the eighth. The Marines tallied once in the ninth and had runners on second and third, but Blair quickly quelled the mild uprising.

Other than the two homers, outfielder Mutt Thrift led the jayvees at the plate, garnering two hits in four trips.

The next contest for the jayvees will be Monday, when they encounter Greensboro high school on Emerson field.

The line s core:

Cherry Point	000 021 001 4
UNC Jayvees	400 013 21x 11

Batteries: Fenn, Hallet and Cox; Blair and Davis.

Whiteheart Will Take Hill Against Devils' Houghton

Ancient Rivals to Clash at 3 o'Clock; Second Spot in Loop Standings at Stake

By Bob Goldwater

Carolina's Monk Whiteheart and Duke's Bob Houghton are expected to match slants from the mound in another of their hurling duels when the traditional diamond rivalry has its third outing of the season this afternoon on Emerson field. Starting time is 3 o'clock.

In addition to breaking the one-all tie now existing between the two clubs, today's tussle will also serve to determine which team holds down second place in the Big Four race over the weekend. The Tar Heels are currently occupying the position with a 2-1 slate but a win for Duke, at present in third place with 3-3, would enable the Durhamites to slip ahead of Carolina.

In today's other Big Four game, the league-leading Wolfpack of N. C. State battles the cellar-dwelling Deacons of Wake Forest.

HARRY BEASON, stellar outfielder and Co-Captain of the Tar Heel baseball team.

Whiteheart, who twirled both of the locals' games against the Blue Devils, will be trying to even the score against Houghton, who bested him in extra innings in the last outing. The two also clashed briefly in the first meeting of the two teams, but Houghton worked only a few late innings in relief while the Tar Heel ace was on his way to an easy triumph.

Carolina's starting infield is expected to have John Gregory, Bo Hackney, Rip Ryan and Jim Hamilton,

Tracksters Prepare For Meet With Blue Devils Wednesday

The Tar Heel tracksters, showing new signs of life, after talks by Coach Bob Fetzer and Dale Ranson, went through heavy drills in preparation for the meet with Duke here on Wednesday.

This is the only home dual meet of the year and the track coaches are hoping for a big crowd to aid the Tar Heels in their battle with Duke, the defending Southern Conference Champions.

Feature races will probably be in the 880-yard run, mile, two-mile, 100-yard dash, 440-yard run and the hurdles.

Duke is strong in the high jump and will probably push Jack Moody. Doug Ausbon of the Blue Devils is a star sprinter, high jumper and broad jumper and he should prove a constant thorn in the side of the Tar Heels.

On Thursday afternoon a jayvee track squad will be pitted against the Quakers from Guilford College. Hank Gifford is jayvee coach and is anxious to see all the boys that did well in the mural meet, and get them entered in this contest.

Track practice is held every afternoon from 3 o'clock on, at Fetzer field.

That Feller Again. . .

Fireball artist Bobby Feller hurled the 10th one-hit game of his career yesterday and his second of the young season as he edged Dave Ferriss and the Boston Red Sox, 2-0, for his third victory of the year.

Only hit off the Cleveland ace came in the very first inning, when Johnny Pesky lined a single into left field.

while Tom Clayton, Harry Beason and Jack Hussey will patrol the outfield. Buck Hardee will be behind the plate.

Duke's lineup will also contain a few changes, the most notable being the instertion of George Clark, Big Four batting champion in 1944, in left field. The remaining starters are the same ones that went all the way for Coach Coombs two weeks ago.

DIAMOND DUST: Although not starting, Whitey Black, out since the last Duke game with an injured wrist, may get to see some action today . . . Next game for the Tar Heels is Tuesday, when they travel to Wake Forest.

Stalin States Russians Want World Peace

Cooperation Is Urged In Stassen Interview

Moscow, May [illegible] (UP)—Russian premier Stalin says the different economic systems in Russia and the United States are no bar to peace, if both want to cooperate. And, says Stalin, Russia wants to.

The Soviet generalissimo's latest words on international relations were spoken to Harold Stassen, candidate for the 1948 Republican presidential nomination, in a Moscow interview on April 9. Stassen released a transcript of the interview tonight, with the permission of Stalin.

No Name-Calling

According to the transcript, the Russian leader made a plea for no name-calling. He said that, the "consciences of the people" will ultimately prohibit atomic warfare.

Despite big differences of view now, says Stalin, "we shall succeed in establishing international inspection and control" of atomic energy. To prevent economic crisis, comments the Russian, the U. S. government "must be vested with wide powers" to "adopt broad measures." Both he and Stassen agreed that business men object to regulation and restraint.

Replacement Warned By Telephone Company

Atlanta, Ga., May 3.—(UP)—The Southern Bell Telephone company has warned its striking employees in nine southern states that it will hire permanent replacements unless they return to work soon. The company did not fix a definite deadline, but said it will wait to see what the strikers do about an appeal from North Carolina Governor Gregg Cherry that they return to work by Monday. The company has made no wage offer to the strikers, but says it will submit the dispute to arbitration.

Sheriff Reports Lead In Wisconsin Kidnap

Fort Atkinson, Wis., May 3—(UP)—The sheriff's office reports a lead in the possible kidnapping of eight-year-old Georgia Jean Weckler. A witness has reported seeing a little girl in the back seat of a car, driven by a strange couple, last Thursday when the child disappeared. The witness says the little girl was crying and screaming "let me out."

Dr. Berthold Ullman Honored by Admission To Mediaeval Academy

Dr. Berthold Louis Ullman, head of the classics department and Kenan professor of Latin, has been named a fellow of the Mediaeval Academy of America, an exclusive organization of scholars, the only other two members from the South also being from Duke University.

The organization, which is a constituent member of the American Council of Learned Societies, is headed this year by Dr. George R. Coffman, former head of the English department and now Kenan professor of English. Dr. U. T. Holmes, internationally known French scholar and chairman of the University's Department of Romance Languages, is the secretary of the three Fellows from the South.

Dr. Ullman, native of Chicago, came to the University to head the classics department in 1944. Before that he was professor of Latin in the University of Chicago, 1925-44.

He received his A.B. at Chicago in 1903 and his Ph.D. there in 1908. He was a student at the University of Munich in 1906 and at the American School of Classical Studies in Rome from 1907-08.

GM to Sponsor Elections Prom

Politicos to Appear At Intermission

Tuesday's voters will get a brief but adequate glimpse of student government candidates when they are introduced by Student Body President Dewey Dorsett at Graham Memorial's Pre-Elections Prom in the Y Court on Monday night from 8 until 10:30 o'clock.

Director of Graham Memorial Martha Rice announced today that each candidate would be introduced by Dorsett but that no speeches would be made. "It will at least give students a chance to see who they are voting for in case they are not familiar with the candidates," said Miss Rice, who began the Pre-Elections Prom last year and who stated that she wants to make it an annual affair.

Ned Reap's popular 15-piece Graham Memorial dance band will furnish music for the Prom. Plenty of saw-dust will be sprinkled in the Y court for better dancing.

The dance, to be strictly informal, will be held in the main lounge of Graham Memorial in case of rain.

York Resigns Council Post

Ed York, president of the Men's Interdormitory council, has announced his resignation from the position effective this term. A meeting has been called for May 5 for the consideration of the matter of the selection of a new presiding officer for the Council.

York has explained that he will not return to school next collegiate year, and he feels that the work of the Council will be impaired if at that time there is no head to bring about the Council's reactivation.

According to Tom Insley, secretary of the Council, the May 5 meeting will be held in the third section of Roland Parker lounge in Graham Memorial Monday night at 7:30.

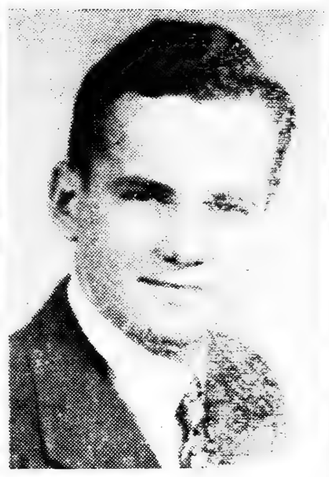
Recent work of the Council and its presiding officer has included an effort to provide social rooms in men's dormitories and to bring about better enforcement of dormitory regulations.

Improvement Loan Repaid Last Week By Administration

In accordance with the provisions of the permanent improvements appropriation bill recently passed by the state legislature, the University last week repaid a $342,000 loan which had been made to finance construction of three new dormitories and turned the financing of the buildings over to the state.

Being built at a cost of $1,200,000 the dormitories were originally planned to pay for themselves on a self-liquidating basis. $342,000 was borrowed from the Wachovia Bank of Winston-Salem to start the buildings. Assumption of construction costs by the state allowed the University to repay the loan with a consequent saving of $25 a day in interest payments.

Roundtable to Discuss Marshall Talk Tonight



Secretary of State George C. Marshall's report on the recent Moscow foreign ministers conference will be the topic for discussion at the Carolina Political union's regular weekly Sunday evening roundtable discussion at 8 in the Grail Room. Russell Baldwin, neophyte Union member, will give the introductory report.

The roundtable meetings are open to the public, and all interested parties are encouraged to be present and to air their views.

Jerry Davidoff, CPU chairman, announced that plans were being completed for Senator Wayne Morse's long delayed visit to Chapel Hill in the latter part of May.

Earl Heffner, (left), has been appointed new managing editor of the Daily Tar Heel, following the retirement of Roland Giduz to edit the Graham Memorial handbook, which is due to appear this month. Giduz will remain on the staff as associate editor.

Walter Arnold, (right), is Campus party nominee for sophomore representative to the Men's council. A former student at Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Arnold entered the University last fall, and is at present on the steering committee of the Campus party.

CRIL Program Will Feature Talk by Seminary President

Dr. Aubrey to Speak Tonight in Hill Hall; Talk Is Last of Current Lecture Series

Dr. Edwin E. Aubrey, president of the Crozer Theological Seminary in Chester, Pa., will present the last of the talks this year which have been sponsored by the Council for Religion in Life.

Speaking in Hill hall at 8 o'clock, Dr. Aubrey's subject will be "God."

The series this year is organized around the titles of the Hazen Books on Religion. These books were designed as a systematic treatment of the great problems of religion, written by America's best theologians and philosophers with a simplicity and directness that would appeal to college students. The CRIL program committee sought to get, in so far as possible, the authors of this series of books.

No mere academician, Dr. Aubrey is chairman of the Department of International Justice and Goodwill of the Federal Council of Churches, and a Fellow of the National Council for Religion in Higher Education.

Chairman of CRIL, Ben Perlmutter has announced that plans are now being made for next year's program of University Sermons and suggestions as to possible speakers are invited.

Dr. Edwin E. Aubrey, president of the Crozer Theological Seminary in Chester, Pa., will deliver the final lecture in this year's CRIL series this evening at 8 o'clock in Hill hall. Dr. Aubrey will speak on "God."

Melton to Run For DTH Post

Candidate Cites Five Point Plan

Art Melton, a junior from Marion, today officially announced his candidacy as an independent for Editor of the Daily Tar Heel.

Melton in his announcement stated, "Basically I stand for five new Daily Tar Heel policies and if elected will strive to have printed a Daily Tar Heel that will satisfy a majority of the students on the campus. The students who are responsible for electing an editor should have a voice in the operation of the Daily Tar Heel—such as the selection of the type of news printed."

As news-writer and photographer, Melton has worked for several of the major newspapers in the State. Besides formerly having been sports editor of the Hickory Daily Record, Melton has been daily sports columnist for the Charlotte News, Greensboro Daily News, and the Winston-Salem Journal.

Melton once was correspondent for the High Point Enterprise, Concord Tribune, Salisbury Post, and the Charlotte Observer. Art started his newspaper career as a feature writer and photographer with the Detroit News, and filled a similar position with the Columbus Ohio Dispatch.

Prior to his arrival at UNC, Melton completed a four-year cruise in the Navy, where he worked both as a publicity writer and photographer.

Melton has been a staff photographer this year on the Daily Tar Heel and the Yackety Yack.

Golden Fleece Tapping Will Be Held Tonight

Valkyrie Sing Contest Draws 11 Entrants; Memorial Hall Is Scene of Both Programs

In one of Carolina's most impressive ceremonies, the Order of the Golden Fleece this evening will tap an undisclosed number of men who through leadership and service meet the qualifications of the group. The tapping will begin at 7:45 o'clock in Memorial hall.

Following the Fleece affair, several campus organizations, fraternities, sororities, and dormitories will compete for two silver loving cups in the annual Valkyrie sing. Last year's winners were Phi Gamma Delta and Alpha Gamma Delta.

No Limit

There is no limit on the number of men who may be tapped by the Fleece. The only open meeting of the year, the order's tapping procedure is steeped in tradition and suspense.

After the reading of the myth of Jason and his quest for the Golden Fleece, black robed figures stalk around darkened Memorial hall seeking the men who are to be honored. At last year's ceremony nine men were tapped.

Names Secret

All other Fleece activities are secret, the name of the order never being used in connection with any campus affairs. Fleece-sponsored doings are carried out through individual members.

At tonight's session, the order will disclose who is their Jason, or head, and other officers. Tonight is the only time of the year that names of the officers are announced.

The Valkyrie sing program will consist of 11 groups of vocalists. All numbers sung by organizations will be part of a main theme featured by costumes and backdrops. Equipment used must not cost over five dollars.

Campus groups who have entered the contest are: Kappa Alpha, Alpha Gamma Delta, Phi Delta Theta, Spencer, Alpha Delta Pi, Kappa Sigma, Chi Omega, Sigma Nu, Delta Delta Delta, Sigma Chi, Pi Beta Phi, Phi Gamma Delta.

May Pageant Slated Today

Chancellor Robert B. House will place the May Queen's crown on some lucky senior girl's head shortly after 5 o'clock this afternoon in the Forest theater.

Chosen by secret balloting from the senior class during last quarter, the Queen and her attendents will be revealed to the student body during a pageant promised to be one of the most colorful spectacles seen on campus in a great while.

Unless it rains this afternoon, in which case the program will be postponed until tomorrow at the same time, the pageant will take place between 5 and 6 o'clock, featuring Nancy Brock's modern dance group.

The following persons or groups, the Pan-Hellenic council, CICA, DA department, Chi Delta Phi, are sponsors of today's events. Henrietta Cooper directs the pageant.

Special Art Courses Offered This Summer

A special program of art courses will be offered during the coming Summer Session by the University Art Department it was announced today.

Running from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m., the courses will be given just during the first half of the Summer Session, from June 12 to July 22.

The staff will include Mrs. Mary Leath Thomas, well-known specialist in art education; Dr. Clemens Sommer, professor of history of art; and Kenneth Ness, resident artist in the University.

Courses to be offered are in drawing, watercolor and oil painting, lettering and layout, materials and methods for the teaching of art, photography and stage design. There will also be a special Problems Course for In-Service Teachers.

Russian-American Problem To Be Topic of Hatch Talk

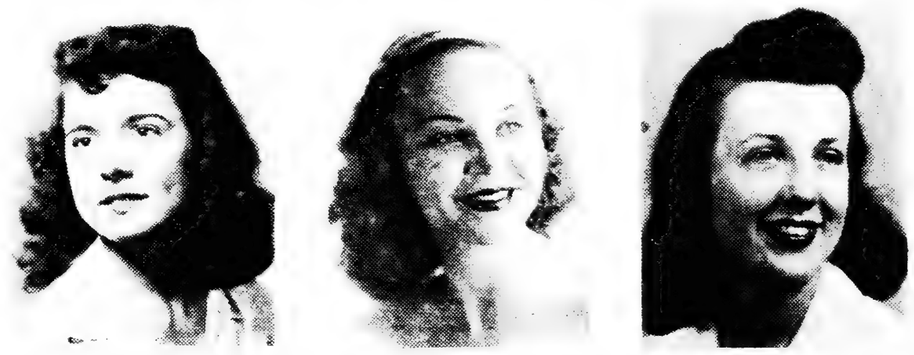
The solution of Russian-American conflict in the Middle East will be the topic of "Smiling Carl" Hatch, Democratic senator from New Mexico, when he mounts the International Relations club platform next Thursday evening in Hill hall.

Impressions of Greece and Turkey formed during his recent visit to the Mediterranean area will form the basis of his address.

The day after he returned from Europe, Sen. Hatch stated that the Soviet Union should not "wrap a cloak of holiness about herself." He lashed out against Sen. Claude Pepper during a Senate debate on the Greek-Turkey loan. "If Russia will lay her problems before the United Nations then the world can be at peace and there can be complete disarmament."

In addition to being a leader in the development of America's bi-partisan foreign policy, Sen. Hatch is also the author of the famous Hatch acts which limit election campaign contributions. He battled alone for more than four years against powerful opposition in the Senate until he was able to get his election reform bills approved in 1939 and 1940.

"Sen. Hatch combines a zealous spirit of reform with a smiling affability," said John Bristow, president of the International Relations club. "The I.R.C. feels that his address, which is his first since returning from Greece and Turkey, will chart a crusading middle-course in our relations with Russia and the [illegible]."



French, Spanish Tests Will Be Given June 5

The reading knowledge examination for Commerce students in French and Spanish will be given on June 5 at the close of the regular French 4 and Spanish 4 examinations.

Place of the examinations may be ascertained from the secretary of the department of romance languages, Murphy 210.

IRC to Hold Meeting In Graham Memorial

The International Relations club will hold a short business meeting tomorrow evening at 7:30 in the Roland Parker lounge of Graham Memorial. It is compulsory for all IRC members to attend this special meeting.

Beware the Smearer

Much has been written about aspiring candidates who suddenly develop an infectious case of the grip when election day nears. There is always light kidding about this open, if artificial type, of campaigning which is an integral part of the political scene.

Equally as much has appeared in these columns, in a less facetious tone, concerning less moral practices often employed. The age-old American adage of "Knock your opponent enough so the voters will overlook your own shortcomings," has been condemned regularly; not only by the DTH, but also by everyone who is revolted by the philandering, dirty rumoring, etc., to which some candidates stoop in their petty political battles.

The DTH has already made its stand on the issue, but already more than rumor has it that some individuals, whose mouths should be Octagonized, have started their machines of smear and fear. What is the value of a political job when it must be bought by slander, truth-warping and misrepresentation?

Tonight and tomorrow probably will find more candidates in dorms and fraternity houses than there are Dodger fans in Brooklyn. Just remember: if he or his supporters begin to orate on the general unworthiness of the opposition candidate, then let him talk. BUT VOTE AGAINST HIM!

Statement by Women's Council

(Ed. note—the following statement was released for publication by the Women's Council of the University.)

Ever since the formulation of the present student constitution began, there has been endless debate over the appellate power of the Student Council. During this time, the component members of the Men's and Women's Councils, have been opposed to the use of such a power by a student group. It has been said by the opposition that these two councils are not in a position to criticize policy, but only to carry such policy out. However, we, the members of Women's Council, feel that we work more closely with this policy than does anyone else, and also more frequently than does anyone else; and, therefore, are more apt to see its defects than anyone casually acquainted with the facts and procedures. We do not feel that we are being disloyal to our Constitution when we seek to improve its functioning.

In order to clarify our position, we would like to state a few of the reasons for our opposition to the use of the appellate power by the Student Council:

1) Student Government is becoming more and more complicated, and at the same time it is suffering from lack of interest on the part of most of the students. We feel that a simplified system of Student Government will interest more people and be more effective. The fewer courts we have the more simple and unified is our Student Government.

2) Though functioning of the Councils (Men's and Women's) is certainly not above reproach in all ways, the number of appeals from each group to the Student Council has been small or nil. Women's Council has not had ONE case appealed this year. Why have something that you don't use, something that only serves to clutter up the machinery of Student Government?

3) No one group of students elected from a student body is any more capable of making decisions than another group elected from the same body. A group with appelate powers should have added experience, evidence and, judicial wisdom.

4) The reversal of decisions, a probable outcome of an appealed case, creates an atmosphere of utter confusion and lowers the prestige of the entire Honor System.

5) There are no real bases for appeal from one student group to another. If additional evidence is discovered, the case is to revert to the court of original trial.

6) We must not overlook the fact that the administration is here to work with the students. They will not tolerate two decisions made by two groups from the same student body who are supposedly working together, under the SAME Honor System.

The criticism noted here is purely of the use of the appelate power by the Student Council, or any other student group, and is not aimed at the present Student Council. Women's Council feels that that group has worked exceedingly well under its handicap and also appreciates the cooperation obtained from that group.

We feel that the appelate power rests with the faculty and not with the students, and we think that the faculty is capable of correcting mistakes made by student courts.

Pattern of U. S. Policies Seen as Confusing Jig-Saw

By Manny Margolis

Chalk one up for Senator Vandenberg! During a period of some cautious circumspection concerning the Truman Doctrine, he remarked: "To me, it is a plan, it is part of a pattern, and, as such, is to be distinguished from a policy."

Pattern is the word. It is a pattern in which all of the threads of domestic and foreign policy are delicately interwoven into what is becoming an increasingly clear mosaic. Look carefully and what do you see? You observe the Truman Doctrine and a high cost of living, loyalty orders and "slave-labor" bills, investigation into the "pipe-lines" at home and millions for the oil pipe-lines in Saudi-Arabia, curtailment of civil liberties at home while we teach "democracy" to the Germans and Japanese.

We are trying to sell democracy abroad—literally and figuratively—while we sabotage it at home. We are trying to "contain" communist in Europe while we fail to retain democracy here in the United States.

Pattern is the word. Just fit the pieces into the political jig-saw. We must present a united front to the Russians, we are told. Therefore, we must maintain "unity" at home.

Some even want to muzzle Wallace. But others point with pride at the fact that an American can practice such heresy and not be thrown in jail. Why, it's proof of our freedom of speech! Just think what they'd do to him in Russia! Besides, even Walter Lippmann is agreed that he's somewhat of a psychopathic. If all the crazy people in Britain, France, and Scandinavia listened to him wide-eyed and wide-eared, that's their privilege.

We've got to have unity, they tell us. There is no other way in a time of "crisis" such as this. Labor must not strike, or it might be interpreted abroad as a "weakness" in American democracy. It would be a breach of unity. It would sabotage the "war effort."

Thank God (and Congress) for the Hartley, Taft, and Ball bills. That ought to do the trick—kill the Wagner Act, break up national unions into isolated locals, torpedo collective bargaining, and re-introduce an era of labor control by injunction, not to mention the fact that it offers a sure-fire technique for purging unions of all communists, "sympathizers," and "probable communists."

The pattern is taking shape. We've got hundreds of millions for Greek and Turkish "democracy" and not a penny for our own. No housing bill, no health bill, no Federal-Aid-to-Education bill, no increase in G. I. subsistence. Billions for the Army and the Navy—not a penny for tuberculosis, for venereal disease, for psychiatry.

The fabric is knitted of many strands. But it's not a new design. Those "crazy" Europeans that Wallace spoke to can recognize it. They know the political stitch. It was just a stitch in time that saved them from Bolshevism.

It's all part of the world pattern, you see. Paul Robeson is forbidden the use of a hall in Peoria and another in Albany; Kirsten Flagstad, on the other hand, can sing wherever she pleases. California has refused auditorium space to Henry Wallace, while John Foster Dulles can have all the auditorium space he desires.

Four days before Marshall's report to the nation, Mr. Dulles summed up America's position in the following manner: "The U.S.A. has hammered out specific policies which in the long run should accomplish MORE THAN AGREEMENTS, which would inevitably have involved COMPROMISE."

Last Monday night, Secretary of State Marshall asserted, "We must not COMPROMISE on GREAT PRINCIPLES in order to achieve AGREEMENT."

Two of a kind! Twins! Unity! What difference does it make if the dog wags the tail or the tail the dog?

Is this the "pattern" of American thinking? No agreement at the cost of compromise?

And they told us Molotov wouldn't budge. . .

Delay Called Old Russian 'Army Game'

By Russell G. Baldwin
Carolina Political Union

When Secretary of State George C. Marshall made his radio report to the nation last Monday night, people everywhere listened intently, hopefully. They wanted to hear all those ugly reports which had seeped out of Moscow refuted by the great man himself. They were disappointed. Secretary Marshall's report was one of affirmation rather than refutation. The disagreeable facts were laid bare for the public's indigestion.

The purpose of the Moscow Conference was to consider three major issues—(1) German peace treaty. (2) A four-power pact (Britain, U. S., France, Russia) to guarantee the demilitarization of Germany. (3) Austrian treaty. It was not expected that a final German treaty would be effected, but it was hoped that agreement could be reached as to procedure so that preparatory work for the next conference would be facilitated. It was hoped that a four-power pact would be agreed upon mainly to reassure the countries of Europe that the U. S. would not withdraw into its shell as it did after the first World War. It was hoped that the Austrian treaty would be settled so that Austria could reestablish herself as an independent nation, and so that the deck would be cleared for the German treaty at the next conference.

The critical German problems are: (a) the limits to the powers of the central government; (b) the character of the economic system and its relation to all of Europe; (c) the character and extent of reparations; (d) the boundaries for the German state; and (e) the manner in which all Allied states at war with Germany are represented in the drafting and confirmation of the treaty. The Soviet Union appears to favor a strong central government while the U. S. and Britain oppose it on the grounds that it could too easily be converted to the domination of a regime similar to the Nazis. They favor a central government of carefully limited powers, and the French are willing to agree only to a very ilmited central government.

It is an unmistakable fact that the German economy is as closely tied up with the economy of Europe as is coal or steel with the economy of Germany. The economy of not only Germany, but Europe as well, revolves around German coal. There is a critical shortage of coal which continues because of the shortage of steel, and the shortage of steel is the result of the coal shortage. The problems are extremely complex and matters are considerably worsened by the unwillingness of the Soviet authorities to cooperate in estaolishing a balanced economy for Germany as agreed upon at Potsdam.

The question of reparations is of critical importance. The Russians insist on extracting reparations from current German production even though this necessitates the continued subsidizing of the German economy by the U. S. There is also complete disagreement with regard to boundaries to be established for Germany. Another point of disagreement is the representation of the Allied states in making the treaty. The U. S. favors giving some voice to all the Allied powers at war with Germany while Russia takes the opposite view.

There was agreement on the Austrian treaty on all but a few points, but these were basic and of fundamental importance. The Soviet government made certain demands that, if acquiesced in, would reduce Austria to little more than a puppet state.

To be understood the Moscow Conference must be considered in the light of the past. From beginning to end it savored of the old Russian game of delay. It causes one to wonder what the Russians hope to gain by delay. Do they hope to delay until they have discovered how to make atomic bombs, whereby their hand at the bargaining table would be strengthened? Or, is there some other reason? That is an interesting question worthy of careful consideration.

"Thanks, fellers. Where were you when Hitler was kicking us around in 1940?"

Repeal The 19th Amendment?

Why not? Democracy is a slow process and on our campus it's even slower, less real and actually ineffective because the majority of girls do NOT believe in voting. Oh, yes, you'll see groups of them going to the polls Tuesday and actually working—for some personal friend, for their sorority, or some special-interest group.

First, though, let's recognize the fact that the average male at Carolina is not much more interested in community affairs! For an infinite number of reasons, most students "don't have time" (or interest) in their own self-government or they "don't know" enough about it! Some day we may not have time (or further opportunity) for Democracy, much less Student Government!

The undergraduate girls who are indifferent have usually never voted—and this is "no time or place to learn!" The graduates are far too busy; some feel too old, some think that local politics are far beneath them, that all politics though are "silly and dirty!" So it goes — the girls are too young, or too old, too smart or too dumb, too gullible or too disillusioned, too active formerly—so tired "has-beens" now—to contribute anything constructive to their own government. Most of us believe in Student Government—but who do we believe should be concerned with it or working—not just holding office?

After almost five years in the army, I consider individual citizenship the greatest of privileges; an opportunity as well as duty which cannot be fulfilled for me by proxy. Least comprehensible of all classes of students are VETERANS who fought for liberty and independence for all peoples. Do we need another Revolution to awaken us, to make us really work for what we believe? Why do 72% of the students at Wake Forest vote as compared to some 25% here?

It's a sad commentary—but evidently necessary—that the president of our student body required a meeting of all coeds, to hear their "top candidates," whom most of them had not seen, heard, or had a voice in nominating! True—politics are too often "silly and dirty" because too few good citizens share this responsibility of government. WE are usually well—meaning critics, civic parasites, and paralytics would lend a hand to better government now?

Understand that I assuredly do not advocate change merely for the sake of change nor a New Deal just because it sounds fine—but VOTING on the basis of qualifications, experience, interest and sincerity of purpose—minus any spoils system. We all understand now that more than $100,000 from all students' fees will be administered by our next Student Legislature. How representative and constructive would it be if it depended on only female citizens? Surely there are many fine students of both sexes interested in better government; there must be more fair-minded and constructive citizens at Carolina than otherwise — whether they know it or not!

During the past few weeks, I have been called many times "the biggest (loudest) female politician on the campus." This is absolutely true as far as I know, but don't think that I am therefore proud—there are no many others!

Carolina-Duke Baseball Game Halted By Rain

Jet Pilot Wins Derby To Cop $92,000 Purse

Louisville, Ky., May 3.—(UP)—One of the largest crowds in sports history cheered from the bottom of its heart today as the sentimental favorite Jet Pilot flashed to victory in the 73rd running of the Kentucky Derby.

When Jockey Eric Guerin, riding his first Derby winner, booted Jet Pilot across the finish line a head in front of Phalanx it meant some $92,000 to owner Mrs. Elizabeth Arden Graham. But that crowd, estimated at some 120,000, realized the win meant more than just dollars and cents to the cosmetics queen. Those fans knew it was balm to the heartaches Mrs. Graham had suffered—the hard luck jinx which saw her stable of two-year-olds burn down last year—and later hung on to send her favored entry down to defeat in last year's Derby.

The loss was a heart-breaker for Eddie Arcaro, who was shooting for a record-breaking fourth Derby victory on second place Phalanx. Arcaro got off to a bad start, trailing the field of 13. The veteran hardboot got Phalanx rolling at the three-quarter mark, but by that time it was too late. There were too many horses to pass—and time and distance ran out on Arcaro.

The Calumet Farm's Faultless, trained by the veteran Ben Jones, finished third. Jones also was trying for his fourth Kentucky Derby win, having saddled Lawrin in 1938, Whirlaway in 1941 and Pensive in 1944.

On Trust finished fourth with the rest of the field strung out in the following order, Cosmic Bomb, Star Reward, Bullet Proof, W. L. Sickle, Stepfather, Liberty Road, Riskolater, Double Jay, and Jett-Jett.

Spring Teams Hit Peak In Schedule This Week

Carolina's track, tennis and golf teams, all undefeated in dual competition, come up to their most crucial tests of the season this week, while the Tar Heel baseballers play one Big Four contest and then embark on a three-game road trip into Virginia and Maryland.

Furnishing the opposition in two of the tests will be Carolina's old rivals from Duke. The Blue Devil track team invades Fetzer field Wednesday for the meet that will decide which of the two teams gains the Southern conference dual-meet crown. While Carolina will be favored, the Blue Devils will present a formidable aggregation that, with a few breaks, could send the Tar Heel thin-clads down to their first defeat.

In the other sport—golf—Duke takes over the favored role and Carolina becomes the upnderdog. The Blue Devils copped the Southern Intercollegiate tournament at Athens, Ga., two weeks ago with the Tar Heel unit a close runner-up, but the Durham linksmen will rate as heavy favorites to bring Carolina's dual-meet winning streak on the fairways to an end when the two teams clash over the Hope Valley course Thursday. Both outfits will compete in the Southern conference golf tournament in Winston-Salem over the weekend.

The outlook in the third sport is also from an underdog position. Carolina's net crew, which returns today from a brilliant northern jaunt, runs up against William and Mary's powerful racquet combine Wednesday. The Indians handed the Tar Heels their only licking last year and this season they sport several nationally-known players to throw against Vic Seixas and company. In the feature clash of the match, Seixas, ranked 16th in the nation, battles Gardner Larned, rated four steps higher at number 12.

On the last three days of the week, the local netters will be the hosts for the Southern conference tennis tournament. In addition to Carolina and William and Mary, entries are expected from Duke, State, Davidson and Wake Forest. Carolina also meets Davidson Tuesday on the local courts.

Along the baseball front, the Tar Heels have a Big Four brush at Wake Forest Tuesday before departing the next day on a four-day journay. The diamond brigade plays Virginia at Charlottesville on Thursday and then sees action in two conference tilts, with Maryland at College Park Friday and against Richmond at Richmond Saturday.

Cindermen Hold Light Workouts For Duke Meet

By Morty Schaap

The tracksters took a day of light work and then many members of the team took a busmen's holiday and journeyed to Durham to see the Blue Devils tangle with Georgia Tech.

The meet came out pretty much as was expected with the Yellow Jackets swamping the Dukesters, 76¾ to 54¼.

Very impressive, and the man the Tar Heels will have to watch come Wednesday afternoon, was Roger Neighborgal. Neighborgal tore through the rain and muddy cinders to take the 440-yard run in the fine time of 49.6 and then doubled back to take the 880 in 1:58. His performance was indeed eye opening to the many Tar Heels who witnessed the performances.

The meet today showed that Duke is coming along and it was not until the last few events that the Jackets went into the front.

Ausbon Stars

Doug Ausbon captured the broad jump and ran third in the 100 and 220 yard dashes. George Baily, of Tech, took the shorter dash in 9.8 seconds and Doug Fowlkes was second. These boys reversed the order in the furlong with Fowlkes being clocked in 22.9.

Duke Strong

The assignment of beating Duke will probably be much harder than is anticipated as the Durham boys have strength in the four shorter running events plus a strong field events team.

With the Conference Championships less than two weeks away it is all important that the squad comes around so as to get those important, second, third, fourth and fifth place points.

Coach Bob told the boys that they had shown a great deal of improvement in the Carolina AAU meet last weekend and that if they could keep improving, the University would indeed have a track team, that it could [illegible]

Mural Tennis, 'Shoes Begin

Heavy Softball Slate On Tap Tomorrow

Two more sports will make their intramural debuts tomorrow afternoon with play beginning in both horseshoes and tennis. Both events will be played on the team tournament basis with one defeat eliminating any entry.

A total of 48 teams are entered in the horseshoe competition which will be reeled off in the pits located at softball diamond No. 2. Each team will be composed of five men and each match will be constituted by five individual matches—two doubles and one singles.

The tennis competition is boasting a field of over 30 teams, which the matches to be played each afternoon at four and five o'clock.

There will be a representative of the mural department at the courts to handle all arrangements concerning play of the matches and assignment of courts. The mural office will supply balls for the matches but contestants may bring new ones if they wish.

Still another mural sport will show its new-born head as the week progresses, with the double-elimination soccer tourney getting underway Tuesday afternoon. This is the first time that soccer has been played as an intramural sport and the department is carefully watching the results of the experiment.

Contest Stopped In Fourth With Blue Devils Leading

No Date Set For Replay of Ball Game; Tar Heels Clash With Deacons Tuesday

By Bob Goldwater

After battling the weatherman through four innings of baseball, Carolina and Duke were both driven to cover by a steady downpour yesterday afternoon as the two rivals clashed for the third time this year.

The Blue Devils were leading by 5-4 when Umpires Baker and Stallings temporarily halted the encounter at 4:06 p.m. Thirty minutes later when the rain began falling harder instead of letting up, the two officials called the game off and it was declared no contest. All pitching, fielding and batting records marked up during the four frames will not count in the season's averages.

Beason Homers

The Tar Heels jumped off to an early lead with four runs in the first inning. With one out, Jim Hamilton walked and Harry Beason clouted a long homer down the left-field line. Jack Hussey and John Gregory followed with free passes to first, after which Bo Hackney's single past short and Dallas Branch's long fly to left served to register two more runs.

That finished the Carolina attack for the day. Duke hurler Bob Houghton setting them down with only two singles in the third and fourth innings. But the Blue Devils were just starting their offensive and broke into the scoring column in the second frame with one run on three one-baggers.

Duke came back in the third inning to tally three more runs, all unearned off Monk Whiteheart, the Carolina starter. With one out, George Clark reached first on an infield error and after Ed McCarthy bounced out to the pitcher, two straight walks loaded the bases. Jerry Frye then tripled to deep left field to drive in three runs and tie up the ball game.

Houghton himself scored the tie-breaking run in the fourth. The Duke hurler led off with a double and was kept on second while Whiteheart was retiring Bakie Palmer and Art Vann. But Clark came through with a single through the middle and the Blue Devils moved into the lead.

Then came the rains.

DIAMOND DUST: Whitey Black returned to his center-field post after a two-week absence and turned in the game's fielding gem, a long running catch of Vann's liner. His throw to the infield almost doubled Houghton off second. . . Johnny Hearn, Coach Bunn's son and starting third-baseman last year, was on hand to witness the clash.

Bradley Speaks On Deficiency Of GI Benefits

Checks Do Not Cover College Living Costs

Washington, May 5—(UP)—General Omar Bradley, veterans administrator, says payments to veterans under the GI Bill of Rights do not cover living costs. However, Bradley says liberalized benefits should not be too attractive. Bradley told a Senate labor subcommittee considering some 20 proposals to increase benefits for educational training that Congress and not the VA should set the payment policy. Otherwise, the veterans administrator took no position on the proposals.

Violations

Bradley said there have been some violators of the law's intent. He named extended training courses for gas station men and salesmen as "rather questionable."

State Phone Employees Return to Switchboards

Charlotte, May 5—(UP)— More than 500 telephone workers have returned to their jobs in North Carolina today according to the figure just released by E. H. Wasson, Southern Bell manager for the Carolinas. He says the telephone company now is up to 45 per cent of normal operating strength in North Carolina. The largest single group of employees to return to their jobs today was in the Asheville district. Switchboards are fully manned for the first time since the strike began on April 7. All employees also are back on the job at Morganton.

UN to Hear Spokesman For Jews in Palestine

Flushing, N. Y., May 5—(UP)—The United Nations General Assembly has ordered its all-member political committee to let a Jewish agency spokesman speak on the Palestine problem. The compromise, worked out by five small powers, leaves it up to the political committee to decide whether to hear Arab spokesmen or other Jewish representatives than the Jewish agency.

US Broadcasts Abroad May Stop, Says House

Washington, May 5—(UP)—Chairman John Taber of the House Appropriations committee came out of a government-industry-Congress conference with Secretary of State Marshall tonight to say that his group intends to stick by its decision to scrap the "Voice of America" broadcasts. Taber says his group will stand pat until Marshall reorganizes the program to meet objections raised by Congressional critics to U. S. radio programs broadcast in Europe and Asia.

House Lessens Budget Requested by Truman

Washington, May 5.—(UP)—The House Appropriations committee has cut President Truman's budget requests for the State, Commerce and Justice departments by more than 23 per cent. The committee approved its fourth major appropriation bill for the 1948 fiscal year today, and it gives the three departments $535,000,000 instead of the nearly $700,000,000 requested.

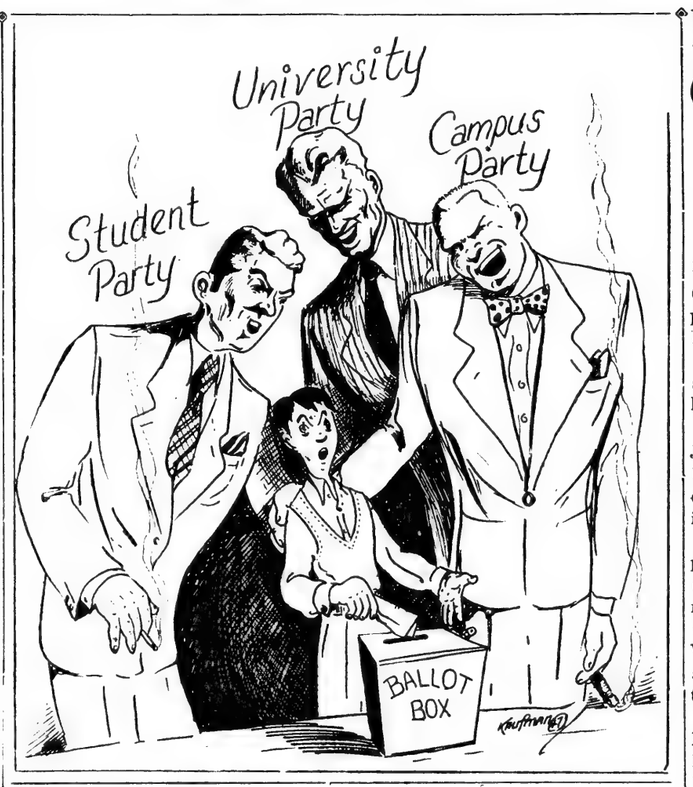
Golden Fleece Taps 14 New Members In Ceremonies

Law Professor Is Taken Into Honor Society

Members Announce Names of Officers

Thirteen University students and a professor of law, Frank W. Hanft, were tapped into Golden Fleece, considered by many as the top ranking honor organization on the campus, at impressive ceremonies in Memorial hall here Sunday night.



Chosen for distinctive records in special activities and general all-round excellence, with much emphasis on character and leadership, the 14 new members were inducted into the select order after they were singled out from the audience by black-robed, hooded figures who moved slowly up and down the aisles of the darkened hall.

In addition to Professor Hanft, those tapped were Pat Kelly, Winston-Salem; Charles Warren, Washington, N. C.; Don McCoy, Laurinburg; Ernest G. Crone, Goldsboro; Raymond Jefferies, Harrisonburg, Va.; Ralph Strayhorn, Durham; John O'Neil, Knoxville, Tenn.; Thomas Eller, Salisbury; James Wallace, Jamesville; William W. Taylor, Durham; William Woestendiek, Saugerties, N. Y.; William Miller, Greenville, S. C., and Kenneth Black, Norfolk, Va.

At the beginning of the ceremony, the doors to Memorial hall were locked and the tapping carried out in utmost secrecy. The Jason, leader of the Golden Fleece this year, was revealed as Charles Vance, Winston-Salem. Winston Broadfoot, Wilmington, was Grammateus, and Robert Stockton, Winston-Salem, Christopher.

Following the ceremony the new members were entertained by the old members at a supper at the Carolina Inn where the principal speaker was A. L. M. Wiggins, of Hartsville, S. C., undersecretary of the treasury and former president of the American Bankers association, who was a member of the Fleece when he was a student at the University here.

J. Maryon Saunders, alumni secretary and also a member, introduced Mr. Wiggins.

Intense Interest Centers On Publications Contests

Clampitt, Eller, and Miller Expected To Stage Close Battle for Presidency

By Earl Heffner

Thomas Jefferson has been credited with advocating a periodic revolution for every democratic government. And today students open firing in their annual ballot battle with triangular political forces engaging each other and insurgent independents.

Attention is being centered upon seven major posts, three purely political and four for publications.

For the presidency, Independent Johnny Clampitt matches votes with University Party Bill Miller and doubly-endorsed Tom Eller representing the Campus and Student parties.

The vice-presidency is a strictly party-line fight with Charlie Long (SP), Jack Folger (UP), and Marriote Stewart (CP) carrying their respective party banners with Jim Vogler (CP), John Surratt (UP), and Sam Daniels (SP) striking for the position of secretary-treasurer.

In the publications field, Barron Mills (SP), Bookie Jabine (UP), Roy Moose (CP), and Independent Art Melton seek the DTH post, Fred Jacobson (UP and SP) battles Charles Brockman (CP) to retain his Carolina Magazine editorship, and Tookie Hodgson (SP and UP) fights co-candidates and independents, Eddie Allen and Jud Kinberg for the humor magazine post. Bill Moffit has the Yack sewed up as the only candidate in the field.

All candidates must turn in expenditure statements in Gerrard hall by noon today.

Laboratory Theater Gives 'The Rivals' this Weekend

Graham Memorial will present the Laboratory Theater production of "The Rivals" in the main lounge of the student union on Saturday and Sunday. This comedy of manners, the fourth and final production by the theater during the regular school year, will be directed by Suzanne Davis, one of the four original members of the steering committee of the laboratory formed this year.

"The Rivals" is a complicated story of a young girl of the Restoration period who becomes influenced by the many romantic novels of the day, believing her life should be as exciting as those of heroines in the books. Her aunt and guardian, however, is a firm believer in the old school, demanding to pick a husband for her charge. This part was played on Broadway four years ago by Mary Boland.

Suzanne Davis, wife of associate director of the Playmakers Harry Davis, announced today that the comedy would be presented in the arena style of production used by the Penthouse Players of Seattle and the Blue Room Theater of Portland. The audience will view the show from four sides of the stage.

Having presented medieval comedy, satire and modern dress farce thus far this year, the Laboratory Theater selected Sheridan's "The Rivals" because of its universal appeal. The three acts provide many scenes of subtle humor and outright comedy.

Members of the cast are Eleanor Ringer as Mrs. Malaprop, Pat Palmer as Lydia, Henrietta Cooper as Julia, Maude Baynor Foy as Lucy, Fred Johnson as Absolute, James Warren as Acres, Marty Jacobs as Sir Lucius, Murray McCain as Faulkland, Harry Thomas as Fag, William Sessions as David and Frank Echols as Thomas.

For Your Own Benefit

Today can be a memorable one in the history of student government at Carolina. It is up to each of you, as individual students, to make it so.

Today the largest student body in Carolina's history goes to the polls to elect its student leaders for the coming year, to elect the men who will decide how to spend the greatest amount of student funds in history, who will represent the University on the campus and elsewhere.

Choose your new leaders with care. Vote carefully and wisely, but vote. Exercise your right to vote so that you can be sure to put the men you want in office. In the hands of the student body and its voting power lies the future of student government and leadership at Carolina.

Regardless of personal ties, regardless of whether or not a man is a fraternity man, regardless of whether or not your favorite party has nominated the man—if you consider him the man best fitted to hold office, VOTE for him.

We sincerely and honestly urge the students to disregard the pleas and boasts of the three political parties and to refrain from voting a straight party ticket. No party has the best man for every position running under its banner.

Use care and judgment in choosing your new officers. Vote according to your own convictions, not in accordance with the thoughts of others. Ignore political propaganda. Consider capability and character.

The DTH urges every student with pride in his government to exercise his right at the polls. Vote wisely. VOTE TODAY!

Result of Experience Shown By Excellent April Magazine

By R. Haskell Hamilton

Excluding the war issues of the Carolina Magazine, which I haven't seen, the current issue of the Mag is the best to roll off the presses since Hank Moll's almost legendary "Baby Esquire" issue. Editor Jacobson and competent staff are to be congratulated for finally hitting their stride by presenting to the campus and to the collegiate journalistic world a magazine that will do much to restore Carolina's sagging prestige. The April issue is, I suppose, the natural result of the experience and "know-how" which Jacobson seems to have acquired the hard way over the course of the past year. It is fortunate for the campus that he'll be available next year to lend his talents to editing a readable, good-looking, interesting Mag.

The only weak spot in an otherwise entirely satisfactory issue is the picture of Hallie Dockery which appears on page 23. I had hoped that all such smart-aleckness had been weaned out of the Mag in the realization that such stuff "ain't funny, McGee," but is just plain bad taste.

Aside from that it is a toss up as to whether the best element of the Mag is the professional type photography, the excellent writing or the well-done illustrations. Being partial to pictures, I nominate the photography and choice of pictures as being on a par with any that appear in similar collegiate publications. So, a "well-done" to Photographers Webb, Croner, Patterson, and Conrad.

The fiction and features are superior in the April issues as is the poetry. Vincent Williams "How Shall We Answer," is indicative of the high calibre of our campus poets. Eddie Allen's authoritative, factual, analysis of the "Play for Pay" situation among college athletes should put some light into some of the musty, hush-hush corners of a topic which is judiciously avoided by less courageous publications in much the same fashion that certain other "social diseases" were at the turn of the century.

Other fiction features such as John Sink's "The Austrian," and "The Conqueror's Bargain," besides being solid, well-written fiction brought back a little of the memory and realization of what the war was all about. I don't particularly like war stories but it is good to be reminded every once in a while about the nature of our late enemies and some of the problems which we must solve before we get one-world on a paying basis.

"So Shall it Grow," by Dick Seaver is up to the author's usual high standards. Eleanor Ponder does well by the distaff side of the campus with her "My Kingdom Come." Those of us who are approaching the reunion stage of our college career can appreciate the poignancy, pathos and truisms which are jam-packed into Miss Ponder's little vignette.

Final bouquets are in order for the picture story of the hot dog, horseback picnic and for the excellence of the illustrations by John Sink, John Davis and Clyde Stallings. I'm still a sucker for Stallings' full page cartoontions and a quota of no less than one a month from his pen and nimble brain would do much to put some genuine humor into whatever campus publication will be going in for humor, come after-election-time.

Platforms of Candidates for Leading Campus Offices

Eller:

I base anything which I would say in my behalf upon what I consider to be the three functions of Student Government.

First is the responsibility for representing the Student Body in all dealings with which it is concerned.

Second is the responsibility for the conduct of the Student Body.

Third is the administration of the fee structure.

These are no high sounding and vain materialistic promises which I have to make to the students. The political parties have set their goals for the coming year. They may be assured of my cooperation upon anything which is for improvement.

It is my conviction that, if we are to have a student government, it is our duty to make it positive in the execution of its functions. I believe that experience has shown me the many clearly visible weaknesses in our leadership, major and minor. We will attack these weaknesses.

Melton:

1. More news coverage and more campus news in general, accomplished by a cut in advertising from 60 inches to the page—to the standard newspaper amount of 35 inches.

2. Print Coed news in the same proportion that the Coeds make up the student body—that is—with 1,000 Coeds in a student body of 7000, one seventh of the current news space devoted to Coed news. Especially will there be emphasis placed on the publication of Women's Athletic Association and Sorority news. Coed news will rate the same play that other news now rates, large size headlines, more photographs, etc.

3. Print enough copies of the Daily Tar Heel so that every student may receive one and establish a distribution system that will insure each student against his not receiving the Daily Tar Heel he now pays for.

4. An open door policy at the Editor's office—immediate attention to all complaints—publication of articles submitted or immediate rejection with an explanation by the editor. In general—news will be published regardless of whether or not you know the editor or a friend of the editor.

5. Publication of orientation articles about campus organizations, University functions, history and traditions, and many other things that all freshmen should be acquainted with—things that many upper classmen have never been introduced to.

In addition to these basic policies, Melton will strive to obtain a paper of more pages and to make the Daily Tar Heel a campus newspaper with its primary interest—student news—a campus newspaper by the students—about the students—for the students.

Miller:

1. Recreational facilities for dormitory residents.
2. Better seating at UNC football games.
3. A reorganized and revitalized Town Association.
4. A Daily Tar Heel devoted to campus affairs, rather than obscure international events.
5. All-out encouragement to the new campus humor mage.
6. A regular report of the Student Legislature's activities to the Student Body.
7. A new system of registration, allowing the student to pick his hours and professors whenever possible, and giving preference only to Seniors and hardship cases.
8. All possible agitation to make the new Student Union Building, already on the Drafting board, a reality.
9. MORE DANCES OPEN TO THE STUDENT BODY.
10. Recreational facilities for Victory Village.

Clampitt:

1. Try to co-ordinate all the groups of student government so that they can work with utmost efficiency to fulfill the best promises of all parties.
2. Complete orientation for incoming students on honor code, campus code, and student government.
3. Complete orientaton for the faculty on honor code, campus code, and student government.
4. Work with South building as a STUDENT representative.
5. Try to get programs set up far enough ahead of time to insure careful thought and sufficient publicity in order that it reach all students in time and in its best form.
6. Try to make convocations more enjoyable by having band and glee club so that they can once again become a binding force in student government.
7. Welcome at any time, any suggestion, from any student, on any phase of campus life or student government.
8. As an independent president, to give U.N.C. a STUDENT government without any party lines.

Moose:

FIRST: A return to truthful, factual reporting and mature judgment in DTH articles and editorials, rather than the type material that has characterized the paper in the past.

SECOND: To make of the DTH a strong STUDENT newspaper, free from biased and power-mad factions. To this end I pledge a firm NO to the pressure groups that seek to control the paper's policy. The campus newspaper is one student activity that should be independent of political control.

THIRD: To institute a weekly OPEN COLUMN whereby students not on the staff may write a column on any subject they so desire. This is a prime necessity in making the publication a student paper, for each student is certainly entitled to his views in the paper.

FOURTH: To strive for wider coverage of campus news with an objective evaluation of news significance, and to devote to the coeds the

Mills:

1. A revision of the editorial page to include editorials written on campus news and problems rather than devoting too much space to student comment on world events. Make the DTH a student publication in practice rather than in name only.

2. Guarantee the student body a nonpartisan publication.

3. Include coeds on the editorial staff so that they will have a voice in the editorial policies of the paper. Also devote some space for coed columnists to write on events of coed interest.

4. Continue my fight for an eight-column newspaper. This would provide one and one-half times as much space for each issue.

5. Fight to increase the advertising rates so as to cut down the space monopolized by advertisements and also to make the advertisements carry more than 27 percent of the cost of the publication.

6. Guarantee the student body a publication that will include all campus newsworthy events without any discrimination whatsoever.

7. Require that all editorials that are not a product of the editor himself be signed by the writer so that the reader may know the source of editorial thought.

8. Improve circulation methods and as soon as the newsprint shortage is eased print enough copies so that each student will be delivered one.

9. Put an end to the practice of printing a student's picture and then sending a bill for the costs. The publication fees are sufficient to cover the costs of engraving and I will try to get the engraving budget raised. This will not effect student fees.

10. Put an end to quibbling in the columns of the DTH among the members of the staffs of the various publications.

11. Letters to the Editor will not be suppressed. Suppression of a Letter to the Editor would be a direct blow to kill your freedom of the press.

Jabine:

(1) A more progressive administration consisting of a staff of editors and reporters who will seek news not otherwise contributed. Thus a complete coverage of campus affairs will be assured.

(2) An improved editorial page with columns emphasizing humor and student activities and interests rather than articles on national and international problems.

(3) A better proportionment of advertising so that no issues will appear in which important news items are sacrificed to the inclusion of advertisements.

(4) A more efficient circulation.

(5) More accurate reporting and better make-up and headlines.

(6) More variation in the types of stories which appear from issue to issue.

(7) A representative and unbiased editorial policy.

NOT TODAY

Due to the large amount of election news and literature in today's issue of the DTH, the "I'd Rather Be Right" column by Earl Heffner, a regular Tuesday feature of this newspaper, will not appear.

Statement from Honor Council

Below is a statement by the Men's Honor Council presenting its members views on the proposed court amendment to the constitution.

Last Thursday evening, John ——— appeared before the Student Council, appealing a decision handed down Tuesday by the Men's Honor Council. His argument—"I was guilty, all right, but I think the punishment given me was unduly harsh." The Student Council therefore reviewed the same testimony and evidence heard by the original council (for any newly introduced evidence would have automatically thrown the case back to the court of original jurisdiction), and decided that John's sentence should be lightened. This was the fourth time in three weeks that a decision of the Women's or Men's Council had been changed. The result—upon hearing this, the members of both the "inferior" courts resigned their positions. Here are the main reasons for this action:

1. Why should they spend four or five hours of their good studying time trying to reach a decision which they think is just and fair only to have it all nullified by another group of STUDENTS who could have decided it all in the first place?

2. This second group is made up of the same type people—students—who have had no more experience than they (actually less, since this group hears only appeal cases—approximately 1/40 of all cases).

3. The members of the appellate council, since they are chosen from the same source—the student body—could not necessarily be any more capable or mature in rendering a more intelligent decision than those on the lower court. Yet, since they render the final decision, it would appear otherwise. Any change in the original decision would intimate lack of good judgment on the part of the members rendering the first sentence. Why have all this friction and hard feelings which is only natural when it can be prevented by having ONE STUDENT COURT? Any variation in two decisions made by a student group and a faculty group would be taken in stride, for the knowledge of a more mature, experienced group could be appreciated.

4. During the forty-eight hours between the two decisions, friends of John, who is a popular boy on the campus, approached friend members of the student appellate council and made it very evident what a good fellow John really is. "It would be a crime to punish him so harshly," they said. Those on the original court heard none of this sympathy angle. Neither would the faculty appellate court.

5. What will happen to the Honor Code if different interpretations by students keep appearing? There should be ONE Honor System, and two student courts won't permit it. Therefore it will be for all concerned to eliminate one.

The case of John ——— cited above is ficticious, and the results have not occurred—yet. But it could very easily happen. It almost did happen, in fact, under the new constitution.

Recognizing the need for a change, your leaders in the Legislature have passed an amendment. It was backed by those immediately concerned with the workings of an efficient Honor System—the president and past presidents of the student body, present and past members of ALL THREE councils. Under this amendment the Student Council will decide on the constitutionality of legislative acts and the various activities of student groups and any constitutions they might form for their workings. Appeals, as it used to be, will go directly to the more mature, experienced, and wiser faculty executive committee, ⅓ of whose members are chosen by the defendent. Thus all of the possible conflicts and hard feelings mentioned above could never arise. Those of you who were here before the war saw what the Honor System can mean on this Campus. Then we had ONE student court.

You have read opinion of the Women's Council on this matter in another article. It ended with the statement that any criticism presented pertained strictly to the appellate feature of the present constitution. This certainly holds true here also, and members of the Student Council should feel in no way that any personal reflections have been cast. We are trying to prevent such a situation by presenting the story before it happens.

The Men's Council urges each student to get out and vote today and to ratify all of the amendments presented not by the necessary ⅔ majority, of those voting, but by the 100% affirmative vote of the entire student body. Let's bring a really effective Honor System back to Carolina!

Letters To The Editor

Yell For Experience

Dear Sir:

Out of the candidates nominated and running for the office, there is one who, with his practical experience and crowd appeal, should be given especial thought before the balloting. His name is Michie Faulconer, rising senior from Burlington. Faulconer was a member of the squad from 1944 to 1946, and has showed his capabilities in this field. In this coming year when our athletic teams will reach the peak of prominence, nothing should go wrong, and it would be a mistake to misjudge the importance of cheerleading. In the past year a certain amount of criticism has been levied on the failure of the present squad to capture the spirit of the crowd. This cannot happen next year. For this reason we need a man who knows the ropes, and one who can select the most representative squad possible. Faulconer seems to be the most capable of the candidates.

Linksmen Seek Seventh in Row

Undefeated Golfers Battle Wake Forest

Carolina's links-loving golfers will be seeking their seventh straight win of the season this afternoon when the undefeated Tar Heels tee off against the Demon Deacons of Wake Forest at Hope Valley Country club. The first foursome will go out at 1:30.

Coach Chuck Erickson will probably count on his same starting sextet which still seems infected with the victory habit.

This would put holin' Harvey Ward at the No. 1 position playing with Junie Bailey at No. 2. Durable Dick Doeschler will be at No. 3 with the silent one, Ray Taylor, at the No. 4 spot. At the No. 5 berth stands mighty Mike Nolan, with Bob Cox filling the No. 6 slot. Ed Ashby, who has been the only other team member to break into the starting lineup, may be a last-minute replacement for Cox.

This afternoon's match will be the last one for the locals before the long-awaited battle with Duke, on tap for Thursday.

The Deacons have shown little during the season thus far and should be no match for the Tar Heels. However the local lads were none too impressive in their last outing against State and may be in for trouble if they do not show some improvement.

Coach Erickson again made the statement yesterday that all interested spectators may follow the linksmen around the 6,700-yard layout and no admission is charged.

COACH TOM SCOTT

Seventeen Men Report For Basketball Drills

The hardwood sport returned to Carolina yesterday afternoon, when 17 men reported to Coach Tom Scott for three weeks of spring practice.

Plans call for the squad to be split into four teams for the first two weeks with several scrimmages a week on tap. The third week will see the group split into two units with practice games scheduled throughout the week.

Scott emphasized that "the workouts will feature fundamentals plus defensive play."

Five lettermen from the White Phantoms of 1946-47 were on hand for the initial practice. Also working out were many members of last season's fine freshman and jayvee squads. Lettermen were John Dillon, Norm Kohler, Nemo Nearman, Roger Scholbe and Dick Hartley. The other two lettermen who will be back next season, Bob Paxton and Taylor Thorne, will be out later in the week.

Yesterday's session was devoted to limbering up, dribbling and passing, plus some running on the floor.

These workouts now are only for those men who were notified by Coach Scott and later there will be a call for all those students interested in playing basketball.

Baseball Crew Meets Deacons

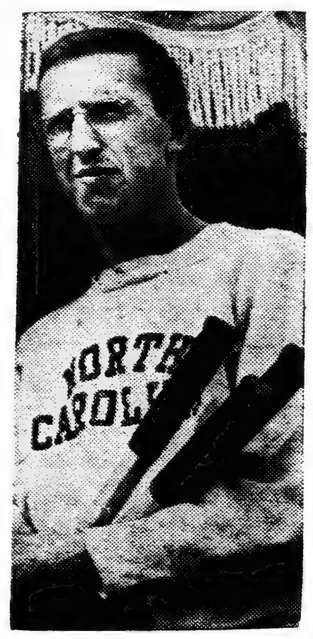
DiLorenzo to Seek Fifth Straight Win

By Bob Goldwater

Carolina's baseball outfit plays the first of four road games scheduled for this week this afternoon when the Tar Heels travel to Wake Forest to battle the Demon Deacons in a Big Four tilt slated for 3:30 o'clock.

Today's contest will be the third meeting between the two clubs this year, with one clash, a 9-9 stalemate, to be played off sometime next week in addition to an encounter already scheduled. Carolina is currently camped in second place in the Big Four standings while the Wakemen are in the cellar.

Vinnie DiLorenzo, who already holds a 4-3 triumph over the Deacons this season, is Coach Walter Rabb's choice to take the mound this afternoon. Only undefeated hurler on the Blue and White staff, the New Jersey southpaw will be seeking his fifth win.



The rest of the Carolina batting order will be the same as that which started against Duke in the rained-out tussle Saturday, with one exception. The lone change will come at the shortstop post, where Rip Ryan will take over for Dallas Branch.

Although Coach Murray Greason's choice for mound duty is not certain, it is expected that the veteran Wake mentor will nominate Elmer Sexauer, a righthander, to oppose the Tar Heels.

Following today's encounter, the Carolina club will depart tomorrow for a four-day trip into Virginia and Maryland. The Tar Heels engage Virginia Thursday, Maryland Friday, and wind up the tour against Richmond Saturday.

Netmen Risk Perfect Record In Match Against Davidson

Clash Set for 3 o'Clock on Local Courts; Locals Battle William and Mary Tomorrow

By Billy Carmichael

Carolina's smooth-swinging netmen will put their undefeated string of 18 straight wins on the line this afternoon when they take the courts against the potent racqueteers of Davidson college at 3 o'clock on the local flats.

The Tar Heels, recently returned from a successful northern tour which saw them win five consecutive matches, will be in top form for the encounter, their last before the all-important William and Mary tilt set for Wednesday.

Singles Posts

Vic Seixas will be in the No. 1 position for the locals, with Clark Taylor at No. 2, Stan Gruner at No. 3, Don Skakle or Jack Kenfield at No. 4, Ray Morris at No. 5, and Jim Nicholson at the No. 6 berth.

In the doubles, Seixas and Taylor will team to play the top duo, with Kenfield and Charlie Rice at No. 2, and Skakle and Nicholson filling out the third combination.

The Wildcats of Davidson come to town with a star-studded aggregation led by such pacemakers as Bo Roddy, one of the South's leading juniors last season.

The Tar Heels have a tough week ahead, even after today, as the Indians of William and Mary, winners of 37 straight triumphs and called by experts "one of the greatest college teams ever assembled," arrive here tomorrow to provide the supreme test of the season for the locals.

Thursday, the Southern conference tourney gets underway here in Chapel Hill with entries already received from Duke, State, William and Mary, Maryland, Citadel, Davidson, and, of course, the host team, Carolina.

Coach John Kenfield has sent out an urgent call for officials for the Southern conference tennis tournament to be held on the local courts this Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

All interested persons should contact one of the tennis managers today or tomorrow down at the varsity courts. Officiating will include work as umpires and linesmen.

Sharpe Whiffs 14 As Jayvees Whip Greensboro, 7-6

By Irwin Smallwood

It turned out to be old home day at Emerson field yesterday, and a pair of former Greensboro high baseballers turned their talents to the advantage of the Carolina Jayvees to edge out visiting Greensboro high school 7-6 in a nip and tuck ball game.

The two teams fought on almost even terms all the way, and the Whirlies from the Gate City appeared to have clinched the victory when they scored twice in the top of the ninth to come from behind and take a one-run lead. However, in the bottom of the ninth, relief hurler Dave Durtner put two runners on base with a walk and hit batsman, and Williard Hobbs, one of the two former Greensboro lads figuring in the win, stepped to the plate and slapped the ball into the bushes in deep left field to drive in the tying and winning runs.

Hobbs, a first baseman who was also the slugging star in the initial Jayvee victory over Cherry Point, would have received credit for his second home run of the season except for the ruling which states that the ball must be out of the park to count as a home run when the blow bats in the winning run in the last of the ninth inning.

Leslie Sharpe, a left-handed rookie hurler for Carolina, is also a former Greensboro high school operative and he allowed only five hits to gain his first victory of the season. Sharpe, whose drop ball worked with relentless effectiveness all afternoon, whiffed a total of 14 Greensboro batters. Two of the runs scored against Sharpe came as the result of errors in the second inning.

Righthander Jim Staton started on the hill for Greensboro and had given up only four hits and three runs until the eighth inning. But in the eighth, Staton went wild and three walks and an error gave Carolina two more tallies. He was taken out for a pinch-hitter in the ninth and the winning runs were scored off the relief hurler.

Leftfielder Jerry Allen and Rightfielder Mutt Thrift scored in the ninth ahead of Hobbs' blow, and Thrift's triple in the third inning provided one of the Tar Heel runs.

Score by innings:

Greensboro ... 002 101 002—6 5 2
Carolina (JC) 002 010 022—7 5 4

representation they rightly deserve.

FIFTH: To strive to make the DTH an eight-column, full sized newspaper rather than the high school appearance it now has. A school of 7000 students can certainly fill the pages of a paper of such magnitude.

SIXTH: To drive toward the ultimate goal of a student owned printshop. This is a long range point involving many difficulties but until Carolina possesses its own printshop, in the manner of the nationally recognized University of Missouri, the DTH will continue to take a back seat among college publications.

The above six points are vital and necessary innovations, and to the attainment of these points I pledge my utmost efforts, time, and abilities.

Officials Say Phone Strike End in Sight

A.T. and T. Presents Third Wage Proposal

Washington, May 6—(UP)—Government conciliators say they are, in their words, "within an eyelash" of settlement of the national telephone strike. The mediators say that A. T. and T. made its third wage offer at a collective bargaining session late today and that the offer was the best that has been made so far.

Union telephone negotiators are expected to give their answer tonight to an improved company wage proposal.

The American Telephone and Telegraph company made an offer to its 20,000 striking long-lines employes earlier today. Negotiations were recessed until three o'clock this afternoon to give the union representatives time to consider it.

Meantime, the deadlock was broken in another key phase of the phone strike involving 40,000 striking workers of the Southwestern Bell Telephone company. The Southwestern negotiations were transferred back to St. Louis after the company promised to make a cash wage offer before the end of the week.

Aid to Greece-Turkey Passes Major Hurdle

Capitol Hill, May 6—(UP)—President Truman's $400,000,000 Greek-Turkish aid bill has successfully hurdled its first obstacle in the House. The representatives, by a standing vote of 168 to 22, have agreed to a rule calling for nine hours of general debate on the measure.

UN Assembly to Hear Arab, Jewish Groups

Lake Success, May 6—(UP)—The United Nations General Assembly has agreed to give both the Arab higher committee and the Jewish agency for Palestine a hearing. The proposal to let both Arab and Jewish groups speak before the political committee of the assembly was advanced by the United States, after Arab nations had threatened to boycott assembly debate on the Palestine question.

Eller Takes Command In Presidential Balloting

Mills Snatches Early Lead In DTH Editorship Race

Fred Jacobson Running Away With Mag Vote

Hodgson Takes Lead Over Allen-Kinberg

By Earl Heffner

With nearly three-fourths of the vote counted, Student Party and DTH Candidate Barron Mills hung onto an early lead in the race for the Daily Tar Heel editorship, taking 936 votes while second place University party Candidate Bookie Jabine polled 779 votes in the ballot battle according to latest returns.

Indications point to a runoff between the two leaders with Roy Moose, Campus party nominee and Independent Art Melton polling 384 and 128 votes respectively.

Although fewer ballots had been tabulated at press time, Incumbent Editor Fred Jacobson apparently has received a vote of confidence from the student body with his overwhelming lead of 819 votes to 378 for Campus party candidate Charles Brockman. Jacobson was doubly-endorsed by the University and Student parties.

Balloting for the editorship of the newly-created humor magazine pointed to a victory for Matt "Tookie" Hodgson over Independent Co-Editor Candidates Eddie Allen and Jud Kinberg. Hodgson is running with UP and SP endorsement.

Bill Moffit, happily lonesome in his one-man race for the Yack editorship, is an automatic and unanimous victor.

Bob Madry Re-Elected As Chapel Hill Mayor

Not only the campus, but the town of Chapel Hill held elections yesterday, re-electing Bob Madry as mayor, with a total vote of 694 being cast. Madry defeated Paul H. Robertson for the post.

For the position of judge of Recorder's court, H. A. Whitfield nosed out John T. Manning by 385 to 304.

Four aldermen were elected in an uncontested part of the election, there being only four people running for the office. G. O. Davis received 505 votes, R. J. M. Hobbs—511, P. L. Burch—491, E. B. Patterson—536.

Jiving Starts Tonight....

Open Air Dancing Features Annual Senior Week Opening

Open air dancing in the Y court to the music of Ned Reap and his Graham Memorial Dream Serenaders will furnish the opening of the annual senior week program tonight. The "Saddle Shoe Stomp," open to the campus, will get under way in the Y court at 8:30.

Tonight's dance will be strictly informal, with no coats or ties necessary. The soda fountain in the YMCA will be kept open throughout the evening to provide drinks and ice cream for thirsty dancers. While the dance is open to all who can come, all seniors and their dates are particularly urged to attend. The Graham Memorial Dream Serenaders boast one of the top campus bands and were featured at the pre-elections hop Monday night.

The "Saddle Shoe Stomp" will be the opening feature of this year's senior week, which will include a "Barefoot day" tomorrow and the annual junior-senior dance Friday evening in Woollen gym.

Last Gathering

Purpose of the entire program is to give all graduating seniors an opportunity to get together this week for fun and enjoyment before they leave Carolina in the near future. No admission will be charged to the dance tonight, which will be patterned after the numerous Y court dances held last summer. Gayety and informality will be the order of the evening.

Tomorrow, all seniors have been asked to go barefooted as an annual symbol of senior week. By strolling around the campus without shoes, all seniors will be easily identifiable to everyone. Purpose of the plan is to provide amusement for both seniors and other students.

Friday night, Sammy Fletcher and the Duke Ambassadors, well-known college band, will play for the semi-final junior-senior dance, a yearly social event which provides the senior class with its last chance to socialize together.

Landscape Changes As Century-Old Oak Bows for Progress

A resident of Chapel Hill almost as old as the University itself died Monday, a victim to the march of modern progress.

One of the graceful post oaks standing on the central campus in front of the library building, the tree had shaded the walk leading to Murphy and Bingham for almost a century and a half. This week it fell before the axe and saw of workmen to clear the way for the heating tunnel being constructed between the old power plant and the new dormitories on Raleigh street.

Workmen began the execution shortly after two o'clock Monday afternoon. An hour later the cry of "Timber" sounded its death knoll, and as the stately oak crashed its seventy foot length to the ground the bells in the carillon tower pealing out the hour of three rang out a requiem for another campus landmark.

Folger Leading in Campaign For Vice President's Post

Bill Miller, Johnny Clampitt in Fight For Chance to Gain Presidential Runoff

By Chuck Hauser

With reports trickling in slowly and uncertainly, at press time last night Tom Eller was surging ahead with a wide margin of votes for the presidential post of the student body, the total vote coming to approximately 3400 ballots cast. Bill Miller and Johnny Clampitt were battling to gain the runoff position.

Jack Folger was leading in the vice-presidential race, also with a large margin over his opponents. A runoff with Charlie Long was indicated.

John Surratt, candidate for secretary-treasurer, was running a neck-and-neck race in the final tabulations with Jim Vogler, Sam Daniels remaining not far behind.

In the head cheerleader department, Moffatt "Myrt" Sherard was holding a comfortable lead over his several opponents, with Charlie Stancell coming in a poor second.

The Carolina Athletic association posts of president and vice-president seemed to be going to Jack Fitch and Bob Cox, respectively.

The tabulation of the balloting at press time was as follows:

President: Eller, 1147; Miller, 763; Clampitt, 604.

Vice president: Jack Folger, 790; Charlie Long, 482; Marriote Stewart, 348.

Secretary-treasurer: John Surratt, 671; Sam Daniels, 592; Jim Vogler, 486.

Head cheerleader: Sherard, 480; Stancell, 290; Adams, 224; Faulconer, 124; Stefanou, 98.

Carolina Athletic association: President: Jack Fitch, 372; Bobby Weant, 140. Vice-president: Bob Cox, 287; Monk Whiteheart, 176; Dan Logue, 98.

Jacobs Appointed As Pharmacy Dean For 5-Year Period

Dr. Marion Lee Jacobs, who was appointed assistant Dean of the School of Pharmacy in July, 1945, and who had been acting dean since the death of Dean J. Grover Beard a year ago, has been appointed dean for a five-year period by the University trustees, on recommendation of Chancellor Robert B. House and President Frank P. Graham, it was announced today.

Dean Jacobs is a graduate of the School of Pharmacy and has been a member of the faculty since 1926. He is a native of Wake County.

As a student in the University he made a fine record in pharmacy and in his final year served as student assistant in the laboratories. Upon graduation with the degree of Ph.C., he passed the State board and became a registered pharmacist. In further preparation for teaching he studied at the University of Nebraska from which he holds B.S. and M.S. degrees. His Ph.D. was obtained at the University of Maryland.

He taught for a time at both the University of Nebraska and at the University of Colorado before the late Dean E. V. Howell called him back to Chapel Hill in 1926 to teach courses in pharmacy and pharmaceutical chemistry. He has done considerable research, principally in the fields of drug plant analysis and drug assaying, and he has published a number of papers on professional subjects in the leading scientific journals.

PRE-REGISTRATION

Pre-registration appointments for General college students may be made at the Information desk in South building instead of in Memorial hall, according to an announcement by Dean C. P. Spruill, Jr., last night.

Along with Usual Quota of Dogs...

Blonde Betty Greve Crowned Queen of May in Ceremonies

Betty Greve, beautiful blonde senior from Atlanta, Ga., was crowned Queen of the May at picturesque ceremonies in the Forest theater Sunday afternoon.

Accompanied by her maid of honor, Anne Cutts of Cordele, Gr., and nine other attendants, she was crowned with a wreath of flowers by Chancellor Robert B. House.

A large audience, including many children and the usual quota of Chapel Hill dogs, witnessed the pageant which began with the search of Lord Mixenfixer, the Prime Minister (Vincent Cassidy) for the Queen. Other court characters were the jester, portrayed by James Riley, and Prince Lovealot, Bill Taylor.

Foreign dancers who performed for the Prime Minister but failed to please him were Janet Green, Chapel Hill, who took the role of a Scottish queen; Dolly Donelson, Danville, Va., Siamese; Anne Dubs, Hartford, Conn., Spanish; Anne Garrett, Danville, Va., Arabian, and Frances Johnson, Chapel Hill, and Mae Belle Enman, Asheville, Russian.

Others participating in the group dances included Byrd Cornwell and Venitah Sanders, Chapel Hill; Helen Xanthos, Fayetteville; Clyde Fussell, Teachey; William Hooks, Whiteville; Harry McGirt, Wilmington, and Dick Johnson, Chapel Hill, all under the direction of Nancy Brock, head of the University Modern Dance club.

Other members of her court were Elsie Mac Cushman, Conway, S. C.; Gloria Gautier, Miami, Fla.; Carolyn Disbro, Atlanta, Ga.; Nancy Saunders, Reidsville; Margaret Jean Taylor, Asheville; Anne Cobb, Winston-Salem; Gladney Holder, Atlanta, Ga.; Barbara Lynn, High Point, and Betty Kandrick, Jamaica, British West Indies.

Secret Balloting?

Carolina went to the polls yesterday. Virtually from sunup to sundown a steady stream of voters at the four balloting places X'ed in their choices for student leaders. It was quickly apparent that a heavy, possibly a record, turnout was in the offing.

Election officials had their work cut out for them. Although theirs was a thankless job, they sweated out those typically interminable Carolina lines. Then they emptied the boxes and began the equally-gruelling vote count.

All was well at Gerrard Hall, at least to the casual eye, and things were run off as efficiently as possible. But from the lower quad precincts, from Aycock and Lenoir, came alarmed rumors that UNC's interpretation of the Australian ballot had taken a kangaroo jump for the worse. There was talk of open discussion of candidates by whole groups of voters, of coaching by some enthausiastic ward heelers of undecided exercisers of the democratic principles.

The DTH checked on those reports in the early hours of the afternoon, saw only a handful of less flagrant instances. Which, of course, was not positive proof that illegal balloting had not occured earlier or that there was not then ample opportunity for it. At Alderman one coed was seen to receive an explanation of the proposed constitution amendments—a minor shying from the rules, true, but nevertheless, a departue from idea of the secret ballot.

Although the elections officials as a whole probably performed well, there was obvious need for improvement. There primary failing was a sufficiently large staff to monitor efficiently and legally the scattered polling places. As a by-product of the three new voting places, too, there came the confusion and laxness which could give anyone who wished to contest some of the boxes legitimate grounds for complaint.

The DTH would be sorry to see the need of another election, but it is the duty of the Elections committee, as late as today if necessary, to check into the credible reports of mis-voting. Each elections monitor should be questioned as to any illegal action he may have witnessed.

As we say, it would be unfortunate to call for a general revote or to throw out the tabulations from any of the precincts. But if, in the opinion of the committee, a sufficient number of voters violated the secret ballot or any other elections ruling, then that is the only way. In any event, future committees can take close notice and keep choosing of campus officers as much as possible on the straight and narrow.

A Career Job

The Graham Memorial Board of Directors is now in the process of choosing the person who is to guide the activities of our student union.

The Union is a live organization. Its purpose is to serve the student body with as many facilities as practicable. Comprising publication offices, a travel agency, the student audit board, etc., it is a city in miniature.

Thus, the directorship of the union takes on the aspects of of a career job. Present regulations provide that the director hold office for two years, which makes it worthwhile to speculate whether it may be advisable to extend the term of office.

Two years is a short time. It is frequently necessary that a director spend almost one year in getting the feeling of his responsible position. His job of coordinating and directing is a diverse one. Furthermore, the psychological effect of knowing that he will be relieved of his duties at the termination of two years is like a barrier to full development of his abilities. There is relatively little gained by being overly-conscientious, and any improvements while in office are marked off as a benefit accruing to the successor. The two-year term, therefore, can all too easily stop the natural aspirations of one who may want to make a career out of his position with an eye on the future.

It might be of advantage to many if the GM Board of Directors saw fit to look into this matter before making its far-reaching decision.—P. G.

Student Given Close Call By Equine Traffic Problem

By Dick Savage

Late one afternoon in a past week I came out of Murphy hall and marvelled at how peaceful the campus was in this last, lingering hour of the day I took a few steps up the walk and at the next moment was almost trampled upon by a horse. Now I had been warned by my father of the dangers of college life, but this danger had been overlooked in his discourse. I made a low, apologetic bow to the horse and rider and stepped back out of the way.

In a mild daze I watched the animal prance across the lawn in front of South Building, throwing up great clods of turf with its dainty hoofs. As he reached the very front of the building I expected to see the rider dismount and blow a trumpet—at which point someone in South Building would lower a drawbridge and horse and rider would then clatter up the bridge and disappear into the building.

Still taken up with my fond, whimsical musings I once more started on my way. This time I came very near bumping into the posterior end of another horse. Again I made a low, sweeping bow and stepped aside. . . since it is only the nobility who ride horseback, it was only fitting that I, one of the canaille, should make proper obeisance. However, this horse was not prancing. It was thin and pluggish-looking and the rider was short and dumpy.

Hmmmm, I thought, a 20th Century Don Quixote! I began to look around for signs of more horses to fill out this strange caravan making its trek across the middle of the campus.

It's my opinion that university officials should require a blowing of trumpets or a siren or something with which to warn foolish, indiscreet students such as myself who have the presumption to wander about the campus and get in the way of the horseback riders. It's true that students who are so careless or audacious as to make a nuisance of themselves to these riders are hardly fit to live; but after all, this is the Christian era and the university should take some measures to preserve even their foolish lives.

As I watched this last knight-errant bounce dumpily along on his charge like a sack of Purina hog-feed I automatically began to wonder whether I could corner the market on hitching-posts which will soon be in great demand when there are more horses available to the students! Musing thusly, I walked on, kicking aside several gored, mis-shapen bodies of students who hadn't been quite so fortunate as I in getting out of the way.

* * *

I saw by the evening paper last week that James Street, author, let down his hair before an "enthusiastic audience" at the Y.W.C.A. in Durham. He described writing as a "big business with all the attendant evils" and told how he wrote "The Gauntlet" because his agent informed him that the time was "ripe for a spiritual novel" concerning protestants.

Now when I read this I began to curse my own agent, Bittersweet Bixby, for not being more alert about such matters. I hurried to the telephone to put through a long distance call to California where Bittersweet vacations at Carmel-by-the-Sea 11 months out of the year on royalties from my novels.

A drowzy, soporific voice answered the phone.

"Bittersweet," I began angrily, "I've a good mind to fire you!"

"What's the matter?"

"I don't suppose you were aware of it," I said sarcastically, "but last year the time was ripe for a spiritual novel about protestants and we wasted time publishing 'A Key to "Forever Amber."' Now it the time is ripe for a spiritual novel I don't want to waste it writing about social and ethical problems. Get on the ball, Bittersweet!"

"What time of year is it?" yawned my agent.

"It's April. Damn it, Bittersweet, you've been eating lotus buds again, haven't you?"

"Well," he explained drowzily, "lotus bud parties are popular out here and besides I've got to make contacts for you.' '

"Ordinarily," I said, "I don't approve of such evil tactics to get people to buy my books. But Savage's Ivory-Tower Inc., is a big business and we can't allow it to go on the rocks."

"I'll get out my almanac," said Bittersweet, "and call you back after I've consulted it. I'll be able to tell better what kind of a nove the time is ripe for when I've looked it over."

"All right. But don't go eating anymore lotus buds or I won't hear from you for months. And by that time the Ivory-Tower Inc. will be insolvent!"

With this grim warning I hung up. Of all the evils attendant on this business of writing, I thought, agents who eat lotus buds are the worst!

Scholarship Committee Reviews Applications

The University Scholarship committee is now reviewing applications of 42 North Carolina high school seniors for the Herbert Worth Jackson scholarship which will be awarded this month for the coming school year of 1947-48. Valued at $500 a year for a period of four years, the scholarship is awarded annualy to a North Carolina boy on the basis of scholastic achievement, qualities of leadership and promise of future distinction.

Previous holders of this scholarship are: Nelson Ferebee Taylor, Oxford, who graduated in June 1942; John Meredith Simms, Raleigh, William McNeely, Greensboro, and Charles Britt, Goldsboro, all now enrolled in the University.

Letters To The Editor

Number, Please!

To the Editor:

It is suggested that more emphasis be placed on the proposals to instal telephone booths in the dormitories. I'm sure that the acoustics in some of the dorms would rival Carnegie Hall in all its glory.

I'm sure, also, that if all the neuroses created by the cacaphony of sound which issue from the rooms, rest rooms, and halls during abortive telephone conversations were eliminated an era of undreamed-of harmony and effiiciency would prevail on the campus. Further, it is possible that some of the vandalism, reckless driving, and other turmoil which exists is merely the sublimation of desires to shoot the guy who slams doors or indulges in still cruder forms of asaninity while one tries to arrange a date or talk to folks at home.

When I answered the phone in Everett dorm the other night (during what sounded like the pre-invasion barrage at Tarawa), a co-ed was trying to get her boy friend to the phone and I thought she was trying to tell me that her horse won the third at Hialeah.

And while we're having phone booths installed in the dorms we might re-design Memorial hall along dormitory lines—I'm certain there would be no need for a loud speaker system there.

Apologies

Dear Sir:

This letter from those who staged the imaginary atomic bomb attack on New York City at Lenoir Wednesday to those who were unduly scared by the realism of it. To those who were really scared by it, especially those from the New York area, we offer our sincere apologies.

As one boy from New York put it, "I agree with your objectives, but I think that that was taking it too far." In many ways it was taking it too far. Our objective was to bring home forcefully the fact that the atomic bomb is a menace to all people everywhere as long as it remains in the hands of national governments. The atom is a world problem and must be controlled by a world atomic authority.

Since Wednesday we have heard several suggestions of ways we might have accomplished our objective without unreasonably alarming a number of students. One was that we should have announced at the start that this was an imaginary report of what can and may happen if the bomb is not internationally controlled. Another was that instead of New York we should have chosen some city on the West Coast such as Seattle, Washington, since few or no students from Seattle would be at Lenoir.

At present it is hard to say whether we did more harm than good. In the long run it may be that even some of those from New York will say that they'd rather be scared to death if it leads to desirable action, than to be bombed to death in the future because we—the people—failed to realize the necessity for intrnational atomic control. Of course that's asking a lot, at least at the moment, of the folks from New York.

Even though the eventful results of the fake report will probably be good, to those who were greatly alarmed by it we again offer our sincere apologies.

What Do YOU Say?

By Harry Snowden

Today's Question

Why did you vote in the campus elections?

Answers

I voted out of sheer relief. After all the ridiculous campaigning it was a great pleasure to have an end to it.—Sandy Minnix, Atlantic City, N. J.

I voted in hopes of seeing a more representative student government and an end to the rule of the "20%" who have run the campus so long.—Spence Qualls, Boone.

I voted because I believe that all the students should raise their voices and express their opinions in student government, otherwise it wouldn't be student government. — Bill Cooke, Yanceyville.

Everybody is doing it!— George Stenhouse, Goldsboro.

Carolina is in need of better student government. I voted in the hopes that this need would be fulfilled. One vote won't achieve this need, but if everyone votes it will—I hope.—Edward Goodman, New Rochelle, N. Y.

I voted because I wanted to see some representatives in the student government who will represent the majority of the student body.—Bob Smith, Ruffin.

Although one of the uninitiated in the ways of political intrigue as one sees them at Carolina, I voted primarily because I am a coed, a member of the bloc whose interest in the past has proved all too superficial. I am no modernized suffragette, for I feel that until coeds take advantage of what political opportunities are offered them, they should make no complaints about male dominance in elections.—Bess Buchanan, Alderman.

Baseballers Battle Wake Forest To Stalemate Again, 4-4

Important Duel Rated Toss-Up

Running Events Begin at 4 p. m.

Starting at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon, Carolina will seek its first Southern conference dual meet win when the Tar Heels tangle with the Blue Devils of Duke. The meet will be run at Fetzer Field.

The running events are scheduled to get under way at 4 o'clock, and several of the feature races of the day will be the 100-yard dash, the 220-yard dash, the 440-yard run and the 880-yard run.

Schedule of events:
3:30—Shot Put, Javelin, High Jump and Pole Vault
4:00—One Mile Run
4:10—440-yard run
4:15—Broad Jump and Discus
4:20—100-yard dash
4:30—120-yard high hurdles
4:40—880-yard run
4:50—220-yard dash
5:00—Two Mile run
5:10—220-yard low hurdles
5:20—One Mile Relay

These are the positions where Duke boasts power in the form of Doug Ausbon in the dashes and Roger Neighborgal in the middle distances. Neighborgal is undefeated in the half-mile and Coaches Bob Fetzer, Dale Ranson and Joe Hilton will more than likely shoot one of the aces of the distance staff into this event. It will probably be Jack Milne or Jimmy Miller.

The meet should be close all the way and although the Tar Heel crew will be the definite favorite, anything can happen when Duke and Carolina tangle.

Linksmen Down Deacons To Continue Undefeated

By Irwin Smallwood

The Tar Heel teriffies of the golf course took near perfect measure of the Wake Forest Demon Deacons yesterday afternoon slipping the knife to the fighting Baptists by a 26-1 count over the sunny Hope Valley country club course in Durham to remain unbeaten in the current campaign.

Ray Taylor, of Greensboro turned in the low card for the afternoon's work—a par 35-35—70—and the Tar Heel up-and-coming star missed the select "60" club by one stroke when he boggied the 18th hole.

Wake Forest's lone point came when Junie Bailey, playing with Dick Doeschler in the No. 2 foursome, dropped a half point to Jennings Adner, and Mike "Muscles" Nolan, playing in the No. 3 foursome, gave up a half marker to Beam.

It was win No. 7 in a row for the linksmen of Coach Chuck Erickson in dual competition, the Tar Heels having dumped such teams as LSU and Michigan for their greatest claim for recognition in national collegiate circles.

Duke's mighty Blue Devils, composing one of the ranking clubs in the south and east, will offer a real test for the Tar Heels in a dual meet Thursday, and this contest is expected to go a long way toward determining the Southern conference winner. Duke won the Southern intercollegiate tournament week before last and reputedly has one of its best aggregations in years.

In yesterday's encounter, driving Dick Doeschler was second lowest man for Carolina, carding a one-over-par 71, and hammering Harvey Ward was next in line with a 72. Other Tar Heel cards showed Junie Bailey, with a 74, Mike Nolan with a 74 and Ed Ashby with a 76.

The results:

Ward (NC) defeated Hyatt, ...-0. Bailey (NC) defeated Agner, 2½-½. Best Ball to UNC, 3-0.

Doeschler (NC) defeated McKaughn, 3-0. Taylor (NC) defeated Harris, 3-0. Best Ball to UNC, 3-0.

Nolan (NC) defeated Beam, 2½-½. Ashby (NC) defeated Gentry, 3-0. Best Ball to UNC, 3-0.

DiLorenzo Goes Route On Hill

Deacons Execute Triple-Killing

By Morty Schaap

Wake Forest, May 6—The Carolina baseball legion traveled here this afternoon and before a crowd of some 2,500, tangled with the Demon Deacons. After 12 innings neither team proved the winner, and the contest was halted because of darkness with score knotted at 4-4.

Vinnie DiLorenzo went all 12 innings for the Tar Heels and gave the Deacons 11 safeties.

This made 22 innings of play that neither team has been able to break a deadlock. The last time the two teams met at Chapel Hill the game went 10 innings and was stopped because of darkness with the count 9-9.

In today's contest Carolina broke the ice in the second when Jack Hussey led off with a triple down the first base line and scored on John Gregory's clothes line single over second.

The Deacons came back in the third to tie up the game when Charlie Teague belted a home run into right field.

The men of Walter Rabb came back with two markers in the fourth when Jim Hamilton was safe on an error and Harry Beason was out on a fly to the left field, but Hussey kept things going when he singled to left. After Gregory had grounded out, Bo Hackney came through with a line single to score both Hamilton and Hussey.

The Deacs took the lead again in the sixth when Clyde Whitner blasted a home run deep over Kenny Black's head in center field. The Tar Heels tied the ball game up in the seventh when Black singled, stole second and went to third on the pitchers error. He came in on the squeeze play with Hamilton laying a beautiful bunt down the first base line.

The feature fielding play of the day was a triple play executed by the Deacons in the third inning. After Buck Hardee and DiLorenzo had walked, Black drove a savage line drive at the second baseman, who gobbled it up, flipped to the shortstop for two and then tossed to first to catch DiLorenzo off base.

Racquetmen Defeat Davidson In Warmup Tilt for Indians

Local Crew Downs Wildcats by 8-1 Score; William and Mary Favored to Snap Streak

By Bob Goldwater

After scoring an easy 8-1 triumph over Davidson here yesterday, the undefeated Carolina racquet-wielders take over the underdog role for the first time this season when they run up against the powerful William and Mary net outfit this afternoon at 3 o'clock on the local courts.

With their string of victories now standing at 26 straight over a two-year period, the Tar Heels will be facing a star-studded team that has a streak of 37 wins straight over a three-year span. The feature match of the afternoon will pit Carolina's ace, Vic Seixas, against the Indians' outstanding luminary, Gardner Larned. Larned is rated 12th in the nation while Seixas ranks 16th.

Seixas Pressed

Despite the lopsided score in yesterday's encounter, the locals were pressed in several duels, and three tilts went the full three sets. In the number one clash, Seixas was given a hard time by the Wildcats' Bo Roddey before gaining a 9-7, 4-6, 6-1 victory. The other singles engagement that went the limit was won by Davidson, Buck Archer downing Stan Grunder, 6-4, 3-6, 6-2, at the number three berth.

The remaining singles battles were easy marks for the Blue and White racqueteers of Coach John Kenfield. On the second court, Clark Taylor cruised to a 6-2, 6-3 decision over Ted Keesler. Jack Kenfield turned back Jerry Robinson, 6-4, 6-2, at number four, Ray Morris downed Mike Williams, 6-4, 6-3, at the fifth pairing, and Jim Nicholson registered consecutive 6-3 scores over Glenn Turpin at number six.

Sweep Doubles

The Tar Heels swept through the three doubles tilts with the loss of one set. Seixas and Taylor turned back Ted Keesler and Archer, 6-2, 6-4. Morris and Rice registered a 6-0, 6-4 verdict over Robinson and Hatch, and Nicholson and Don Skakle defeated Roddey and Len Keesler by 2-6, 6-1, 6-4.

Today promises to be a different story, however. The Indians' top three players are all nationally known and the fourth, Brenden Macken, performed with the Canadian Davis Cup team last year.

The Tar Heel aggregation will probably line up in the same order that performed against Davidson yesterday. For William and Mary, the lineup is expected to have, in order, Larned, Fred Kovaleski, Tut Bartzen, Mavken, Howe Atwater, and Bob Galloway.

In doubles, the Indians will have Larned and Bartzen as the top duo, Kovaleski and Macken at number two, and Galloway and Bobby Doll as the third pair.

Last year the visitors ended Carolina's streak of 10 straight wins in handing the Tar Heels thier only loss of the season. Coach Kenfield's charges gained seven victories after the loss last season and have come through all 19 matches thus far this campaign with a perfect record.

International Expert...

Senator Carl Hatch Speaks In Hill Hall Tomorrow Night

Students will have the opportunity to hear one of this country's foremost experts on international relations when Senator Carl W. Hatch speaks in Hill Hall tomorrow night at eight o'clock.

The Democratic senator from New Mexico has been active in both foreign and domestic affairs since he became a senator in 1933. He is an influential member of the Senate Foreign Relations committee, and the ranking Democratic committee on public lands.

During the war, Sen. Hatch was acting chairman of the Judiciary committee which caused postponement of the Pearl Harbor courtmartial trial of General Short and Admiral Kimmell. He has been a leading member of the Senate investigating group formerly known as the "Truman committee."

Sen. Hatch is expected to present a first-hand view of the conditions existing in Greece and Turkey, which he visited on a recent Mediterranean tour, and to cogently defend the Greco-Turkish loan. He is also expected to defend the work of the United Nations, which he conceived in his famous B2H2 resolution.

Sen. Hatch's address, his first since returning from Greece and Turkey, is expected to attract nationwide attention. Radio coverage is planned if the telephone strike is settled.

The Senator's address is being sponsored by the International Relations club. He is the major speaker being presented by the I.R.C. to the campus this year.

Radio Classes Will Hear Professional Specialists

Professional specialists in various fields of radio are currently being scheduled for lectures to the University radio classes, Director Earl Wynn of the Communication Center said yesterday. The Center hopes to bring a guest speaker a week to its "Introduction to Radio" classes, to lecture on various phases of the work.

Recent visiting lecturers have been Paul Norris, program director of WTIK in Durham, Mrs. Henry Pressly, public service director of WPTF in Raleigh; and Charlie Gaylord, former University student now employed at station WMFD in Wilmington.

"OPERATIONS CROSSROADS"

The mathematics and physics clubs will co-sponsor the showing of the movie, "Operations Crossroads," this evening at 8 o'clock in room 206, Phillips building. The movie, a naval film recording the atomic bomb test on Bikini, will be shown free of charge with the public invited.

TO BE ON CAMPUS

Miss Alice Eckhoff of Eastern Airlines will be on the campus tomorrow and Friday to interview those students interested in positions with her company. Interested students should make appointments to see Miss Eckhoff by seeing Miss Kathryn Cook in 209 South building.

Annual Art Show To Be in Person Through May 24

The Tenth Annual North Carolina School Art exhibit for elementary schools in North Carolina opened at Person Hall on May 3 and will be on view until May 25. The work included in this year's exhibit is limited entirely to the elementary grades

The show is to promote the teaching of art and to encourage art production in the elementary schools. Next fall the exhibit will be circulated among the public schools to give both teachers and pupils an opportunity to see what is being done in other schools.

Included in the exhibition are ceramics, paper construction figures, paintings, drawings, posters, sculpture, modeling, carving, textile designs and other art processes. The works of approximately 300 students are being exhibited as a result of the judging which was done last week by Miss Belle Boas, director of education at the Baltimore Museum of Art.

Jacobson, Hodgson Moffit Victors In Publications Editorship Races

By Chuck Hauser

As final and official results of Tuesday's balloting were released yesterday by Elections board Chairman Jabie Heyward, it was revealed that approximately half the student body, 3523 students, had voted, placing Tom Eller (SP) in a runoff with Bill Miller (UP) for the presidency of the student body.

Eller received 1609 votes, only 232 votes away from a majority, as compared to Miller's 1039 and Independent Johnny Clampitt's hard-earned 801.

For the editorship of the Daily Tar Heel, Barron Mills (SP) pulled out in front with a vote of 1491, leaving his runoff mate, Bookie Jabine (UP) with 1069. Roy Moose (CP) and Art Melton (Ind.) were left trailing with 615 and 215, respectively.

Jack Folger (UP) and Charlie Long (SP) will be in the runoff race for vice-president of the student body. Folger receiving 1480 votes and Long 1096. Marriote Stewart, the Campus Party candidate, showed with 711 votes.

Secretary-Treasurer

In the secretary-treasurer race, Sam Daniels (SP), John Surratt (UP), and Jim Vogler (CP) ran neck-and-neck to gain the runoff. Daniels and Surratt making it, in that order. The vote was Daniels—1095, Surratt—1079, and Vogler—1027.

In other publications, Fred Jacobson (UP, SP) overwhelmingly defeated Charles Brockmann (CP) for the editorship of the Carolina Magazine with a vote of 2211 to 1024. Tookie Hodgson (UP,SP) downed the Eddie Allen-Jud Kinberg combination for editor of the new humor magazine. The vote was 1862 to 1438.

Moffit Elected

Bill Moffit, with a triple endorsement for editor of the Yack, sailed through to victory with no opposition.

In the head cheerleader running, Moffatt "Myrt" Sherard (UP,SP) took a comfortable margin over the second highest man, Charlie Stancell (CP), with a vote of 1321 to 786, indicating a runoff between the two. Grey Adams followed up with 566 votes, Mickey Faulconer and Steve Stefanou bringing up the rear with 362 and 267, respectively.

Publications board candidates Ed Joyner (UP) and Roy Moose (CP) made the runoffs for member at large to the Board. The vote was Joyner—1077, Moose—1062. For senior member to the board, Gene Johnstone, Roland Giduz, and Julia Ross will battle for the two places available.

Publications Board

One Publications board member was elected. Bill Carmichael (UP) beat out Eddie Allen (SP) in a close race for junior member to the Board. The vote was 1598 to 1484.

For three positions at large on the Student council, four persons got into the runoffs. Bob Kirby—1320, Margaret Jean Taylor—1270, Betsy Anne Barbee—1212, and Jim Paschal—1051. Al Lowenstein was a close runner-up with 1013 votes.

For Carolina Athletic association posts, Jack Fitch was elected president by a vote of 2501 over Bobby Weant's 859, the largest majority taken by anyone running in the entire election. There will be a runoff between Bob Cox—1543 votes, and Dan Logue—638, for the vice-presidential post. Monk Whiteheart, with 1099 votes, was disqualified.

COUNTERS NEEDED

Jabie Hayward, chairman of the Election's Board sent out a special plea last night for help in counting the remaining election ballots. All candidates, party workers, and interested persons are urged to be in Graham Memorial's Candelight room at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

NEWS BRIEFS

Senators Kill Taft's Change In Labor Bill

Legislation Aimed Toward Bargaining

Washington, May 7—(UP)—Senate defeat of the labor-bill amendment aimed at restricting industry-wide bargaining came by a one-vote margin, 44 to 43.

The action is a sharp rebuff to Senate Labor committee Chairman Taft, who is sponsor of the Senate Taft-Hartley bill. At the same time, it is an equally smashing victory for two Republican senators—Irving Ives of New York, and Wayne Morse of Oregon. The pair also led a successful fight against the amendment in committee.

Stunning Surprise

The defeat of the amendment was a stunning surprise to the Senate GOP leadership. Only last Friday, the upper chamber overwhelmingly approved a Taft-backed amendment making it an unfair labor practice for unions to coerce or restrain workers during organizing campaigns.

The amendment which was beaten today, introduced originally by Senator Ball of Minnesota, would have required the National Labor Relations board to limit bargaining units to employees of a single company or to employers within a single county or district. sixteen Republicans joined 28 Democrats in voting against it, while 31 Republicans and 12 Democrats voted for it.

Brazil Reds Outlawed By Supreme Tribunal

Rio de Janeiro, May 7.—(UP)—The Brazilian communist party was outlawed today by the supreme electoral tribunal. President Dutra decreed the suspension of the Brazilian Federation of Labor and 21 regional labor organizations because of alleged communist influence.

Budget Cut Is Unwise Marshall Tells Press

Washington, May 7. — (UP) — Secretary of State Marshall told a news conference today that congressional moves to economize on spending by his department are very serious and are embarrassing to him in his efforts to preserve world peace.

Coast Guard Reports Helicopter Explosion

Seattle, May 7. — (UP) — Coast Guard headquarters at Seattle, Wash., report that a helicopter with an undetermined number of persons aboard exploded in mid-air and crashed into Lake Union tonight.

Union Funds Exhausted Says Phone Federation

Washington, May 7. — (UP) — Officials of the national Federation of Telephone Workers say they abandoned their month-long fight for a nationwide phone strike settlement because "the union is financially exhausted." Local unions, thrown back on their own in negotiations, have secured agreements with telephone companies in Wisconsin, Illinois and the District of Columbia.

On Turkey, Greece....

Senator Hatch Will Speak On Middle East Journey

Senator Carl A. Hatch, leading foreign policy expert, will deliver a special report to the campus from the International Relations club speaker's platform tonight at 8:30 in Hill hall on his recent trip through Greece, Turkey and the Middle East.

SENATOR HATCH

President Frank Graham will introduce Hatch and the senator's speech, which is expected to attract nationwide attention, will be broadcast tonight by radio if the telephone strike is over.

In the light of his visit to the Mediterranean trouble spots, Hatch has come out on the Senate floor in vigorous support of the Truman Doctrine to stiffen nations against communist infiltration. Following his address the floor will be thrown open for audience questioning.

The New Mexico senator will fly from Washington this morning by plane. After his arrival, I.R.C. members will take him on a tour of the campus and this evening at 6:30 Hatch will attend a banquet at the Carolina inn.

Immediately after his address in Hill hall, a public reception will be held in the solon's honor. John Brisson, I.R.C. chairman, invited all students and faculty members to meet Hatch personally during the reception in Graham Memorial's main lounge.

Hatch was co-author of the famous B2H2 Senatorial resolution which blazed the way for America's leadership in setting up the United Nations organization. The senator has recently advocated immediate amendment of the UN charter in order to strengthen the world organization. The ability to wage war must be taken away from each nation, according to Hatch, and given to a real international government. A powerful world military force with bases all over the world must be set up without delay Hatch has stated on frequent occasions during deliberations by the Senate Foreign Relations committee.

Big Feats Expected....

Senior Week Continues Here With 'Barefoot Day', Prom

The second phase of Senior week unfolds today when all graduating seniors discard their shoes and socks and promenade as part of the annual "Barefoot Day" ceremonies. "Barefoot day" will be followed by tomorrow night's annual social highlight, the Junior-Senior semi-formal ball. The Junior-Senior dance will be held in Woollen gymnasium tomorrow night. Sammy Fletcher and his Duke Ambassadors will play for the dance. Memberships to the junior-senior dance are being sold daily in the Y and by class agents for $1.50.

Off to a flying start at last night's "Saddle Shoe Stomp," the annual senior week program will continue today as senior men and women walk gingerly to and from classes in their bare feet.

Highlight and concluding feature of senior week, however, will be tomorrow night's dance. Besides the Duke Ambassadors, widely-acclaimed as the top collegiate band in this area, the evening's entertainment will feature two top song artists. Male vocalist Clarence Smith of Louisville, Ky., and female vocalist Sally Waddell of Greensboro are featured with the Ambassadors, and will be performing tomorrow night. Fletcher, leader of the band, performs on the drums and also vocalizes besides doing most of the arranging for his 18-piece orchestra.

Enthusiasm is running high among senior class members as they get together this week for the last time prior to graduation. All seniors have been urged to participate in the "Barefoot Day" ceremonies today.

It was announced yesterday by Dean of Women Catherine Carmichael that all coeds will receive two o'clock permission for the junior-senior dance tomorrow night.

YMCA Asks Funds To Help Victims Of Texas Blast

In answer to a nation-wide request from Galveston, Texas, for emergency relief funds for the citizens of Texas City, Charles Foley, president of the University YMCA, announced that his organization would run a booth in the lobby of the Y building today to collect all contributions.

"Your donations are urgently needed," explained Coye Rogers, who has been appointed by the Y cabinet to head this drive.

"An estimated 650 people were killed, and at least 3000 others injured in the recent fires and explosions, and the hard-pressed Red Cross can only meet one third of the immediate needs of the residents of the area."

The Y booth will be open from 8 until 4 o'clock today.

FOR THE SENIORS

Anybody that is anybody can't afford to be seen with shoes on today.

Samuel Selden, director of the Playmakers, invites the public to see these three original one-act plays that are produced by dramatic art students under the general supervision of Foster Fitz-Simons, assistant director on the Playmakers staff.

"As Long As There Are Stars," a fantastic tragedy laid at Sid's Bar on the outskirts of Knoxville, Tenn., is the first play on the program. Emily Chapell is the author; Ann Dubs directed the play.

A fantasy, "Philip Comes Home," laid in the living room of an old country house, is the second production on the bill. The play was written by Kermit Hunter and directed by Gene McLain.

Collegiate Press Holds Convention At State College

Nearly 200 students from all over the state are expected to participate in the revival meeting of the semi-annual conventions of the North Carolina Collegiate Press association at State college, Raleigh, tomorrow and Saturday.

From Carolina publications nearly a dozen representatives are expected to attend, six as official delegates. Roland Giduz, leader of the Tar Heel delegation, announced that any staff members of all campus publications interested in attending the sessions should contact him immediately.

Beginning tomorrow morning at 10:30 the group will hold a general meeting at the Carolina hotel in Raleigh, headquarters for the week-end. Noel Houston, local author, will be a featured speaker at the luncheon, and Josephus Daniels of the Raleigh News and Observer will be banquet speaker in the evening.

During the afternoon one-hour panel discussions will be held on all phases of newspaper writing, business management, magazine writing, publications make-up, and yearbook work. L. M. Pollander and Stuart Seibriest of the journalism department, and Jake Wade of the University News bureau, and Noel Houston will lead several of these forums.

An informal dance will follow the banquet, and a short business session will be held at State college Saturday morning.

Bragaw Heads Council...

Victory Village Begins New Council Operations

Bill Bragaw of Southport was elected acting chairman of the newly-formed Victory Village council when the organization met for the first time on Monday evening. Tom Reynolds of Greensboro and Tom Cole of Raleigh were selected as vice-chairman and secretary respectively to serve with Bragaw until such time as the village holds a general election for mayor.

Initial business of the council consisted in the organization of committees to deal with problems that have arisen in the community. Dick Letaw was appointed chairman of a traffic control committee and charged with immediate responsibility for enforcing a ten-mile speed limit. Complaints of residents against reckless driving and its menace to children was one of the immediate reasons behind formation of the council.

Other civic matters received attention with the appointment of additional committees on playgrounds, dog control, street lighting and surfacing. The council plans to meet every Monday evening.

Chief Item Among Many...

Legislature to Debate Record Agency Bill

By Bockie Jabine

Discussion of a bill to establish a student government record agency will be the chief item on the budget of the Student Legislature when it meets at 7:30 this evening in Gerrard hall.

Speaker Charlie Warren also stated that consideration of the Di, Phi, and I.R.C. budgets will come up, along with a proposed amendment to the inter-dormitory section of the constitution.

Lastly, the assembly will debate a bill to purchase supplies and furnish for the newly-created student government room in Graham Memorial. Authorization for the student union to set aside space for governmental business was approved at a meeting of the legislature last month.

The student government record agency bill provides for the printing of a four page publication 20 times a school year "covering all phases of student government at the University."

Warren, one of the bill's strongest advocates indicated in a speech to the assembly two weeks ago, that he hoped the pamphlet would take on the appearance of Washington's "Congressional Record."

According to Article one of the bill, a student editor would be elected by the Legislature for a one year period, and would be responsible for the publication of the record. The bill further states that the Record shall be printed at the Village printshop.

Distribution of the Record will include all dormitory rooms and fraternity houses.

Lentz Named Head Of Pi Lambda Phi

Marvin Lentz has been elected the new president of Pi Lambda Phi. Other officers elected are: Irvin Fox, vice-president; Robert Jo Friedlander, secretary; Harvey Auerbach, treasurer; Stan Fox, intermural manager; and Charles Borton, house manager.

NO BAND REHEARSAL

There will be no band rehearsal today. Instead, free technicolor movies of the Sugar Bowl game will be shown at 7 o'clock in Hill hall with the public cordially invited.

Brighter Days Ahead

From out of the maze of criticism and charges of disinterest in student government, it was particularly gratifying to see emerge the greatest student vote in Carolina's history in Tuesday's election.

And we are pleased and happy that Carolina's great postwar student body made its wishes felt as over half its number flocked to the polls to let everyone know just what men they wanted to lead them next year.

Over 3,300 votes were cast, and the results can be taken as a better than fair indication of just what the students want. Too often in past years, a small vote had not always been indicative of the desires of the majority. This year such was not the case. It is gratifying to see majority rule makes its power felt on this campus. With such aroused interest, possibly bigger and brighter days are ahead for Carolina student government.

But to those who went to the polls Tuesday to express their wishes: a word of caution. Numerous runoffs will be necessary to determine most of the big offices on the campus. Therefore it will behoove all of you to go to the polls again next Tuesday and vote for the man you want. You have shown your wishes by the first returns. Make them definite by voting again next week and putting the desired candidates in office.

Timely Speech

A timely and informative speech is scheduled in Hill hall tonight at eight o'clock under the auspices of the International Relations club.

The speaker will be Senator Carl W. Hatch, Democrat from New Mexico, who has just returned from a Mediterranean tour. He is expected to defend the Greco-Turkish loan and will deliver a first-hand account of existing conditions in Greece and Turkey. He is also expected to speak of the work of the United Nations.

For those students interested in vitally important national affairs, and few of us can afford not to be, tonight's address by Senator Hatch will be well worth hearing.

The speech also marks the first speaker presentation by the IRC in a long, long time. With the CPU forging to the front by presenting a series of successful speakers, it is good to note that the IRC is at last beginning to percolate and help take up the slack caused by its recent inactivity.

Deserved Recognition

This has been a big week for the quiet, good-natured, hard-working little man who spins the wheels that result in publication of the Carolina Magazine.

First, Editor Fred Jacobson turned loose on the campus one of the best magazines it has ever been fortunate enough to have for its reading pleasure. It was easily the best since pre-war days, and better than a lot of the pre-war variety. The April issue furnished ample proof to the campus that Jacobson has "arrived." He has been working long and hard since last September, always plugging for an improved magazine. The improvements were steady and the magazine has grown in stature, culminating its growth with the April issue.

Criticism has been levelled freely at Jacobson all year long, but the extent of campus dissatisfaction was shown to be in the distinct minority Tuesday when a landslide of student votes gave Jacobson a solid vote of confidence in his work and ability by sweeping him back into office for another year.

Those students who re-elected the likable Magazine editor gave him recognition that has been greatly deserved and long past due. Those students also will be fortunate in having him back next year to produce the fine type of magazine that the past year's experience has proved him to be capable of doing.

Getting the Bird....

Defeated Candidate Now Knows How It Must Have Felt to Hoover

By Eddie Allen

They took my Wilkie buttons away from me yesterday, and anything further you wish to say about the Solid South you can tell it to Norman Thomas.

How any self-respecting, gallus-snapping Southern Democrat like myself can lose, not once but TWICE in one election, I still can't understand. And even after the local version of the Literary Digest gave me the farmers' backing in the first straw vote, too.

Now I know how Hoover felt.

It wasn't so bad, the way that Kinberg and I got our lumps for the Humor Mag sugar. In fact, we were pretty philosophical from the time we were seen passing Danziger's without going in. Our only campaigning the last night was with guys who were too old to vote, practically old grand-dads. When I called Jud with results of the first tabulations, which showed us slightly in arrears with 437 votes, he was amazed.

"I know about the 37," quoth Jud excitedly, "but where in the hell did the 400 come from?"

Yes, we were elated. We knew then that the Social Register had gone out for us, en masse. Let the red-blooded Americans go their way; we had the Four-Hundred.

Even the write-in notations didn't faze us. Several campus wags went wag-wag by scribbling in Dan the Dog, probably the best choice, at that. Then there were the characters who crossed out Allen and voted for Kinberg. I'm not mad at them either. But as for the guy who erased all candidates, I am a bit miffed. Evidently over-possessed with social consciousness, he X'ed out the names set forward and caustically commented:

"God help us."

The trend of my feelings Tuesday night looked much like a tangent graph from the trigonometry class I missed Wednesday. At 8 o'clock I was calm and still smiling at everybody out of campaign habit. At 9 o'clock the first returns came in and I sobered up—until 9:30. At 10 o'clock I was getting ready to join Art Melton as the first candidate for 1948. Yeah, I was just building for next year after all. At 11 o'clock I had become so recklessly confident that I approached my honored opponent, then straggling along with only a half-thousand vote lead, and asked him to concede.

That was superfluous, of course, because I was already too conceited.

I gave up and went down to see how the P.U. Board balloting was coming out. That's right, it was P. U. My opponent, Billy Carmichael, had me there from the start. He owned a clip board, and used it to give me the best clipping since I last visited Y. Z. Cannon's barber shop.

We enjoyed watching the count, however. He would take a lead—I would grimace. I would take a lead—he would frown. He would take a lead again—and I would quietly beat him over the head with one of the smaller vote-counters.

All in all it was a great election. I may have gone to pot in the voting, but the voters left me the pot. And any time the Socialists want another good losing candidate, I can be as red faced as any of them.

At that, though, the election did give me a new urge for humor writing. In losing I gained a new animal-character for the DTH. For though Kinberg may carry on with his dog, the voters yesterday gave me the bird.

Letters To The Editor

An Invitation

Dan the Dog was waiting for me at my first class yesterday morning to give me results of the late, lamented race. He had come to pledge friendship despite the vote. But then, he's a dumb animal.

Becoming serious, both Eddie Allen and myself were anything but downhearted candidates yesterday. For the large number of voters who xed our line brought cheer that you can't get from beer.

And speaking of the evil 3.2 brew, Eddie and I invite all those who supported us to drop into Aggie's or the Shack any afternoon and have a beer with us. The only identification you need is the quarter to pay for the bottle of suds.

Honest folks, we love you, each and every ballot.

JUD KINBERG.

Side of Street

To the Editor:

Ignoring the old problem of whether James Street was sent to us as a blessing or as a plague, there remains the fact that he was sent. I consider Mr. Street to be further evidence that the South can produce anything the North can, and do a better job of it. The only Northern product we need is the money our New York friends spend having their wild offspring civilized in Southern universities.

Mr. Street is correct in saying that, from the point of view of the observer, his image in the picture is to the left. However, it would seem more natural to say that from the subjects' point of view, Mr. Street is back on the right, where he ought to be.

I haven't much interest in which view is chosen, and I mean no offense to either of them, but if the pig objects to being put on the left, I offer my apologies to the pig.

Yours most sincerely,
JOHN M. RUTH

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

DREW PERSON COMPARES V-E DAY 1945 WITH SPRING LETHARGY OF 1947; WASHINGTON BASKS IN POTOMAC SUNSHINE WHILE WAR COLLEGE STUDIES RUSSIAN WAR.

Washington.—Notes on the Anniversary of an Armistice—San Francisco May 8, 1945: The United Nations being born. . .Simultaneously, the end of the war in Europe. History in the making. . . Delirious people, dizzy people, happy people. . .Auto horns and ticker tape. . .Senator Tom Connally saying, "The war is over.". . .American Legion vets in uniform, older vets in gray and blue uniform: "Remember 1918 when you and I did this in Paris? We never thought it would happen again.". . .Sailors kissing pretty girls. Soldiers singing. Secretary of State Stettinius beaming. . . A new union of nations. The United Nations. . .The end of our traditional isolation, the end of war. . . . We won't make the same mistake we made after 1918. This time America will stick with the other nations, stick and pitch for peace.

Sailors kissing pretty girls, strange girls. . .Texas Tom shaking hands, slapping backs, pumping hands. "The war's over in Europe. Hitler's finished.". . .Senator Vandenberg beaming. . .Ed Stettinius grinning. . .Back on my desk, a letter from an old schoolmate, his son missing in action. . .But now there'll be new hope—through the new United Nations. . . No more boys missing in action. . .The Russians, it's true, acted strangely at the armistice, holding up the final announcement. But they've suffered a lot. Gone through hell. You have to understand them. . . Then there was that story of mine which everyone denied—the story of how Stalin ordered American troops out of Potsdam, back to the River Elbe. . .We were practically in Berlin, trying to help win the war as quickly as possible. But the Russians wanted us out. . .Well, if they wanted to waste their own men, taking Berlin themselves, that's their business. Peculiar people, the Russians. . .Meanwhile, let's get ahead with building up this new United Nations. Because peace is here to stay.

Washington, D. C., May 8, 1947: Seems a long time since war. The anti-aircraft guns are gone from Potomac Park. The grass is reseeded and greener than ever. Nothing to remind you of war—except the Wave barracks. And a sailor with an accordion serenading a Wave. . .Willow trees dipping low over the Potomac. . .Lovers lounging on park benches. Skies reaching down to caress the horizon. Pansies preening themselves in gaudy, prideful glory. . .War seems long ago, very long ago—but not quite forgotten.

STUDYING NEXT WAR

Across the Tidal Basin under the willows sits the War College. Dull, unimaginative brick buildings. Inside goes on the imaginative business of moving troops, guns, ships, planes on checkerboards, planning the possibilities of war. . .George Kennan, crack student of Russian affairs, lives in that building; brought back from Moscow to lecture Army-Navy officers, tell them what to expect from Russia in regard to war. . .Across the Tidal Basin, girls riding on bicycles. White-faced clerks drinking in the sunshine. . .An ex-GI strolling with his new bride. They may be living in a shack or a trailer or with a mother-in-law, but along the Potomac all outdoors belongs to them.

Times change. Even nature changes. . . There was a time when my father-in-law, strolling through these same fields with Teddy Roosevelt, was dared by Teddy to swim the Potomac, cold with the thaws of March. . .Both swam it—over and back. . .And the now cultivated parkland with its cherry trees and pansy beds was then such a deserted swampland that they were able to walk to the back door of the White House, dripping and half undraped, unseen even by Mrs. Roosevelt. . .Yes, times change.

Imagine President Truman getting away with that in teeming, thriving Potomac Park today!. . .My father-in-law believed in war, believed in war's inevitability. He was sent by T. R. to Germany to study the Kaiser's military machine, brought back to the U. S. Army its present system of indirect artillery fire—then considered revolutionary. . .Now atomic bombs make artillery as out of date as bows and arrows. . .Even war changes—at least its methods of killing. The only thing that doesn't change is the fact that we keep on killing.

CHAINED WOMEN

Across the park surrounded by cherry trees sits the Jefferson Memorial. . . .Once women chained themselves to cherry trees along the Tidal Basin in protest against chopping down the trees to make room for the Memorial. . .They were fanatics against change. . .But now the Memorial basks in the sunlight, and new trees planted around its base, look as if they had been there forever. . .Jefferson wouldn't particularly like that. He believed in change.

SC Net Tourney Here Today; Golfers At Duke

Trackmen Trounce Duke; W. & M. Tops Tennis Crew, 8-1

Conference Team Title Goes To Indians; Morris Triumphs

By Irwin Smallwood

William and Mary's potent tennis team, easily the best the South has produced in years, swept the Southern conference dual meet and team championship from Carolina yesterday afternoon by an 8-1 count, and today their No. 1 ace—Gardner Larned—will hold the top-seeded position as the SC individual playoffs begin at 2 p. m. on the local courts.

In the important dual meet yesterday, the Indians had little trouble in downing the Tar Heels for their 38th victory in a row and thus breaking the Carolina win streak at 25 straight.

Carolina, whose Tar Heels had recorded 19 consecutive triumphs during the current campaign up to yesterday, managed to salvage only one singles match, and Ray Morris, who was captain of the 1944 team, won that contest in the No. 5 position. Morris defeated Bob Galloway, 6-2, 6-3 in the first match completed during the afternoon.

The Tar Heels were able to cop only two other sets in the entire fray, those coming in the No. 2 and No. 6 singles spots. Clark Taylor won the first set from Fred Kovaleski before dropping the next two, and Jim Nicholson rallied to take the second set before losing the final round.

Larned, the W. and M. ace who is ranked 12th among the nation's amateurs, played a superb game of tennis, and Vic Seixas, Tar Heel No. 1 man who is rated 16th, proved no match for the lanky visiting star. Larned employed a blistering backhand pass to stymie the usually effective net attack of Seixas and emerge the winner after giving up only five games in two sets.

Coach John Kenfield of Carolina had nothing but praise for the Indians, and he acclaimed the visitors as "the best team in the nation by far."

There are seven schools entered in the individual tournament, and play will be today at 2 p.m. tomorrow at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m., and Saturday at 2 p.m. Each team entered can have eight men in the singles and four doubles teams.

Pairings and seedings were made last night, with Larned getting the No. 1 spot, Seixas the No. 2, and Kovaleski the No. 3. Teams entered include Carolina (eight men), W. and M. (eight men), Davidson (eight men, Duke (eight men), State (eight men), The Citadel (five men), and Maryland (four men).

Carolina players' pairings:

First round: Morris, bye; Taylor v. Irvin (Citadel); Kenfield v. Bunch (Citadel); Seixas v. Davis (Duke); Swizart v. L. Kessler (Davidson); Rice v. Weathers (NCS); Skakle, bye; Gruner, bye.

Second round: Morris v. Galloway (WM); Skakle v. Robinson (Davidson); Gruner v. T. Kessler (Davidson).

All feature matches throughout the day will be played on No. 1 varsity court in front of the grandstand.

There will be a 50 cent admission charge for the Southern conference tournament beginning this afternoon at 2 o'clock. All tickets are for the entire tourney.

Baseballers To Meet Virginia There Today

(Special to Daily Tar Heel)

Charlottesville, Va., May 7.—The University of North Carolina baseball team, 20 strong, arrived here this afternoon.

Holding the somewhat unique distinction of not playing to a decision in their last three starts, two of which ended in overtime stalemates and the other having been rained out, the Tar Heels will be striving for their 10th triumph. The two teams met earlier in the campaign with the Cavaliers winning 5-3.

Monk Whiteheart will open on the mound tomorrow in the first engagement on the three-game road trip. The remainder of the lineup is expected to have the same octet that has started the last two games. The batting order will read: Black, cf; Hamilton, 3b; Beason, lf; Hussey, rf; Gregory, 1b; Hackney, 2b; Ryan, ss; Hardee, c; Whiteheart, p.

Following tomorrow's clash, the Carolina team moves on to College Park, Md., to battle the Old Liners in a Southern conference tussle.

Tar Heels Score 83-48 Win By Amassing 11 First Places

The power-laden Carolina tracksters downed the Duke Blue Devils, 83-48, in a meet run on Fetzer Field yesterday afternoon. The win was the third Tar Heel dual victory and they remain undefeated to date.

The scheduled jayvee meet with Guilford college this afternoon has been cancelled at the Quakers request.

Bob Morrow and Bob Seligman were the high scorers for Carolina with 10 points each. Morrow won both hurdles, and Seligman took the shot and discus. His throw of 146 feet 5 inches broke the University mark that he set in the Florida relays earlier in the season by over four feet.

Bob Kirk, Tar Heel freshman, took the javelin throw with a heave of 185 feet 5 inches. In the half-mile event Roger Neighborgal of Duke nosed out Carolina's Jack Milne by a couple of yards in a very close race. Neighborgal also nosed Don Nelson in the quarter to take that event.

Nelson came roaring down the stretch to take the 220-yard run by beating Doug Ausbon and Loren Young of Duke. Carolina scored sweeps of all three places in the high jump, one mile run, two mile run and high hurdles.

Nineteen men of the Fetzer-Ranson combine broke into the scoring column to better the previous high of 15 in the Navy meet.

The summary:

One-mile run: Tie: Smith (C), Mackenzie (C), Milne (C), 4:48.8.

440-yard run: Neighborgal (D), Nelson (C), Young (D), 49.6.

100-yard dash: Ausbon (D), Hartley (D), Shultz (C), 10.3.

Links Combine After 8th Win

Carolina's smooth-swinging golfers will meet their supreme test of the season this afternoon when they take to the fairways against the highly-favored linksmen of Duke at Hope Valley Country club. The first foursome will tee off at 1:30 o'clock.

The Tar Heels have been pointing for the encounter all season long while wading through such potent opponents as Michigan, Georgetown and LSU, all sectional leaders, and they should be in top form for the match.

Coach Chuck Erickson announced yesterday that all students are invited to follow the Tar Heel golfers in their match with Duke today. No admission is charged.

Coach Chuck Erickson will probably send dependable Dick Doescher off in the No. 1 position along with Joltin' June Bailey at No. 2. The Tarboro Terror, Harvey Ward, will be in the No. 3 spot, playing with Greensboro's gift to Carolina golfdom, Ray Taylor at No. 4.

Mighty Mike Nolan, the man with the built-in bunker, is set to play at No. 5, teaming with eagle-eyed Ed Ashby who will be in the No. 6 berth.

Duke has by far the best team that the Carolina lads have faced all year, having nosed out the locals in the team competition of the Southern Intercollegiate tournament played in Georgia last month.

The 6,700-yard Hope Valley layout is in top shape for the battle, with a large crowd expected to be on hand to witness the classic of classics.

Du Pont Digest

Items of Interest to Students of Science and Engineering

Explosives—an essential industrial tool

Frank A. Loving, Chemical Engineer, Texas A & M '41, prepares to fire an explosive charge into a chamber of methane or dusty air to test safety under conditions found in coal mines.

A. L. St. Peter, Princeton '37, supervisor blasting operation Susquehanna River Project, lowers a 5½ inch "Nitramon" Primer into one of 600 drill holes preparatory to blasting a pipe line ditch.

INDUSTRIAL explosives are as much of a yardstick of industrial progress as sulfuric acid. They are involved in the fabrication of nearly all the products used by man. This year the United States will use over 500 million pounds of industrial explosives.

The technical problems that confront the explosives industry are many and varied. A measure of this is the fact that the Du Pont Company manufactures about two hundred dynamite formulations, each intended to do a different job, from the slow heaving action of blasting coal to the rapid, violent shattering necessary for a hard ore. Ranging between these two extremes are a large number of intermediate grades, including explosives especially formulated for agricultural work, seismic prospecting for oil, submarine blasting—right down to the tiny charge used in an explosive rivet.

Studies In Laboratory and Field

One of the first industrial laboratories for chemical research in the United States, the Eastern laboratory of the Du Pont Explosives Department has nearly two hundred chemists, engineers, physicists and assistants. There, methods have been developed for measuring the power of explosives, the degree to which they shatter or pulverize various materials, their water resistance, their safety characteristics when exposed to shock or flame, the composition of the gases they produce, etc. As a result of studies of the influence of various factors on dynamite performance, it has become possible to formulate an explosive to meet practically any blasting condition.

In keeping with these improvements, the application of explosives has reached a new level of efficiency. Technical service men, usually mining engineers or civil engineers, aid consumers in the selection and use of explosives. They also work closely with research men in solving unusual problems encountered in the field.

Research—Path to Progress

A few of the results gained through research are: (1) lowering of dynamite freezing points by nitrating ethylene glycol along with glycerol to diminish the hazards of thawing frozen dynamites. (2) Production of less hazardous dynamites by substituting ammonium nitrate partially for nitroglycerine, in spite of the greater hygroscopicity and lesser explosive power of the former. This resulted in dynamites less hazardous to manufacture and use. (3) Introduction of "Nitramon," a blasting agent containing a high percentage of ammonium nitrate as its major ingredient. It is equal in strength to the most powerful dynamites commonly employed and yet is by far the safest blasting agent available. (4) Development of explosives with a minimum of noxious gases for use in confined areas. (5) Numerous improvements in the composition, manufacture and design of the blasting caps which set off the main charge.

Aside from these developments in explosives and blasting supplies, there have been many accomplishments in chemistry and engineering associated with such projects as the oxidation of ammonia to nitric acid; manufacture, granulation and drying of ammonium nitrate; substitutes for nitroglycerine and ethylene glycol dinitrate, concentration of nitric and sulfuric acids, and a host of other subjects.

Rankin, Norris Win Chesterfield Contest

Returns of the over 800 potential poll prognosticators in the Chesterfield contest to guess how many votes were cast in Tuesday's general election brought three close contestants but no on-the-nose winners. Tying for first place and prizes of two cartons of Chesterfield cigarettes each were Peggy Rankin, 211 Spencer, and T. O. Norris, 207 Manley, who predicted 3521 votes would be cast, missing the correct figure of 3523 by a scant two votes.

Next closest was J. E. Somers, Sigma Chi, with a 3526 listing. Thirty more contestants guessed within fifty of the correct number, half of them predicting an even 3500. Optimist of the entire flock was "Joker" Joe Romano, who forecast 6,000 votes.

Winners Rankin and Norris may receive their winnings by contacting Roland Giduz, local Chesterfield representative, at the Daily Tar Heel office.

Union Leaders Make Proposal In New Jersey

May Affect Strike On National Basis

Newark, May 8—(UP)— Leaders of New Jersey's two striking telephone unions say they will recommend to their memberships acceptance of three and four dollar weekly wage boosts. The two unions represent some 14,500 telephone workers.

However, the union heads say they will recommend acceptance of the wage offer provided the New Jersey Bell Telephone company agrees to full arbitration on all other points at issue. They will confer with company officials tomorrow morning.

Meanwhile, union company and government spokesmen appear confident that today's long lines settlement will mean a quick end to the entire nation-wide strike.

Senator Hatch Hammers Out For Greece-Turkey Aid

Solon Strikes At Opponents Of U.S. Policy

Favors Truman Plan Against Communists

Senator Carl A. Hatch last night hammered out his two major foreign policy "musts", American aid to Greece and Turkey and immediate expansion of United Nations power in his dynamic address sponsored on the campus by the International Relations club.

"We dare not betray the faith Greece and her people place in the United States," Hatch declared before a large Hill hall audience. "That it is a dangerous path, I do not dispute. So long as we are right we will not be afraid."

The New Mexico Democrat, an influential member of the Senate Foreign Relations committee, stated that if Turkey and Greece should fall, Russia and communism then would sweep over Iraq, Iran, Afghanistan, India, China, all of Asia and 'perhaps what little is now left of free nations in Europe."

Without mentioning Henry Wallace by name, Hatch struck back at Wallace's charge that the United States has imperialistic ambitions. "It was not imperialistic ambition which caused us to offer to turn the atomic bomb over to an international authority asking only that all nations be made secure against its use." The Senator added that we have neither asked nor received "one foot of territory or one dollar in reparations" while we now support at great expense vanquished peoples in Europe and Asia.

"I regret to say that for the time being we must maintain our own strong military establishment until the strength of the United Nations is fully assured," said Hatch. "Depression right now in the United States," he added, "would bring despair and disaster, to the entire world."

Turning to the United Nations organization, Sen. Hatch made five specific proposals: "(1) Immediate establishment of an international military force. (2) Complete delegation to the international authority of the right to declare and wage war. (3) Enlarging jurisdiction of the international courts of justice and making that jurisdiction compulsory. (4) Adoption of a code of international law as the final word among disputing nations. (5) Complete cooperation and reciprocity among nations in trade relations."

Student Council Runoff Books Five in Balloting

By Chuck Hauser

Further reports on campus elections were released last night by Jabie Heyward, chairman of the Elections board, including Student council, Men's council, and Woman's council balloting results.

For Student council five men will be in next week's runoff for three posts. The five are Bob Broughton (UP)—1248 votes, Elton Forehand (UP)—871, Jim Castleberry (CP)—769, Charles Robinson (SP)—752, Marvin Hogan (SP)—686.

Jim Walker (UP) actually came in second place in the balloting with 1157 votes, but was disqualified.

Three women were elected to Student council with no runoff: Nan Guy (SP)—229, Nina DeBerry (SP)—294, Bootsie McWilliams (CP)—235.

In the Men's council race six men were in the running. Kenneth Black (SP) was disqualified after receiving the top number of votes, 1388. The other five will be in the runoff for two seats on the Council: Charlie Lambeth (SP)—1018, Duke Wilder (UP)—842, Jack Tompson (UP)—738, South Trimble (CP)—126, Jack Sampson (CP)—406.

Junior posts to the Men's council were taken by Walt Talley (UP, SP) with 1529 votes and Vivian Parks (SP, CP) with 1133.

A runoff is scheduled to decide which two of three men will take sophomore seats on the Men's council. The three in the runoff are Steve Nimocks (UP) 1019, Dick Walker (SP)—811, and Basil Jackson (UP)—804.

In the Woman's council running, five seats were captured by the following five women: Sarah Buchanan—278, Dot Dashiell—236, Marguerite Johnson—224, Phyllis Bradshaw—223, and Caroline Warren—217.

Junior-Senior Set Tonight Will End Gala Senior Week

Senior week will conclude tonight with a semi-formal dance to be held in Woollen gym from 9 until 1, with the music of Sammy Fletcher and his 18 Duke Ambassadors.

Fletcher and his Ambassadors have thrilled Carolina students on previous occasions with the "South's outstanding dance band," and tonight will be no exception. The drummer man will feature as vocalists Sally Waddell of Greensboro and Clarence Smith of Louisville, Ky.

All coeds planning to attend the dance will have 2 o'clock permission.

Membership cards for the dance are on sale at the Y or may be purchased at the door tonight for $1.50.

Phi Adopts Three Labor Bill Points

The Phi assembly last Tuesday night adopted a resolution favoring only three of the major points of the House labor bill: ban on mass picketing, unions' liability to suits, and the power of the President of the U. S. to obtain injunctions against interstate transport, communications or public-utilities strikes.

The labor bill, introduced by Rep. Fred Hartley, R.-N.J., and passed by the House 308-107, includes these additional major provisions in its entire structure: abolishment of NLRB, ban on industry-wide bargaining, closed shop, jurisdictional and sympathy strikes, strikes of government workers, and Communist union officers; it deprives violating unions of their bargaining rights for one year, prohibits unlawful strikers to get their jobs back, and requires unions to make financial reports.

Included among guest speakers were Bill Crisp, former vice-president of the student body, Manny Margolis, DTH columnist ,and Paul Mullinax, president of the Carolina Conservative club.

Fall Term Preregistration Will Start Following Week

Records Director Edwin Lanier Announces New "First" for University With System

By Ed Joyner

Preregistration for either or both summer school sessions will begin next Monday, and during the following week students will for the first time have an opportunity to preregister in the spring for the next fall term.

A mimeographed information sheet will be distributed to faculty and students Saturday explaining the registration procedure worked out by the registration committee for both summer and fall terms.

Procedure will be essentially the same as that followed in preregistering for the spring quarter with one important exception. On the "Green Form" where desired courses are indicated will be a place for students to state the hours at which they would prefer their classes. As far as possible these preferences will be followed in making out the schedules.

Entire Week

From Monday through Saturday next week students who plan to attend either or both of the summer sessions will report to their faculty advisers or deans to get their green forms filled out. This form will show the courses and hours that the student wants and alternate courses to be used in case primary courses are closed out.

At this time petitions for hour examination may also be filed. Then the green form will be turned in at the lobby of Memorial hall in exchange for a registration receipt giving instructions for picking up class tickets. All veterans receiving G.I. benefits must then file with the University for the Veterans Administration a declaration of intent to attend the summer session and/or the fall term.

Preregistration for the fall quarter will be between May 21-24 for all students who do not plan to attend summer school but intend to return in the fall. Registration procedure will be the same as for the summer terms.

New students and those who do not preregister will sign up for the summer on June 12.

UVA Sponsoring Campus Efforts In Cancer Drive

A drive to raise funds for the American Cancer society began on the campus by the University Veterans association, in conjunction with the Orange county drive yesterday under the direction of Prof. Robert W. Linker.

UVA President Hugh Wells disclosed that a canvas for contributions will be made throughout all dormitories, and fraternity and sorority houses by UVA workers. The drive is slated to last until May 15.

A quota of $1,500 has been set for Orange county, Linker stated. By the end of the drive, the state hopes to raise $168,000, 60 per cent of which will remain in North Carolina for utilization by cancer clinics. The other 40 per cent will go to a central research office for use there.

Deaths caused by cancer in Orange county jumped from 14 in 1944 to 28 in 1946, Linker disclosed. Throughout the state, 2,448 perished from the dreaded disease in 1944, while 2,581 became victims in 1946. At present, nearly one out of eight persons dies of cancer yearly in the United States.

Early detection and treatment can cure one-third of cases arising, it has been learned. Consequently, 60,000 cancer deaths could be eliminated each year.

'The Rivals' Ready to Open In Graham Memorial Lounge

Sheridan's long-popular comedy of manners, "The Rivals," will be presented with all its humor tomorrow and Sunday in the main lounge of Graham Memorial by the Laboratory Theater of the Carolina Playmakers. Performances are set at 8:30 p.m. Saturday and 2:30 and 8:30 p.m. on Sunday.

"The Rivals," fourth in a series of laboratory productions sponsored by Graham Memorial, is being directed by Suzanne Davis, wife of associate director of the Playmakers, Harry Davis. Mrs. Davis has been a student of drama at UNC for two years, having gained considerable experience by working with the Penthouse Players of Seattle and the Blue Room Theater in Portland.

Using the arena style of production in which the audience sits on four sides of the stage, the Sheridan Comedy features much professional as well as amateur talent. Eleanor Ringer, leading the cast as Mrs. Malaprop, has been seen in the Playmakers productions of "Hear the Hammers Ringing" and "State of the Union."

Fred Johnson, also seen in "Hear the Hammers Ringing," has done professional work in Plymouth and Montreal. Marty Jacobs has appeared in the Greenbush Theater at Nyack, N. Y., as well as on Broadway.

Edsel Hughes played the role of Clarence, the oldest son, in "Life With Father" on Broadway in 1943. Harry Thomas worked with the Manhatten Theater Colony at Algonquit, Maine. He was recently seen in "The Imaginary Invalid."

Henrietta Cooper and Jimmy Warren are former Chi Pi Players at East Carolina Teachers College, having gained much experience there.

Pat Palmer's role in "The Rivals" will be her second stage appearance since coming to Carolina. William Sessions, Frank Echols and Murray McCain have scored in many parts with the Playmakers.

"The Rivals" is a 3-act play with several scenes, an intermission coming between acts two and three.

UNC Press to Publish Cantata by Paul Green

As part of the celebration this spring of the 175th anniversary of the founding of Salem academy and college, the University Press will, publish the cantata, "Song of the Wilderness," poem by Paul Green, noted poet and playwright, and music by Charles Vardell, Dean of the School of Music, Salem college.

In this rich and moving composition two brilliant artists have combined their talents in honoring an ageless institution. Work relative to the publication has been in process for some months and the finished product will doubtless bring credit to author, composer, Salem Academy and College, and to the University Press.

The original edition, limited to 600 numbered copies, will be handsomely bound in cloth and will bear the autographs of the author and composer. The jacket design will be a reproduction in black and white of the murals done by Miss Ada Allen and Gene Noxon for the foyer of Main Hall, Salem College.

Legislature Thumbs Down Orientation Funds Request

By Bookie Jabine

After tabling a resolution to establish a student government record agency, the Student Legislature last night turned thumbs down on Pat Kelly's request that funds be earmarked for the Orientation committee's leadership program.

The assembly also passed the budget for the Di senate, Phi assembly, and the International Relations club. This action concluded consideration of the campus budget for the year 1947-48. The Di and Phi each received $60 of student fees, while $250 was granted to the IRC.

Johnny Clampitt, in his Elections committee report, urged that next year the legislature pass election regulations sooner.

A bill to purchase supplies for the student government room in Graham Memorial was approved unanimously. Introduced by Tag Montague, the measure provides for the purchase of equipment necessary to carry on executive and administrative functions next year.

Margo Martin and Basil Sherill were chosen to sit on the committee of legislators which is looking into the advisability of joining the National Students organization. They replaced Taylor Dodson and Jo Farris.

In his request for $140 for the Orientation committee, Pat Kelly indicated that the group had planned to give a banquet in the Carolina Inn at which newly elected officers would be installed and instructed as to their duties.

At prevailing prices in Chapel Hill, Kelly said, each officer would have to pay $2.25 a plate. "The committee felt that this was too much."

He felt that the Legislature should appropriate funds thus enabling the committee to cut down the price to "somewhere in the neighborhood of $1.50."

His proposal, however, met with much debate from the floor and was defeated in a roll call vote, 14-7.

Debate on the Phi budget was put forward by Charlie Britt, who stated that the Finance committee figure of $60 was too small for the proposed activities of the Phi next year. Britt indicated that the literary group plans to bring speakers of state-wide interest to the campus. He stressed that $60 would not be enough to bear the expense of such a program. The original request of the Phi was $235.

Britt introduced an amendment that the $60 sum be raised to $100, but the legislature stuck by the Finance committee's recommendation.

Not to Be Tolerated

We had hoped to get through the election campaign without finding it necessary to come out in an open expose and denunciation of the unhappy art of mud-slinging.

However, certain groups on the campus have already unlimbered their political sling-shots and have been spotting up fraternity court and the lower quad with the filthiest kind of mud.

Supporters of one candidate for an important position in the runoff next Tuesday made the rounds Wednesday night. They visited fraternity groups during their weekly meetings, calling members of the fraternity outside to give them muddy ammunition for a political speech. Similarly, groups appeared in some of the dormitories bearing the same evil word.

The always handy terms "nigger lover," anti-fraternity, et cetera were used freely by the canvassing campaigners. Such out and out viciousness in campaigning for any office on the Carolina campus should not be condoned. Granting that the candidate himself is not responsible, his supporters are, and the only possible result from such disparity can be a loss of votes for the man whose side is muddying what have been fairly clear political waters.

When any person or persons must stoop to the level described above to try to win an election, campus politics has hit a new low. And anyone who allows ugly rumors to change his mind doesn't have sense enough to be voting.

While on the subject, it strikes us as a shame that so much emphasis must be put on the fraternity-dormitory division. No dormitory candidate is anti-fraternity, no fraternity candidate is anti-non-fraternity groups. An unfortunate bitterness does exist among the followers of both groups. The candidates themselves cannot be condemned for this feeling, however. The men responsible are the dormitory and fraternity men who stubbornly refuse to realize that talent and ability abound on both sides of the imaginary barrier many of them have constructed. Such a narrow and stupid division should be discarded by those who pledge blind allegiance to the party flag in the important election runoff coming up Tuesday.

So we urge students to follow the judgment they have already shown themselves capable of exercising. They should not allow themselves to become entangled in a quagmire of mud.

The Daily Tar Heel has and will carry on impartial coverage of the political race, but if further evidence of such underhanded work is brought to our attention, we shall not fail to make all the information public and shall do our best to make the persons responsible suffer as a result.

Ugly action like that which has already started and which, we hope, has already ceased, cannot be tolerated by any fair-minded individual. Dirty politics is not a necessary evil of any campus election. Those who think so will not prosper at Carolina.

The Other Half

Sociologists and politicians alike have a pet phrase—"the other half"—to describe a large and legendary group of the nation's citizenry. Carolina has "the other half," too, although for a slightly different reason.

A total of 3,523 students voted in the annual spring elections Tuesday. In the light of previous turnouts, that number represented a worthy improvement over the blase attitude shown in other years. Still, a little two plus two calculation would show that almost one-half the student body would rather—to copy Li'l Abner—go fishing than to exercise their right of ballot.

This is not one of those usual harangues about indifference in a democracy. We would simply be interested to know why, even today, as many eligible voters stay away from the polls as attend. Who are they? Where do they hide?

Runoffs for the present voting come up next Tuesday. If you are a member of "the other half," cast your vote to make amends for the first time. If you voted the first time, do so again, and help make Carolina campus government representative of ALL the students.

Nations of World Are Failing To Make Political Advances

(The following article includes some of the high-lights from Sen. Hatch's address last night on the campus under International Relations club sponsirship.)

While tremendous advances have been made along so many lines, the almost terrifying thought comes that nations of the world have not similarly progressed in their political relations with each other.

This was more than confirmed by nearly everything I heard and saw on a trip which I made with some other members of Congress only last month. Ten of us left Washington late one night to attend the Inter-parliamentary Union at Cairo. We spent Easter Sunday in Jerusalem. We stayed five and one-half days in Cairo attending the sessions of the Union. We visited with many high officials of government in Ankara, Istanbul, Athens, Rome and Paris.

In Turkey and Greece conditions exist which have prevailed almost since the world began. In that area of the world I found beyond any possibility of doubt the age-old ambition of a strong nation to expand and impose upon weaker nations its power, influence and even its philosophy of government.

Any nation which voluntarily chooses communism or any other form of government has the perfect right to do so and no nation has any right to object. There is ample room in the world for both capitalistic and communistic nations to live together, even as friends and neighbors.

However, I am opposed to the expansion of any doctrine or state by extending boundaries or by force, conquest, infiltration or propaganda. I supported on the floor of the Senate and in committee the present program designed to aid Greece and Turkey to maintain their sovereignty, to choose for themselves the type of government they want without domination from the outside.

We dare not betray the almost simple, childlike faith Greece and her people place in the United States.

But it is currently charged that the path we choose will lead to war; that it is a dangerous course imperialistic in design. That it is a dangerous path, I do not dispute. Risks will be inherent in any course we pursue. Let us first determine what is right. So long as we are right we will not be afraid.

It is unfortunate that the charge of imperialistic ambition has been laid against our country. It is extremely unfortunate that a great and good man has allowed himself to be drawn into opposition to present policies and that he has repeated here and abroad charges that are the same which are being broadcast against us by Russia.

It is not imperialism that causes us today to grant assistance to Turkey and Greece, asking in return only that they be permitted to pursue their own way of life, free from domination by other nations, including ourselves.

Last summer I witnessed the explosion of two atomic bombs at Bikini. If I had seen nothing else this would have been sufficient to prove conclusively that no nation is strong enough to resist forces of total destruction. Civilization cannot survive an age of wholesale, mass atomic warfare. Even as we now have no choice except to maintain present military strength, so actual realities give no choice as to the long-range program.

With all man's progress and knowledge since the days of the barbarians, we have failed to adopt any adequate substitute for war. The rule of law must be substituted for the rule of force. To this end the jurisdiction of the United Nations must be greatly expanded.

First, a code of international law must be agreed upon by all nations. The world Court of Justice must have compulsory jurisdiction over all disputes. Secondly, the United Nations must have a strong international military force. Internationally, we must follow the same pattern as the founding fathers of this nation who wisely determined that each state should surrender to the central government the right to make war.

I'd Rather Be Tight....

Pink Elephant Joins Zoo's-Who Of Tar Heel Office Menagerie

By Earl Heffner

It's the fashion these days that drives me to distraction. For while I was wont to assert my individuality, now I shall bow to the masses, shall travel with the proletariat as they journey down life's highway past Danziger's and into the byway of The Shack. There, to brew or not to brew!

Ordinarily, like the great statesman who wanted the presidency, "I'd Rather Be Right." But in the face of senior week "Barefoot Day" and the prerequisite of all DTH columnists to have an animal as the Brain Behind The Column, "I'd Rather Be Tight."

While Dan Kinberg may have his Jud the Dog and Eddie Allen chats with the Brooklyn Bird, perhaps Dumbo, Walt Disney's offspring from Old Grandad's pink elephant line, may help me pound the keys of my galloping notebook. Old Barnum will turn in his grave when he learns of the DTH menangerie—Jud and Dan, Eddie and the Bird, Earl and Dumbo. A three-ring circus with lots of clowning, sans clowns.

Yesterday, while I was sipping in my Canadian club, Dumbo dropped in with his family, discussed with me the outcome of the recent elections.

As I moaned in my nightcap (one part soda), Dumbo congratulated me on finishing third in the race for member at large of the Publications board. Only four were running.

"Trouble is, Dumbo," I muttered, "I haven't—When—talent and popularity."

"Water," says Dumbo and I nods yes and continue. "Now lookit Allen and Kinberg." Gagging I continue, "They've got talent. Lookit Woestenburp. He's got popularity. But me, a prophet is not without honor—"

Dumbo flies into his brew. "Listen, genius, Allen and Kenberg have the talent, Woestendiek the popularity, Giduz is being a legend-to-be. All you've got is V.O. Why doncha use Lifebuoy?" He shed an alcholic tear into his beer. "My Scotch ancestry" he mutters as he shudders down the joy water.

Changing the subject to save my pride, I query Dumbo about the reason for Shoeless Seniors.

"Davidoff tells me this ayem, birdbrain—oops, sorry, thought I was speaking with your crony, Allen—that Max Shulman starts the fad with 'Barefoot Boy with Cheek.' Personally, I think credit goes to Li'l Abner. He's in favor of sartorial changes with all citizens being Al Capped."

"Carryover from the armed services", I bubbled in my glass. "But Dumbo I see it's time to politic. Let us look to the runoff."

"Yes," he sagely nods. "But why are Kinberg and Allen yet running with the horse collar around their two heads?"

"For their health!" I quip.

"And the rest of the horse. He won, I suppose."

"That, Dumbo isn't nice."

"Genius, I was only referring to how everyone, including ourselves, is getting into the act. Kinberg and the Dog, Allen and the Bird, you and me. Who's next?"

"Fred Jacobson", says I. "He squirreled the Mag election. And then there's Roy Moose. And Ed Joyner who made a monkey out of me."

"Yea, I know", says Dumbo as he flies off. "You'd rather be tight".

I drank the seltzer mumbling, "Think I'll have Dumbo reno-vated."

Carolina Scribes to Be Present At Collegiate Press Get-Together

By Barron Mills

A collegiate conglomeration of Walter Winchells, news hawks, and scoop reporters from campuses throughout the state will assemble in the Carolina Hotel in Raleigh today and tomorrow. Carolina will be well represented among the 200 delegates.

Approximately 14 staff members from the staffs of the Daily Tar Heel, Yackety Yack, Carolina Mag, and humor mag will be on hand to take part in the first collegiate press convention since 1941.

Jack Fisler, editor of the State college Technician, is in charge of arrangements for the event which boasts of panel discussions for the various departments of student publications. Noel Houston, of the Chapel Hill writer's colony, will speak at the luncheon today and Jake Wade, former sport's editor of the Charlotte Observer and present sport's publicity director for the University News Bureau, will take charge of one of the panels of the day. The ever-important social aspect of the ladies and gents of the typewriter world will not be forgotten as a final banquet and informal dance will be staged.

Interest in the well-being of student's vocal cords reached a new peak on campus this week as a result of the Valkyrie Sing. Judges along with the audience had a hard time determining the winners from the 11 contesting choral groups.

However, after much debate and careful consideration the ADPi's donned their rain coats and umbrellas and "Stormy Weather" with soloist Tip Summers washed away some of the doubt as to the winning voices. In the men's division the Phi Gams switched the scene and blended their voices to form a boy's choir and rendered "Abide With Me" and "Scandalize My Name.' and copped top honors in the men's section of the contest.

"Tradition," original song composed by the Sigma Chi group, made a big hit. The words and music are still resounding in the throats of those of the audience. The KA's drew wholehearted applause for their blackfaced skit which included "Snowball" and "Waiting for the Robert E. Lee.'

All of the groups that participated with their musical scores put on a good showing and have no doubt created a great deal of interest for next year's singfest.

Carolina's latest underground movement has stolen interest from the pending election run-off slated for next Tuesday. Would-be professors' and students' voices have reached a new volume under the strain of steam shovels and dump trucks. However the steam shovels on campus are not the only machinery that is capable of dirt-slinging. Tuesday is election day

Tar Heel Golfers Dropped By Strong Duke Aggregate

Linksmen Lose First Match of Season As Blue Devils Take 18½-8½ Victory

By Billy Carmichael

Carolina's golf team faced their major test of the season this afternoon—and failed.

The locals dropped a 18½ to 8½ decision to the Blue Devils of Duke in a match that decided the Southern Conference dual meet championship.

The Tar Heels lost at both ends and split in the middle. Dick Doeschler although turning in a 34-37—71 found himself shut out by Duke's Jimmy McNair who toured the course with a 33-36—69.

Junie Bailey, Carolina No. 2 man, had "one of those rounds," to come in with a 82 while losing to Art Wall, who wasn't exactly at the top of his game either.

Even Break

In the second foursome, Tar Heel's Harvey Ward and Ray Taylor played thier opponents on even terms all the afternoon to split for the 18 holes.

Mike Nolan met the same fate as teammate Bailey as he too was unable to hit his usual winning stride and failed to turn in a card while dropping a 3-0 match. No. 6 man, Ed Ashby saved some face for the locals when he won over Fletcher Wall in the final match.

The Duke boys beat the Tar Heels on the putting greens. Several times, on both the ninth and 18th holes, when match points were at stake, the Durham lads came through to add the necessary victory margin.

The loss was Carolina's first of the season after six straight triumphs. The Tar Heels will seek to redeem themselves on Saturday in the Southern Conference tournament to be played this year at Winston-Salem.

A crowd of several hundred was on hand to witness the clash and all left satisfied with having seen an outstanding match—mainly from the Duke point of view.

Coach Chuck Erickson took the loss as "just one of those afternoons," and added, "keep an eye on the boys in the conference tournament this weekend."

Conference Golf

Four men will represent each school in the tourney, according to Erickson, and from the looks of things, it will be Ward, Doeschler, Bailey, and Taylor who will get the nod to carry the local colors. Several others will enter the medal play.

The summaries:

McNair (D) defeated Doeschler, 3-0. A. Wall (D) defeated Bailey, 2-1. Best ball to Duke, 3-0.

Ward (NC) halved with Garrett, 1½-1½. Taylor (NC) halved with Davis, 1½-1½. Best ball to UNC,2-1.

Glinn (D) defeated Nolan, 3-0. Ashby (NC) defeated F. Wall, 2-1. Best ball to Duke, 2½-½.

Tar Heels Cop Tenth Victory

Whiteheart Scores Fifth Win of Year

(Special to Daily Tar Heel)

Charlottesville, Va., May 8—Bunching four hits into two scoring innings, the Tar Heel nine opened their three-game northern swing today by defeating the University of Virginia, 6-5.

Monk Whiteheart went all the way on the mound for the winners and even though nicked for 11 hits managed to stagger through. His opponent, Jack Leachman, limited Carolina to four safeties and fanned 11 batters.

This game evened up the Virginia series, the Cavaliers having beaten the Tar Heels in an early season game at Chapel Hill.

Open Scoring

A pair of Virginia errors plus a double by Kenny Black broke the ice in the third inning to give the Carolinians two runs.

The visitors bounced back with four more tallies in the fifth when two walks, two errors, a single by Jim Hamilton and a long fly by Jack Hussey, finished the Tar Heel scoring for the day.

The Cavaliers picked up a single marker in the fifth, three more in the eighth and one in the ninth.

Whiteheart Wins Fifth

Although hit pretty freely by the home team, Whiteheart had plenty of stuff in the pinches and racked up his fifth win against one loss. The wins gave the Tar Heels their 10th win against five defeats.

The score in today's game was the identical count by which Whiteheart beat the Cavaliers in the game here last year. The win today also gave Carolina revenge for the defeat Leachman inflicted on the Blue and White last month.

The line score:

Carolina	002 040 000—6 4 2
Virginia	000 010 031—5 11 4

Whiteheart and Hardee; Leachman and Carr.

Veterans Soon May Apply For Leave of Absence Pay

A statement concerning the application of veterans for accrued leave of absence pay was released by Veterans Affairs Advisor F. Carlyle Shepard yesterday. Shepard's statement follows in full.

Moffatt "Myrt" Sherard, who is doubly endorsed by the University and Student parties for the post of head cheerleader, came in first in Tuesday's balloting and is scheduled for next week's runoff.

"Veterans who plan to return to school for the summer or fall quarter, either to the University or another school, will be given an opportunity to apply for their accrued leave of absence during preregistration period this month. Those who complete their training this quarter, or who plan to return at a later date are not entitled to this leave according to the present Veterans Administration ruling.

"Forms and instructions will be provided in Memorial hall so that the request may be completed in time so that there will be no breaks in subsistence checks between quarters. Detailed instructions will be available in printed form for three categories (1) those returning for the summer session, (2) those not returning for the summer session but preregistering for the fall term, and (3) those transferring to another institution.

"Attention is called to the fact that any leave of absence granted will be charged against the total eligibility period, and will reduce this period by the number of days leave granted. Unless the veteran has more time than he needs to complete his training he will be the loser if he requests the leave."

House Passes Greek-Turkish Loan Proposal

Measure Approved By Vote of 287-107

Washington, May 9—(UP)— The House tonight passed the Greek-Turkish aid bill in substantially the form requested by President Truman and approved by the Senate.

The controversial legislation was approved by a roll call vote of 287 to 107, by a coalition of Republican and Southern Democrats. The majority shouted down the protests of the opposition that passage meant "a declaration of war on Russia."

One GOP congressman told the cheering law-makers, "If Russia thinks this is a declaration of war let her make the most of it."

Amendments Defeated

Before putting its final okay on the bill, the House beat down one restrictive amendment after another. The climax of the fight was reached with the defeat of an amendment by Wisconsin Republican Lawrence Smith that would have turned the whole Mediterranean problem over to the UN. However, like the Senate version, the House bill invites the world organization to take over the program whenever it votes to do so.

This measure does not appropriate the full $400,000,000 requested to carry out the program to bulwark Greece and Turkey against Communism. It does authorize the Reconstruction Finance corporation to set up an interim credit of $100,000,000 to be used until the full amount is voted by Congress.

Second Trip to Chair Ends Life of Convict

Saint Martinsville, La., May 9—(UP)—Willie Francis's second trip to the electric chair went off without a hitch this afternoon and the 18-year-old negro paid the penalty for murder. Willie was electrocuted in the same chair which failed to work a year ago.

Senate Adopts Bill Introduced by Taft

Washington, May 9—(UP)—The Senate has appointed Senator Taft's labor-bill amendment to permit employees and other injured parties to sue unions for damages resulting from jurisdictional strikes, secondary boycotts and some organizations walkouts. The vote was 65 to 26.

Truman Calls Meeting Of 7 Cabinet Members

Washington, May 9—(UP)—President Truman has called an unusual conference of seven cabinet members to talk over labor legislation and the portal pay bill. The conference came a short time after the White House announced that Mr. Truman will act soon on the portal-to-portal issue.

Speedup Is Indicated In Strike Settlement

Washington, May 9—(UP)—Speedup measures are being aplied to final negotiations in the rest of the telephone strike. Federal conciliators may ask representatives of the Western Electric company and its 42,000 strikers to stay in session over the weekend. The government ordered the move when picket lines continued to hold up returning phone workers in many sections.

Renault Workers Vote To End Auto Walkout

Paris, May 9—(UP)—Striking workers at the Renault auto plant in France have voted nearly two to one to return to work. It was this walkout which touched off the recent political crisis. The Communist party backed the wage demands of the auto workers in defiance of the government's wage-freezing program.

Ballot Box Bulletin....

Benson McCutcheon Victor In Senior Presidency Race

By Raney Stanford

Latest campus election returns released yesterday by Jabie Heyward, chairman of Election board, gave the final results on the junior and sophomore class officers balloting, along with a fairly complete picture on the student legislature contest.

Benson McCutcheon (UP), garnered 434 votes to capture the rising senior class presidency, while Bill Tate (SP) got 477 to become vice-president. Bill Blythe (UP) and [illegible] McLeod (SP), both unopposed, won the positions of treasurer and social chairman respectively. Annie Ben Beale (UP), with 418, won the contest for secretary of the class.

In the rising sophomore class elections, Charles Smith (UP) took the presidency with 301 votes. Totalling 324, Archie Webb (SP) won the vice-presidency, while Paul Nelson (UP) becomes treasurer, uncontested. Jo West, Independent candidate for class social chairman, captured the position with 345 votes.

Tallying the women student legislators is now complete in both dormitory and non-dormitory divisions. The seven winners are Joyce Peterson (UP), Jane Rodgers (SP), Margaret Allred (UP), Lynn Blanchard (SP) Joyce Carraway (UP), Jo Fishel (CP and SP), and Mary Moulton (UP and SP).

In the nondormitory category of men's representatives to the student assembly, seats were won by Charles Berman (UP), Vinnie DiLorenzo (CP), Jim Fox (UP), Ernest House (UP), Benson McCutcheon (UP), Jack McGinn (UP), Steve Nimocks (UP), Bill Porter (UP), Earl Somers (UP), and Ted Young (SP). Ted Fussell (SP) totalled 261 votes in this contest, but was disqualified.

In the men's dormitory resident-representatives however, the Election board has decided to have a run-off ballot between the top 13 contenders for the 11 seats. These 13 are: Herman Baker (SP), Gilbert "Bugs" Burnett (SP), Jack DeVore (SP), Pete Dobbins (CP), Jim Fort (SP), Pete Gerns (UP and SP), Jack Hamilton (UP), James Kelly (CP), Steve Millikin (CP), Dick Owen (SP and CP), Miles Smith (CP), Bill Taylor (UP), and Cam West (SP).

Chairman Hayward said that the board hoped to have the vote on the proposed constitutional amendments tallied by this Monday.

Student Body President Blames Few For Losing Their Heads in Campaign

Whisper campaigns and accompanying smear tactics which have beclouded the University reputation as they have rolled from undercover during the last few days, yesterday brought a ringing statement from Student Body President Dewey Dorsett.

Cracking the whip over the heads of the anonymous guilty parties, Dorsett, said, "a few. . .ardent supporters have lost their heads in their enthusiasm and allowed these irrelevant factors to enter into their campaign talks."

His complete statement follows:

"Through the first part of this week the elections campaign had been conducted on a high plane of fairness on the part of all parties concerned. In the past few days, however, vicious whispering campaigns have been going on which reflect a great discredit to the people responsible and stand to do harm to the entire student body and the University.

"The main issues at stake have been beclouded by rumors of an anti-semitic and anti-racial nature. I feel confident that the candidates concerned are not responsible for the instigation of these whispering campaigns, but that a few of their ardent supporters have lost their heads in their enthusiasm and allowed these irrelevant factors to enter into their campaign talk.

"Certainly it is agreed by all that these rumors have no basis in fact. I feel sure that the students will not be hoodwinked into believing such talk as this and that they will do everything in their power to stop immediately and further spreading of such rumors. The candidates for president of the student body and editor of the Daily Tar Heel are well qualified and capable men. They should be voted upon in light of their records, not on the basis of malicious rumors.

"The coming year has great possibilities for the betterment of student government on our campus. Let us enhance the attainment of this goal now by fair play and tolerance on the part of all students and enter the new year with a unity of purpose which will not be shaken by hatred and distrust."

New Yack Photographers...

Commercial photography work for the 1948 Yackety Yack will be handled by the Chidnoff studios of New York City, the Publications Board decided at its last meeting on May 1. Under the new contract, individual student photos should cost about $1 a person.

Authorization was given for the purchase of six new typewriters for the Daily Tar Heel and Carolina Magazine staffs.

The board also agreed to make good Daily Tar Heel financial overages in its photo allowance, but salaries of both Tar Heel and Magazine staff heads would be withheld in amounts corresponding to the excesses.

The present Magazine staff was ordered to turn over all its publishing facilities to the editor of next month's trial humor issue. The humor issue staff has been authorized to spend exactly one-eighth of the yearly magazine budget on its May issue.

Each campus publication was allowed to send two official delegates to the N. C. Press convention in Raleigh this week-end, with an allowance of $10 in expenses to each representative.

The next meting of the board will be on the evening of May 22, at which time the publication reins will be turned over to the newly-elected members.

If the Shoe Fits

It is difficult for the Daily Tar Heel to remain impartial concerning the campus political picture when it becomes victim of such vicious, biased attacks as that made by a party publication yesterday morning. If it were not so tragic—that campus politics have to stoop to such attempts—it would be funny.

Our editorial concerninig mud slinging—so roundly condemned by the above mentioned party paper—expressed the sincere and honest sentiments of every honest student voter of the campus. It has received further endorsement by the intelligent and accurate statement made yesterday by student body president Dewey Dorsett. It was not a condemnation of any party. It was a condemnation of those participating in mud-slinging.

It is regrettable that such incidents must occur. Our only comment to the University Party, some of whose candidates will suffer undeservedly as a result, is an oldie. If the shoe fits, wear it.

A Good Job

In the midst of all the election and runoff excitement, one group has been doing a fine job on a laborious, undersirable, unwanted task.

This group is the elections board. Elections board chairman Jabie Heymard and his assistants have worked hard to see that the election went off smoothly and that all votes were counted as quickly and accurately as possible.

It is not an easy task to get volunteers to count the ballots. Perhaps in the future it is too much to hope for that some type of machine for counting the votes be set up in order to facilitate matters one hundred fold. In the absence of any such machine, however, the board handled the largest number of votes ever cast in a Carolina campus election with a minimum of trouble and dissatisfaction.

The group went right to work on tabulating the results immediately the balloting closed and had a fairly accurate final tabulation of the major office results in the wee hours of Wednesday morning. Since that time they have been working daily on returns for all the other offices and finished them up yesterday.

Lack of a quick counting machine and the complex number of runoffs necessary made the much-advocated quick runoff election a physical impossibility, so the runoff has been scheduled for Tuesday of next week.

At that time the elections board will have another chance to shine. We are sure it will do another fine job and we hope the counters will once again have at least 3000 votes to count.

Letters To The Editor

Thanks

I wish to express my sincere appreciation and a very personal thank you, Mr. and Miss voter, for your kind support and belief in my platform. Thanks especially to John Dale Ebbs, Eugene Blake, and J. W. Henderson for their grand job of publicity and campaign management.

Just an added note to all my supporters. To give us Carolina students the means to express our support for the best bunch of athletes in the nation, we have got to have a first class cheerleading group. To keep our teams winning and the grandstand yelling, I now invite you to closely consider "Myrt" Sherrard's platform and ideas. I am sure that he will make us all proud as we cheer our teams to victory.

Yours for Carolina,
GREY ADAMS

Endorsement

I endorse Bill Miller for president of the Student ody. He is able, aware of our needs, cautious, polished, and effective. He will work consistently toward the kind of Student Government which I believe most of us want and need.

On Thinking Honestly....

Stock Propaganda Devices Appear in UP News Sheet

By Robert Morrison
Chairman, Publications Board

If democracy will work anywhere, it should work at the University of North Carolina in student government. Men like Washington, Jefferson and Madison founded the greatest democracy in the recorded history of man and predicted that its success depended upon the enlightenment of the people, and our greatest Americans have since enunciated the belief that education is the foundation of democracy—that men are free who can distinguish between truth and falsity.

Statistics indicate that Chapel Hill is the second best educated community in the nation, and Chapel Hill is the seat of one of the best developed student government in the nation. It should then appear that this student government in Chapel Hill should have a full measure of the advantages of enlightenment which the founding fathers thought necessary for the creation and maintenance of a optimum democracy. The participants in this student democracy, composed of college students and surrounded by higher education should be able to distinguish the true from the false—these student citizens should be able to recognize empty, emotional phrases as such and not be misled by monstrous misinterpretations modelled into slick language adding up to little logic.

It is because I firmly believe that the students at this university are worthy of democracy and are not relatively decieved by propaganda techniques that I feel that the recent mimeographed material circulated as U. P. News has not been read with credulity or sympathy by the constituency. Any student who has completed one of the many university courses in which logic and propaganda techniques are studied will observe in the U. P. News copious examples of elementary methods of presenting propaganda. I am indebted to a university professor for the categorizing of the seven stock propaganda devices which I list below and after each give an example from the U. P. News.

Name Calling:

"The Student Tar Heel is an example of the most viscious (sic) yellow journal sheet the campus has seen for many years." —p. 3, col. 1.

Testimonials:

"A well known coed. . .thanks the U. P. for leading the fight against dirty politics and urges all her friends to vote a straight UP ticket along with her (sic)."—p. 3, col. 2.

Transfer:

"The Student Tar Heel tried to smear the UP and used Hitler's trick of putting class against class in an effort to 'split and win.'"—p. 3, col. 1.

Band Wagon Appeal:

"Let's get together and turn out a big vote. Vote for the University party candidates!!"—p. 3, col. 2.

Plain Folks Appeal:

"(Jabine) will give the Tar Heel back to the majority of the students. . ."—p. 2, col. 2.

". . .Professional politicians are using the pages of a campus paper to further the ambitions of a favored few."—p. 1, cols. 1-2.

Glittering Generality:

"Jabine's leadership will provide the campus with a newspaper concerned only with the impartial coverage of student news and will replace the political sheet now being published with student funds for a publication of keen (sic) interest to all, representative of all students."—p. 2, col. 2.

Card Stacking:

This is the one propaganda device of which the U. P. News takes little advantage; yet I feel that the orderly and uncolored enumeration of the concrete advantages of the U. P. and the established shortcomings of the other parties would be the most honest, logical, and consequently the most effective, presentation which the U. P. could offer. In the U. P. News are several strong and apparently unassailable facts which if true, the U. P. might do credit to itself by presenting to the student body sans irrelevant propaganda. These are the: (1) vagueness of the DTH editorial, (2) endorsement by Charles Warren, (3) refusal of the DTH to print the U. P.'s opinions, (4) dubiously ethical use by the S. P. of DTH facilities, and (5) specific qualifications and platforms of U. P. candidates.

It was a shock to me to learn that such material as the recent U. P. News had emanated from the University Party, so long a conservative and relatively unassuming group which has depended for victory upon its bloc fraternity votes and the popularity of its candidates. I can not believe that the steering committee of the U. P. (composed of a representative from each member fraternity and sorority) could sanction literature which does not recognize the ability of the voting students to evaluate in terms of concrete facts in the manner of educated men and women.

It is my sincere hope that the University Party will be able to recall the May 9 issue of U. P. News and declare that its editor acted without their authority in a manner unbecoming to American democracy based on enlightenment of all.

Humor Master Cracks Whip Over DTH Animal Writers

By Tookie Hodgson
Editor-elect, Campus Humor Magazine

Everybody around this miserable rag seems to be inordinately preoccupied with an ineffable canine, named "Dan, the Dog." We haven't got anything against the moth-eaten bag-of-bones in question, but we do think the student body needs a brief respite from the incessant palaver which a certain DTH columnist claims to indulge in with the animal in question.

These delightful chats, delivered in a just-chums fashion, go something like this: "Have a beer, Jud." "Thanks, Dan." "That's alright, Jud." "What beer do you like best, Dan?" "All beer, Jud!" "Ha Ha! That's a joke, Dan." "Ha Ha! You're funny ,too, Jud." ad infinitum.

Thus, the sage of Dan-the-Dog unravels itself to the hilarity of the DTH humorists (everybody on the DTH staff is a humorist), and to the profound apathy of the hapless student body. In truth, there is considerable controversy going about as to whether or not the PU Board should award Columnist Kinberg a publications key. Most pepole seem to think a can of dog food would be more appropriate. Personally, we think they should compromise on a few free distemper shots. Then everyone will be assured that the foam emanating from the noted author's generous mouth is the by-product of a flagon of or ale or a potent squirt of toothpaste and nothing more.

The only sure remedy for "Dan the Dog," however, is the creation of a suitable animal substitute. We can think of several fine characters right off. Let's see, there's "Knute, the Gnu" and "Robespierre, the Rodent" or "Ambrose, the Anteater" and perhaps best of all "Donald the Duck-Billed Platypus." Gosh, wouldn't it be fun to sit down each day and have a beer with a Duck-Billed Platypus!

Of course, there would be no plot to the stories and they wouldn't be at all funny, but these factors don't matter when you're recognized by the DTH as a "humorist." After all, it doesn't matter too much what you write or how you write it, but it does matter who your friends are. The difficulty is, that the folks around here consider both James Thurber and a circus clown as belonging in the same humorous category. Unfortunately, that is just about as far as the distinction goes. Oh well! This is a student newspaper!

Writer Depicts AFL Radio Drama 'Down to the Mine in Shafts'

By Jud Kinberg

The DTH staff is bearing up with commendable upper lip and pip-pip to the sad communication that Tar Heel News has been yanked from the air-lanes for the time being. It seems that Dave Sarnoff sent down some sort of directive, and we had the ill fortune to be tucked into a sub-section. That's how sub-sections go these days. First William L. Shirer, now the DTH.

The table-shkaing news — which caused a bottle of Schlitz to upset all over my Sunday-best—is somewhat mitigated by the type program which is replacing us. If we had to go, I'm glad it's to the American Federation of Labor. Hell, Bill Green, you're welcome to the time, all six minutes and fifteen seconds of it.

It seems that the AF of L has decided to take its case directly to the people in the form of a fifteen minute dramatic serial. All of which makes the first time in broadcasting history that "Myrt and Marge" have been sponsored by the proletariat. I know Myrt won't mind, but I'd hate to be the one to tell Marge. After all, it's one thing to cut up with Dr. Brent each afternoon to sell Rinso White!, and quite another to hawk AF of L-not-so-clean.

Due to a recent blow dealt me when I was caught with six cards in a five card poker game, I have not yet been able to hear the union's program. In fact, even if I could, I wouldn't, because the possibilities of what it might be like are so much more intriguing than truth could be. So let's away to the land of ether and hot air:

Announcer: The American Federation of Labor brings you—Joe Pastudnak, Union Card No. 111475. The gripping drama of the coal fields and the men who go down to the mine in shafts!

Before we join Joe and his faithful union-organizer wife Mabel Pastudnak, just a word from the sponsor of our little show.

2nd Announcer: Workers, have you had your union card punched today? Don't delay. See your workshop foreman this afternoon. With men who know unions best, it's AF of L 3,550,000 to 2,659,716! And don't forget, we have John L. Lewis. No other union can make that claim.

1st Announcer: What other union wants to.

2nd Anouncer: As we left Joe yesterday, he was about to fall into the clutches of Cinder Goon, beautiful and evil strike-breaker for the company which Joe's union has put on the list for their big May-Day strike. Bewitched by the beauty of Cinder, Joe has forgotten little Mabel Pastudnak, who is working her fingers to the bone punching union cards. As we join Joe, we hear:

Joe: Cinder, do you really think that Bill Green is nothing but an old fuddy-duddy?

Cinder: I said so, didn't I, tall, dark and unionized?

Joe: Yes I know, but I can hardly believe it.

Cinder: Don't be a fool, Joe. Give me your union card and all your worries will be over.

Joe: But. . .

Cinder: Give me it, Joewoey. We can make a better union together—just the two of us.

Joe: But. . .Oh well. . .

1st Announcer: Will Joe give up his union card? Will he forsake Honest Bill Green and the boys of Local 1150? Tune in tomorrow for the further adventures of Joe Pastudnak, the All-American (Federation of Labor) Worker!

Of course, that may not be exactly it. But if they haven't thought of it yet, I'd be very happy to turn out a few more scripts for the labor lads. I can also write one to hit the male listeners, something like, "Gwendolyn Gurch, laundress, or Bill Green's Other Union Suit."

What Do YOU Say?

Today's question

Why do you think so many students voted in the elections?

Answers

It was an effort on the part of many of us to keep incompetence out of student government! Perhaps we'll win next time.—Samuel Schmucker Charlotte.

Good advertising, I suppose! —Richard Fishel Jr., Philadelphia, Pa.

I don't think many students knew what they were voting for or why, but the fact that the weather was good and the voting poles were in convenient places in partly responsible for the large turn out.—Sidney C. Shertzer, Newark, N. J.

The convenience of the polls in this election cannot be underestimated. This resulted in more lines, increasing the tendency to imitate. When there's a line there's a weakness to get into it.—George McKinney, High Point.

Two reasons: so many students, and the efforts of three parties.—Jimmy Wallace, Jamesville.

The realization of the students that their participation in local affairs is important, after the initial shock of the post-war difficulties had worn off —Lincoln Shiao Hing Kan, Shanghai China.

Linksmen Seek Loop Tournament Title

Ten Golfers Enter Annual Meet Today In Winston-Salem

By Billy Carmichael

Carolina's victory - seeking golfers will seek to bound back onto the winning trail today at the expense of some dozen loop teams in the annual Southern conference links tourney being played at the Old Town country club in Winston-Salem.

The tourney will be a thirty-six hole affair with each school being represented in team play by four entrants. Besides this quartet six more men from each school may compete in the individual play.

Coach Chuck Erickson will call upon his Flying Foursome of Dick Doeschler, Harvey Ward, Junie Bailey, and Ray Taylor, which got its wings clipped by Duke on Thursday, to carry the Tar Heels' hopes of winning their first conference championship in many years.

The Blue Devils, loop dual meet champs, will of course rule as favorites to regain the crown they won last year. Davidson college seems to be the tourney dark horse.

A number of other Carolina lads will enter the play for individual honors. Mike Nolan, Bob Cox, and Ed Ashoy, regulars during the season will be making strong bids for the title, with the other three to be chosen from Roy McKenzie, Ted Barnes, Pep Younce and Dan Nyimicz.

The tourney will be played over the 6900-yard Old Town layout which is rated as one of the toughest in the state.

The Tar Heel entry has somewhat of an advantage over most of the other competitors in as much as the locals played the Old Town course last weekend. They left for Winston-Salem early yesterday and played another round on the tricky Twin City links during the afternoon.

Besides a possibility of winning the team title, the Tar Heels may also walk off with individual honors in the tourney. Doeschler is as steady a player as is found in college circles, and he, along with Ward, always a tourney star, will be among the leading favorites. Bailey and Taylor also are possibilities if they come up with [illegible] performance.

Fourth Loop Win..

Tar Heels Top Maryland In Run Parade, 16 to 3

(Special to Daily Tar Heel)

College Park, Md., May 9—The North Carolina baseball nine registered its fourth Southern conference victory of the season here this afternoon by trouncing Maryland, 16-3, behind the steady seven-hit hurling of Tommy Andrew.

Registering his second triumph of the season, the slim righthander was supreme all the way and was never in trouble. It was the first time this year that he had gone the distance, a fact which brought no end of pleasure to Coaches Bunn Hearn and Walt Rabb in view of the five Big Four games on tap for next week.

While Andrew was holding the Old Liners in check, the Tar Heels were combing four Maryland pitchers for a total of 16 hits. Rip Ryan, with four bingles, and Jim Hamilton, with three, were high on the list, while Harry Beason, Jack Hussey and John Gregory all weighed in with two apiece.

The game was a pitchers' duel for five innings, after which time the score was 2-1, Carolina. But in the sixth frame, the Tar Heels broke loose with three runs and then clinched the ball game in the eighth with six tallies.

The Tar Heel baseball contingent today moves on to Richmond, Va., where they tangle with the strong Richmond Spiders in their sixth Southern conference scrap of the season. Either Vinnie DiLorenzo or Frank Robinson will handle the mound chores.

Jayvees Register 8-1 Win; Whitted Hurls Four-Hitter

The jayvees baseball nine took their third straight win yesterday afternoon by downing Maury high school of Norfolk, Va., 8-1, behind the four-hit pitching of George Whitted.

Mutt Thrift and Gerry Allen paced the Tar Babies by garnering four hits each.

The Carolinians wasted little time in taking the lead right off in the first inning when Allen led off with a single, Kirk walked and Thrift banged a home run.

After this the Tar Heels picked up single runs in the second, third and fourth frames, and a pair of tallies in the eighth.

Fans Five

In the meantime Whitted was handcuffing the visiting high schoolers to four hits and a single run made in the third. He pitched fine ball, striking out five batters and walking four.

The jayvees showed several fine prospects, including shortstop Flea Collins. Collins made two beautiful plays that tok base hits from the Maury team. Another man that showed promise was catcher Ott Evans, who was tackling his first backstop assignment of the year. He handled himself very creditably and kept the baserunners on their toes all afternoon.

All in all, the jayvees looked very good while managing to nick three Maury pitchers for a total of 15 hits.

Two Indian Combines Reach Title Round in Doubles Play

Singles Encounter Starts at 2 o'Clock; Taylor, Morris Fall in Quarter Finals

By Bob Goldwater

William and Mary's Gardner Larned and North Carolina's Vic Seixas came through two grueling rounds of tennis true to form yesterday afternoon and will clash in the finals of the Southern conference net tournament this afternoon at 2 o'clock on the local courts.

VIC SEIXAS
...gains final round.

The championship round of the doubles play will be an all-Indian powwow of two William and Mary combinations. The top-seeded duo of Larned and Tut Bartzen emerged in expected fashion but the second-rated team of Seixas and Clark Taylor were eliminated in the semi-finals by the third-seeded tandem of Fred Kovaleski and Howe Atwater.

Of the three Tar Heel entries in the quarter-finals, Seixas was the lone one to advance into the semis. The other two, Taylor and Ray Morris, fell before the strokes of Bartzen and Larned in morning activity.

Seixas, meanwhile, polished off the other two Indians, both of whom were among the eight seeded players. In the quarter-final round, he drubbed Atwater and then downed Kovaleski in a four-set battle to qualify as the first finalist.

Teammates Clash

The semi-final singles clash between teammates Larned and Bartzen was the top duel of the long afternoon. The diminuitive Bartzen captured the first set in a best three-out-of-five series but Larned came back to take the second. Bartzen regained the lead in the third and came from behind in the fourth to almost win the set and match. But Larned put an end to the rally and breezed through the fifth canto to earn the other finals berth.

Seixas also had to quell an uprising to gain his semi-final victory. Losing the first set by 3-1, he roared back with five straight games and went on to capture the second set by the same score. But after Seixas took a 4-1 lead in the decisive third set, Kovaleski came to life and scored five quick games. Seixas staved off his opponent's threats in the fourth canto to gain the match.

Today's duel pits the nation's 12th and 16th players against each other for the second time this week with the winner gaining the title last week by Zan Carver of Carolina in 1941. The doubles crown that year was captured by two other Tar Heels, Harris Everett and Ham Anthony.

Experts Give Highest Honor To Newspaper

Editorial Column Gets Most Praise

By Earl Heffner

Vest buttons popped in the offices of the Daily Tar Heel yesterday when the twice-ringing postman brought a registered communication from Minneapolis, Minnesota that the newspaper has been honored with an All-American-Superior honor rating by the Associated Collegiate press.

Scrutinized by professional journalists, the intelligentsia of judgment societies for collegiate publications, the DTH went through the Purgatorio of Criticism, emerged with the highest of honors in the field where competition was keenest.

For the class wherein the DTH was judged included all papers emanating from four-year universities with an enrollment of 5000 or more as a daily publication. The service rendered by the A.C.P. was the regular critical service with the rating to be published.

Over Perfect

Perfect scores were made in the fields of vitality, creativeness, excellence of leads (first paragraphs of news stories, editing (copyreading and proofreading, typography, and sports coverage and writing.

To Burn Sin...

Rig Veda Hymn to Feature Glee Club's Home Concert

By Doris Newburn

Gustav Holst wanted to "burn up our sin nerce flaming Agni" in his exciting hymn from Rig Veda. Agni is the God of Fire and it is fire when the Women's Glee club sings it in its alternating rhythm. This will be one of the highlight numbers on their concert program Monday night, which will be presented at Hill hall.

Another Gustav Holst number, "Tears, Idle Tears," reflects an acquiescent temperament but at the same time it is the type of piece that sends chills down your spine.

Under the direction of Paul Young, the Glee Club will also sing modern ... as Kay Harris "I Hear America Singing."

Nina ... and Barbara Harmer will ... specialty numbers.

Dr. Arthur Shepard, internationally known composed and performer who is now a member of the faculty at Western Reserve university in Cleveland, Ohio, is coming to Chapel Hill for the concert Monday night to conduct two of his own numbers, "He Came all so Still" and "Song of the Sea Winds."

DR. SHEPARD

Dr. Shepard has a reputation of being one of the most outstanding American musicians of today and is well-known in Europe as well as America.

The six coeds pictured above were sponsors for the annual Spring Pharmacy dance held last night in the Women's gym. Top row, left to right are Patsy Burgiss, Sparta; Rookie Lee Collier, Roanoke Rapids. Lib Stutts, Durham. Bottom row, left to right are Mary Sue Robertson, Hillsboro; Jane Redman, Pilot Mountain; and Geraldine Hobbs, Cherryville.

The Last Laugh

The boys in the back room can have another topic of conversation after today. Your Daily Tar Heel, which most of the student body have fashionably sworn at rather than sworn by in recent months, yesterday received sweet salve for its bloody head. With men who know campus publications best, the Associated Collegiate Press, the DTH for 1946-7 has been ranked ALL-AMERICAN—SUPERIOR.

Translated into the language of Franklin street, that means that professional, veteran journalists, judging the DTH in comparison with other dailies at colleges over 5,000 enrollment, have kissed your paper with the highest possible honor rating.

Dissected from headline to toe, the DTH was rated no lower than "very good" in every department and "excellent" in a majority of them; all in all, a long-awaited back-pat for a paper which has long stood knee deep in criticism of its disgruntled readers.

It was with a pleased recognition of the irony of the situation that the DTH received its rating for the department most heavily lambasted by its student "adherents." The editorial column, regularly picked to pieces, especially in recent campaign fumings, received the highest point award of any critical classification. Where 50 points was the top-listed value, the DTH received 55, and a penciled comment: "Excellent editorial column!"

The All-American rating, especially the laurel wreath for the editorial page, is a kind of vindication and a definite honor for Editor Bill Woestendiek, whose first knowledge of the accolade prabably will come when he reads it here. Mr. Woestendiek was absent from the office yesterday, visiting his bride-to-be of June, but he has never been "absent" when it came to giving this campus as conscientiously impartial and technically good a paper as thinking persons could desire.

The Daily Tar Heel has been blackened by its scorners, true. But now, black though it may be, it can justifiably crow.—EDDIE ALLEN.

Post-Mortem

Post-mortems are never happy occasions, especially for the subject concerned. In the case of Miss Martha Rice, yesterday officially relieved of her duties as director of Graham Memorial, the post-mortems are particularly sad. For Miss Rice, who undeniably has done a superlative job in her tenure at the student union, will be missed. Whatever the abilities of her successor—and we are certain that William M. Shuford will be in every sense qualified—it seems unfortunate that her work was not rewarded. Maybe we are short-sighted, but it is hard to see the value of losing someone of proved competence.

Then and Now

The following item can be found on page three, column four of the North Carolina Standard, printed in Raleigh on January 14, 1852:

"At Chapel Hill according to the American Almanac, there were but 39 clear days from June, 1850 to May, 1851, the rest, 326, being recorded as cloudy. There is probably no other locality in the Union, or in Europe, where there are so many cloudy days. There were 194 clear days according to the same work At Green Lake, Wisconsin in 1850. They had 143 clear days, 117 variable, 51 cloudy—which is below the usual number of clear days."

Although the preceding paragraph was written almost 100 years ago, a modern day Carolina student, picking it up and reading it without glancing at the dateline, might make the remark, "I knew it!"

All of which is of very little world-shaking significance because Carolina students will always remember and appreciate the beauty of Chapel Hill—be it clear or cloudy, it's always Carolina.

Modern Man Is Pioneer Of Significant New Age

By Joe Allan

Today in every civilized area on this planet the basic character of all observations in all directions which we may wish to investigate is one of change.

This is an age of social, political, economic, and artistic experimentation. The static influence of tradition or "authority" must be abolished for it is the control of the past over the future. Western civilization has discovered the vast area lying outside of tradition and that discovery has created the modern mind. Man is realizing the necessity of adjusting himself to the tempo of an ever changing universe.

The man of 1947 must look about him and earnestly try to understand the true nature of his relationship as a member of a national and international society. Only by such understanding can he intelligently provide for the general well being of his society as a unit in a civilized world.

In scanning the political horizon there are three salient points indigeous in modern government: (1) There must be free and unhampered criticism of all public officials by any person or group so inclined. (2) Modern government implies the abiding by agreements made, until new agreements take their place. This amounts to a moral control between equals, without a provision for the use of force. (3) Unimpeded creation and growth of groups in the society which aim to bring about both immediate and eventual improvement in human relations. The U.N. is the outstanding example of such an organization.

The force of democracy has not been exhausted. Its immediate future depends upon the "scale" which citizens can cooperate for the general public good. The preparation for future wars has seriously obstructed the development of sincere and lasting cooperation between those who differ in language and custom. "Men internationally eat foreign friut: but nationally they kill the foreigners who grow the fruit." Nationalism in politics and culture must give way to the sort of unconscious internationalism we have in the fields of commerce and finance. The most important problem for us today is the maintenance and development of the art of government.

What do we see on the social horizon? The intellectual attitude of the pre-modern man was one of flagrant individualism and egotism. These qualities and energies cannot be stifled but they can be orientated in such a way so as to direct them in the modern concept of social cooperation, which is now the necessary attitude for progress.

Mechanization and education must advance along parallel paths and keep pace with each other, for today manual labor has been transformed into mechanical speed leaving man with more leisure time than ever before, and with more diversified forms of entertainment to select from to fill that leisure time. Education must prepare him to select those forms of entertainment which will energize and enrich his experience and add to his well being as an integral part of a family and community.

Getting Hodgson's Gloat

Question Before House: To Beer With Dan or Munch on Jellyrolls

By John S. O'Neall and Dick Seaver
President, Phi Beta Kappa; Literary Editor, Carolina Mag.

After reading in Saturday's DTH the Great Master Humorist Hodgson's unwarranted verbal onslaught against campus journalist Jud Kinberg and the justifiably-insulted Dan the Dog, we feel it is time to let go a few opinions held to by a grea' number on the campus—'great number' meaning any who know the aforementioned editor-elect at all personally. We know the Honorable "Foo-Foo" only slightly—just enough not to want to know him better, but if Saturday's column, or any other column excreted from within his apparently warped little personality, is any indication of what he will force down the public's throat, we offer sympathy to those who must remain here for a whole year of Jellyrolls, Sinkholes, Histrionici, et al.

In the way of narrow, bigoted post-election gloatings, this column of Hodgson's is the best evidence of reptilian ancestry he could have shown. This confirmation would surely cause a glow in Darwin's heart! And this attack on top of the good-natured acceptance of their defeat by Messrs. Kinberg and Allen as shown by their columns in Thursday's DTH! There's nothing like good sportsmanship to promote good-will and brotherly love. Kick 'em again, Tookie, they're still breathing!

But more than showing thinness of character, he also displays the sound judgment of a great editor by thus ridding himself of whatever humor talent is at present in evidence around these parts—talent that might possibly save his neck from the Literary Gallows next year.

In his column Hodgson advises distemper shots for Kinberg, but from rumors being voiced around, Talkative Tookie had better procure for himself one large needle filled with rabies vaccine. They tell us Dan is getting mad as hell!

Matthew (not to be confused with Saint) Hodgson advises that the campus would profit well "by a brief respite from the incessant palaver which a certain DTH columnist claims to indulge in with the animal in question." Personally, people, if you had your choice of either sipping Viennese coffee in Danziger's with 'Foo-Foo' Jellyroll or quaffing a brew in Jeff's with the amiable Dan, which one yould you take? Us, too!

Senator Fails to Hatch Any New Political Eggs

By Manny Margolis

The New Mexico Senator's speech last Thursday night did not "hatch any new political eggs. The order, he said, remains the same—hard-boiled for the Russians, scrambled for the American people, and fried in oil and Greece for American business interests throughout the Middle East.

Interestingly enough, on the very same night that Senator Hatch made his talk here, Undersecretary of State Dean Acheson made an address in Cleveland, Miss. He, too, spoke in favor of the Truman Doctrine—but in terms of implementation, not in terms of "what is right," of "childlike faith," or of "self-determination."

Acheson laid it on the line. He called for authority to embargo exports to certain foreign countries and to prevent "undesirable foreign buying" in the American market so that the United States can direct exports "where we want them to go." This, apparently is Mr. Acheson's interpretation of "what is right," of the "faith" of nations in the U. S., and of their right of "self-determination."

The Undersecretary of State went even further. "We must push ahead," he said, "with the reconstruction of those two great workshops of Europe and Asia—Germany and Japan."

The United Press reported this speech as in effect representing "the United States' determination to proceed as far as possible on a unilateral basis with the former enemy countries in the absence of four-power agreements."

The New York Herald Tribune (May 9) reported that this new interpretation of the Doctrine "could rule out the possibility of nations within the Soviet orbit even buying critical food and reconstruction items here."

All of which would seem to place Senator Hatch in an almost ridiculous position when he platitudinously proclaims that we must achieve "complete cooperation and reciprocity among nations in trade relations."

It makes him look even worse when he decries the practice of imposing a "philosophy of government" on weaker nations. For that is exactly what we are doing in Greece, Turkey, Saudi Arabia, Transjordania, the Philippines, China, and Japan. And to add insult to this irreparable injury, we haven't even had sense enough to impose OUR philosophy of government in these countries.

Herald Tribune correspondent Seymour Freidin makes no bones about this in Thursday's report from Athens. He states bluntly that "formation of a new (Greek) government is being actively sought through OFFICIAL AMERICAN CHANNELS."

It pained this writer to observe the distinguished Senator from New Mexico speak of "invasion" as if there were only two forms—(1) communist infiltration and (2) military aggression. Surely he is aware of the historically well-known fact that there are other, much more subtle and effective means. Does he know nothing about dollar diplomacy and ECONOMIC infiltration and control? Does he know nothing about trade war, such as that on which Acheson would have us embark? Does he know nothing of the activity of American oil companies in the Middle East?

The "invasion" that the Senator fears has really nothing to do with marching troops or scheming revolutionaries. The invasion he fears is that which has already permeated the political and economic atmosphere of Europe, Britain, South America, and Asia. It is an invasion of alert democratic thought and political act which promises the fruition of the Four Freedoms for all peoples.

Such a flood of ideas and ideals cannot be dammed by dollars and guns. The current is too strong, the waters too deep, the tide too high.

Tar Heels Nip Richmond In Tight Hill Duel, 1-0

Robinson Hurls Carolina's First Shutout With Neat Four-Hitter in Conference Tilt

(Special to Daily Tar Heel)

Richmond, Va., May 10—The Tar Heels found just what they needed for the long string of games that lie ahead of them in right hander Frank Robinson who set the strong Richmond Spider team down with no runs and only [illegible] hits, in the meantime his teammates pushed across one run in the fifth [illegible] the Tar Heels a 1-0 victory over the Spiders in a game played here today.

The lone run came when Jim Kelly [illegible] to right field to start the fifth, and after John Gregory had [illegible] out Rip Ryan sent a screaming single into center field, when Billingsly let the ball get away from him Kelly came all the way around to score the games only marker.

Robinson pitched magnificent ball to record the Tar Heels first shutout of the year. In allowing four hits he [illegible] only two men and struckout [illegible].

The Spiders are supposedly the strongest team in Virginia and the victory today gave the baseballers a perfect sweep of three games on this weekend's road trip.

Kelly, Gregory and Ryan led the Tar Heels at bat with each garnering two hits. Kelly had a perfect day at the plate.

There were no extra base hits in the game and the one run that Carolina gained was the only threat of a run throughout the closely played contest.

The Tar Heels are home tomorrow afternoon and will be hosts to the Wake Forest Demon Deacons. It is expected that lefthander Vinnie DiLorenzo will take the hill.

Doeschler Takes Co-Medal Honors In Individual Play

By Billy Carmichael

Winston-Salem, May 10—Carolina's golfers gained partial revenge for the defeat the Duke Blue Devils handed them Wednesday by garnering the Southern conference championship this afternoon over the Old Town country club links.

Dick Doeschler paced the Tar Heels with a sizzling 142 for two rounds. This gave him co-medal honors with Duke's Jimmy McNair. There will be no playoff and the men will be crowned as co-champions.

Doeschler had the low score of the tourney when he posted a three under par 67 in the afternoon round. He had a 75 for the morning tour. McNair hit a 73 in the first round and a 69 in the afternoon session.

Baseball, Track Monopolize Sports Spotlight This Week

Baseball and track take over the Carolina sports spotlight for the coming week, with the diamond activity slated for its toughest test of the campaign.

In the next six days, the Tar Heel nine engages in five Big Four contests and Carolina's final standing in the loop could be fairly well determined by next Sunday. The Tar Heels start the week with a home clash tomorrow against Wake Forest and then meet the Deacons again Tuesday at Wake Forest in the first of two deadlocked contests to be played off between the two clubs.

The locals journey to Raleigh Wednesday for their first scrap with the league-leading N. C. State team and return to Emerson stadium for a Thursday affair with Duke. The season's series with the Blue Devils is completed Saturday with a clash in Durham.

The track team limits its activity to the last two days of the week, but those will be big days. Preliminaries in the Southern conference annual track meet begin Friday and on Saturday the Tar Heel cindermen go in quest of the crown gained last year by Duke.

Except for the National Intercollegiate tournament next month, Carolina's tennis team ends its slate this week with two dual matches. The racquetmen, runners-up in the Southern conference, face State at Raleigh Wednesday and complete their schedule Saturday against Virginia at home.

Golf activity for the week shows three meets on the schedule. The linksmen oppose South Carolina tomorrow, Wake Forest Wednesday, and Georgia Tech Friday.

W & M Ace Scores Four-Set Victory, Then Cops Doubles

By Bob Goldwater

The powerful William and Mary net aggregation hogged most of the honors in the final round of the Southern conference net championships here yesterday when the Indians' ace, Gardner Larned, downed Carolina's Vic Seixas in the singles play and then teamed with Tut Bartzen to drub two other teammates in the doubles title fight.

Larned's accurate ground strokes combined with a strong backcourt game proved too much for the Tar Heel luminary and the nation's 12th ranking star triumphed by scores of 8-6, 3-6, 6-0, 6-3. The match could be summed up by Coach John Kenfield's observation that "Larned's volleys along the ground are among the best of any player in the country today. Vic played fine tennis but Larned's strokes were near perfection."

Seixas Takes Lead

The duel appeared on the way to an upset when Seixas took a 5-2 lead in the first set. But his opponent rallied to tie the count at 5-all. After both players maintained service, Larned broke through Seixas' serve in the 13th game and held his own in the 14th to capture the set.

Larned later declared, "I think Vic played his best in that first set. If he had won when it was 5-2, there's no telling what might have happened."

As it was, Seixas bounced back to capture the second set and tie up the match. Larned took the third canto by a love score and went ahead in sets, 2-1.

In the fourth set, Seixas jumped off to a quick 2-1 lead, but Larned roared back with five straight games. The Tar Heel ace held his service, but Larned came back with four points to gain the game, set, match, and Southern conference singles championship.

In the doubles competition which followed, Larned and Bartzen were just too strong for Fred Kovaleski and Howe Atwater and registered a [illegible] 6-4 sets.

NET NOTES: William and Mary captured seven of the eight trophies, which did not arrive in time to be awarded after the matches. The remaining cup went to Seixas as singles runner-up . . . Larned kept the crowd of close to 2,000 amused with his comments on how the play was progressing . . . Head referee was Ted Penzold, Jr., of Norfolk. . .Larned's win evened up the overall tourney series between the two players. They first clashed in the National Boys' final in 1938, with Seixas the winner.

Durham Gains Track Crown

A fighting Durham High school track team yesterday sewed up the State high school championship by nosing out Charlotte Central by less than four points in a meet run at Fetzer Field.

Individual honors went to Jim "Sugar" Cain of Needham Broughton high school of Raleigh, who scored 19 points himself. He broke the scholastic 440-yard record by running a 50.3 second quarter which took six-tenths of a second off the old mark. Cain also tied the 220-yard mark by being clocked in 22.4 seconds. He also helped himself to first place in the discus throw and [illegible] the broad jump.

The record in the 220-yard run that was tied was one that was set in 1931 and had withstood all attack until it was raised "Cain" with yesterday.

Final Team Standing

Durham 35, Charlotte Central 31 2-5, Raleigh 28 1-2, High Point 24 1-5, Fayetteville 17 3-5, Greensboro [illegible], Greenville 2.

Staff Members Represent University Publications at Convention

Approximately twelve members of the staffs of the University publications attended the revival meeting of the semi-annual conventions of the North Carolina Collegiate Press association in Raleigh this weekend.

In the Hotel Carolina delegates from ten colleges throughout the State held two days of business sessions, social functions, lectures, and panel discussions, highlighted by a banquet speech by Josephus Daniels of the Raleigh News and Observer. Other prominent speakers included Noel Houston, local author, Jake Wade of the University News Bureau, and L. M. Pollander and Stuart Sechreist of the University journalism department.

Active student delegates from the University were Barron Mills, nominee for several offices of the association, and Roland Giduz, member of a committee appointed to formulate a new constitution.

Proposed Bill Curbs Closed, Union Shops

Washington, May 12—(UP)—The Senate will finally vote on its labor bill tomorrow afternoon at 12:30. The upper chamber has approved a proposal by the Republican leaders which would prevent any new amendments from being introduced after today, with the final vote being taken tomorrow.

Arabs and Jews Debate Palestine Independence

Lake Success, N. Y., May 12—(UP) Arab and Jewish representatives exchanged bitter words before the United Nations Political committee. Nonpartisan CPU Sponsoring Talk In Gerrard Hall

Students May Hear Communist Leader

Giving the University community a chance to get the personal angle on the Communists in the nation today, the Carolina Political union, nonpartisan student group, will present Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, chairman of the woman's division of the Communist party of the United States, in an address in Gerrard hall at 8:30 this evening.

Miss Flynn, who is expected to speak on the aims and position of the Communist party today, is the third speaker to be brought to the University this year by the CPU. Her topic is "Are Communists Un-American?"

Few people in the nation are more qualified to represent such views than is Miss Flynn, whose advent into radical politics came early in her youth when she joined and was an active organizer of the Industrial Workers of the World, and from then until the present she has been associated with many important strikes and labor cases, including the Sacco and Vanzetti case, the Mesabe strike, the Tom Mooney strike and the Patterson silk strike of 1913. She recently returned from Paris where she attended the International Congress of Women, of which she is an executive officer.

Jerry Davidoff, chairman of the Carolina Political union, who will preside at tonight's meeting, urged all who can possibly come to attend this presentation, "which will be an authoritative and exciting discussion of a much discussed topic." Davidoff also stated that as usual, there will be a free and open discussion period following the address.

The CPU is a nonpartisan student group which has brought such outstanding men as Franklin D. Roosevelt, Henry Wallace, Gerald Nye, Robert Taft, David Lilienthal, Ellis Arnall, among many others, to the University campus.

UNC Will Aid Atomic Power Development

PRESIDENT GRAHAM

Dr. Frank P. Graham Heads Area Program

According to a statement released by representative Carl T. Durham of Chapel Hill, member of the Joint Congressional committee on atomic energy, the University of North Carolina and Duke university have been selected as the two schools in this state to take part in a nation wide program for development of atomic energy.

The two North Carolina universities are members of a block of southern schools who will work with the Oak Ridge, Tenn., Institute of Nuclear Physics. Three similar groups will be set up to work with other research centers in the east, midwest and Pacific Coast areas.

Dr. J. W. Straley of the University physics department said yesterday that the program is designed to broaden the training of graduate students in physics as well as to further atomic research. Facilities of the Carbon laboratories of Monsanto Chemical company in Oak Ridge will be utilized by graduate physics students from the [illegible] schools included in the program and professors from the schools will go alternate tours of duty in the Oak Ridge laboratories.

At present Dr. O. K. Rice of the chemistry department is on a year's leave of absence from the University serving as principal chemist at the Carbon laboratories.

President Frank P. Graham is head of the Institute of Nuclear Physics for this area.

'Carolina in Color' Show Set for Graham Memorial

Tomorrow night at 8:30 P.M. in the main lounge of Graham Memorial will mark the campus premiere of "Carolina In Color", a movie made by Empire pictures, student owned-and-operated motion picture company.

Graham Memorial is sponsoring the screening of the color film, which features the director, Martha Rice, and Baxter Coleman as principal players. The photography was done by Bob Coulter, business director of the student company. Betty Warren Jones made the paintings used in the picture.

Also shown on the same bill will be scenes of the Sadie Hawkins Day festivities of last fall, and the formal introduction of Ned Reap and his Dream Serenaders to the campus. "The Memoirs of a G. M. Assistant", made last spring on the campus will be reshown. This latter film includes scenes of all the important organizations which carry on activities in G. M. like the Grail, the CPU, the IRC, the Tar Heel, the Yackety Yack, the Freshman Orientation program, and student government.

Coulter announced that the student company is interested in enlarging its scope to a bigger production schedule that will include longer dramatic works. All interested persons are urged to attend this showing to fill out talent questionnaires that will aid in planning the activities for this summer and next year.

A second performance of the films will be given if the extent of the crowd makes it necessary.

The national policy committee and publicity committee will present reports on the housing bill now before Congress and a plan for getting local veterans behind the measure.

Auto Accident Takes Toll With One Dead, Five Hurt

By Bill Sexton

Weekend auto accidents in North Carolina and Virginia took the life of one Carolina student and injured four others and the director of the University Extension division.

William K. Sutherland, 23, famed as Tar Heel blocking back, died early yesterday morning from injuries received when the car he was driving overturned on "Dead Man's Curve" three miles south of Chapel Hill on the Pittsboro road at 9:35 Sunday evening.

Five other occupants of the Sutherland car are now in Watts hospital, where their condition is reported as "very serious." Highway Patrol records list them as Wade Dunbar and Eugene C. Turner, University students; Jack Baker and Thomas Buchanan, students at Presbyterian college at Maxton; and Martha Ann Mathews, secretary to the physics department here.

Still Unconscious

Hospital attaches said yesterday afternoon that all five were suffering from serious head injuries and were all still unconscious.

Highway Patrolman Robert R. Thomas, Chapel Hill, said the accident occurred when the Sutherland car, apparently traveling at a "dangerously excessive" speed, toward Chapel Hill, left the highway on a precarious curve. The car, said Thomas, rolled end over end for 267 feet along the side of the highway.

A suitcase belonging to one of the occupants was thrown 100 feet off the road, and the careening car's windshield glass was scattered nearly as far. Police officers said the car was "as completely wrecked as any we've ever seen."

Life in Danger

A three-way collision between Raleigh and Durham Sunday evening caused critical injuries to Thomas Hudgins, medical student here. The auto in which Hudgins was riding, driven by a Duke student, collided head-on with an approaching car as the Duke student was attempting to pass a trailer truck eight miles west of Raleigh on the road to Durham. The truck, loaded with 42 bales of cotton, was overturned, and occupants of the two autos were injured.

Attaches at Rex Hospital, Raleigh, where Hudgins is undergoing treatment, said his life was still in danger. Hudgins' home is Houston, Texas.

Extension Head Hurt

Russell M. Grummon, director of the University's Extension division, was "reported as improving" yesterday from injuries suffered in an automobile accident near Fredericksburg, Va., last Friday evening.

The complete extent of Grumman's injuries could not be determined as yet, according to information received by Charles F. Milner, associate director of the division, from Mrs. Grumman, who is at her husband's side at the Mary Washington Hospital in Fredericksburg.

Deciding Vote

The right time to do the right thing is right now. And the right thing today is to go to the polls and vote for those men you desire to lead your student government next year.

The big three who can shape the campus future are you, the individual student, and the two guys next to you. The student body turned out in large numbers last week to vote for the men who will lead them through next year. But last week's voting was not enough. Runoffs have been scheduled for practically every major office. Unless every student who voted last week turns out and votes again today, they may awake tomorrow to find that the wrong man is in office. Government by the majority is the best campus government.

It's up to the students to decide. Recent mud slinging has reached a new and dirty high in campus politics. Whether or not such activity will receive its just reward will also be shown in today's election. It might be well to remember that people who sling mud lose ground.

But in the final reckoning, the students' vote will be the sole deciding factor. Your future student government lies in your hands. Elect the men you want. Vote To Day! Ignore party lines and malicious rumors. Vote for the qualified candidate. You are electing your leaders.

Tragic Evidence

No words can express the dire need on this campus for safe, cautious driving. Far more compelling and impressive is the sad story of weekend accidents involving students on this campus.

The Daily Tar Heel has appealed in the past for more cautious handling of automobiles by students on and off our crowded campus. Fortunately, the University has been extremely lucky as far as serious accidents were concerned throughout the year.

But the string ran out over the weekend and struck home with tragic suddenness. The University has suffered a great loss. The homes of the students who were killed are shrouded with sadness. and their many friends find it almost impossible to believe.

Automobile accidents wreck lives and homes and create horrible, non-erasable memories. Even the safest drivers are not always safe on the highway, but the more caution exercised by student drivers, the safer our roads will be.

We can only deeply regret the tragedy of the past weekend. We can work to prevent its happening again in the future—to save future lives.

Are Communists Un-American?

Are Communists un-American? A real live Communist will attempt to answer that question tonight at 8:30 in Gerrard hall.

At the risk of bringing down another deluge of conservative criticism on our harried heads, the DTH urges all interested students to attend the address tonight by Miss Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, women's division chairman of the Communist party.

Although we cannot endorse what Miss Flynn stands for, we can recommend listening to her. Why not go to the speech and see what Miss Fynn has to say for her orgainzation. At worst, it can be educational.

A Look magazine photographer had little trouble substantiating his belief that all the pretty girls in Los Angeles are not in the movies. He found much uncontracted movie material on the Southern California campus, but as he loaded his camera backward for the third time, he confessed, "All these beautiful girls make me so nervous."

Voting Will Answer Question Of Student Body Gullibility

By Earl Heffner

Shades of William Randolph Hearst! The U. P. News still lives in the true mud-slinging tradition of that colored era of yellow-sheet journalism.

But today it goes on trial. Today the voters of this University will set down a precedent in history as with judicial determination they inform future campus wheels, i.e., square-rigged politicians, as to the correct method of winning an election.

The question:

"Are students gullible enough to be hoodwinked by smear tactics, or are they going to vote down the Bilbo-Talmadge-Hearst campaign in asserting their own intelligence?"

President Dewey Dorsett has spoken against the curve-balling habits of the mud-slingers. His sentiments have been voiced by the Daily Tar Heel, are now being re-echoed.

Publications Board Bob Morrison, a U. P. candidate, has joined the throng against the tactics which have besmeared the reputation of UNC.

In reflecting upon this reputation, it might be appropriate to add that while many may bemoan the presence of a Communist on campus although recognizing the freedom of speech which brings her here, they realize too that her presence is within the boundaries of legitimate exercise of free speech. Detrimental mud-slinging is not.

There is one way for removal of this potential stain. It is through active voter participation in today's runoff. Ballots cast on merit of student candidates as were done in the initial election will open the eyes of myopic muddy men.

Their campaign has been an insult to campus intelligence! 'Nuff said.

'The Rivals' Provides Many Hearty Laughs for Audience

By R. Haskell Hamilton

The three performances of Sheridan's "The Rivals" hardly seemed enough to satisfy the demands of the entertainment seekers who witnessed the Laboratory Theater productions in Graham Memorial over the weekend. This is the group which gets my vote for having brought good theater fare to the campus more consistently than any other UNC organization.

The presentation of the Rivals in the intimate surroundings of the Union, coupled with the freshness, vitality and skill of the players was the motivating factor in the frequent applause, hardy laughs and genuine enthusiasm shown at the completion of each of the three performances.

In addition to the group awards to Suzanne Davis and the technical crew of the Carolina Playmaker's Laboratory Theater, individual accolades should be given to Frederick Johnson for his nimble and natural interpretation of the difficult role of "Captain Jack Absolute." The verbal tiffs between Johnson and Edsel Hughes as his father, "Sir Anthony Absolute" were sheer comedy delight. Jim Warren's likeable, animated and robust characterization of Bob Acres was primarily responsible for creating the delicacy between a country lout and an earthy but not too bright country squire.

Eleanor Ringer in the famous role of "Mrs. Malaprop" turned in a more than creditable performance, as she brought repeated laughs to the audience with her by now familiar malapropisms. Pat Palmer's "Lydia Languish" was better than acceptable, but not quite as polished as demands the part of the lovely, plotting young lady.

The only general fault with the entire production was a general tendency to hurry through the roles as quickly as possible. So much so that the members of the company frequently gave an impression of trying to talk faster than the late Floyd Gibbons, with about 20% of the lines being intelligible and the remaining 80% completely unfathomable. I'm still trying to figure out most of the lines of Henrietta Cooper as Julia Melville, and trying as hard as I can to forget the complete misinterpretation of the role of Faulkland as played by Murray McCain.

Other talented members of the cast included: Frank Echols, Harry Thomas, Maude Baynor Foy, Marty Jacobs and William Sessions.

Disgust and Amusement

Dear Sir:

With mixed disillusionment, disgust, and amusement I have read two issues of the U. P. News. With disillusionment because I had thought the U. P. leaders more intelligent than to resort to unwarranted name-calling and unfounded accusations in the hopes of drawing a few more votes in a college election; with disgust at the paper's appeal to anything but reason; with amusement because the paper might have been funny had it not been so promiscuously vulgar.

I voted for several U. P. men in the late elections and should have done so again in the run-off had I not read the journal representing the mental workings of responsible U. P. workers. I hope every interested person will procure a copy of the U. P. News (preferably May 9th edition), read it thoroughly and thoughtfully, and follow his own conclusions.

For Publications

May 12, 1947

To the Editor:

In view of the $77,000 which the Publications board will spend in the next year, it behooves the student body to consider carefully the qualifications of those it elects to the Board.

Of the candidates for the Senior member of the Board we would like to call attention to two pertinent facts about Roland "Foo" Giduz.

1. Roland was one of the major reasons why The Daily Tar Heel was awarded an All-American—Superior honor rating by the Associated Collegiate Press. As managing editor for the last year his four to six hours of daily hard work, and his conscientious, unbiased presentation of campus issues have contributed greatly toward giving the campus a first-rate, nationally recognized newspaper.

2. Roland has had more Daily Tar Heel experience than either of the other candidates. He has served on every editorial staff of the paper since 1942 writing news, sports, features and editorials.

We believe that a vote for Giduz is a vote for impartial and progressive campus publications.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

BYRNES AND MARSHALL, ONCE RIVALS, BREAK BREAD TOGETHER; TRUMAN'S RE-ELECTION AFFECTED BY GREEK AID SUCCESS; HOW U. S. CAN REVAMP GREECE.

Washington.—It didn't make the social columns, but Secretary of State Marshall has just held his first dinner party after returning from Moscow, and the guest list indicates that some old wounds are healed.

The dinner was held in the home Nelson Rockefeller has loaned Marshall. Guests included: General Bedell Smith, U. S. Ambassador to Moscow; Mr. and Mrs. Jack McCloy, former Assistant Secretary of War, now head of the World Bank; and last but not least, the former Secretary of State and Mrs. Byrnes.

There was a time when shrewd, likeable Jimmy Byrnes would not have sat down comfortably with General Marshall. The discomfiture started more than one year ago when Byrnes came back from his own mission to Moscow—after a failure no worse than Marshall's—and was welcomed by a barrage of criticism from some of President Truman's immediate staff. Several of them, led by Admiral Leahy, urged Truman to drop Byrnes and replace him with General Marshall as Secretary of State. In fact a message was sent to Marshall, then in China, on a secret War Department code so that it would not be seen by the State Department, asking Marshall to be available.

Premature pubicity, however, helped upset this plan. But even the good-natured Jimmy rankled at these maneuvers—though he never blamed Marshall for them. As a sort of token of friendship, however, and in order to compare notes on Russia, both men sat down last week and broke bread together.

PROGRAM FOR GREECE

Now that President Truman has been voted his money for Greece and Turkey, he faces the all-important question of exactly how he will spend it. Upon this largely depend two things:

1. Whether we have peace or war with Russia.

2. Whether Harry Truman is re-elected President of the United States.

Regarding the less important of these two points, it is interesting to note that the quarter billion dollars we are giving Greece will run out one year from now, just as the 1948 political campaign is getting hot. And if Harry Truman has to come back to the taxpayer at that time and ask for more dough for Greece, then you can write it down as definite that he will be a one-shot president.

If, on the other hand, the Greek program is a success, the so-called Truman doctrine may go down in history. And what's far more important, the peace of the world may be materially stabilized.

After World War I, this writer spent two years in and out of Greece on Balkan reconstruction work, so perhaps knows a little of the difficult problem the United States faces in rebuilding this hectic corner of the world. Based on this experience, it is my belief that if any one nation is qualified to help lift Greece from its present imbroglio of strife and corruption, it is the United States. And even though my Republican friends may suspect me of trying to help re-elect Harry Truman, here are some of my own ideas on how Harry can spend our money so as to get 100 cents out of each of our 250,000,000 Greek relief dollars:

1. Use the King of Greece as MacArthur has used the Emperor of Japan. Let the King write the decrees, but let the United States guide his pen—and guide it most carefully.

2. Forget the State Department's mid-Victorian idea that we are not going to interfere with the sovereignty of the Greek Government, and instead lead the Greek Government—by the nose, through the King—almost every step of the way. Otherwise we will be up to our necks in the crookedest, smelliest dictatorship that ever fouled the dictator-polluted Balkans.

3. Don't waste money on the Greek army. They don't need any more weapons of hate with which to kill civilians. And they can't bring the guerrillas down from the hills, even with more weapons.

4. Grant immediate amnesty to all political prisoners and exiles—with an American guarantee behind it. This American guarantee should attract all the rebels down from the hills, except the Communists who are relatively small in number.

5. Use most of the American cash to rebuild the key ports of Salonika, Piraeus, and the railroad bridges. This will both give employment and get the trade of Greece back on its feet. If this can be done in a single year, private banks or the World Bank can go in the second year with ordinary business loans to finance the rest of Greek reconstruction.

If, on the other hand, U. S. dollars are squandered on arms, plus goods which only bolster the ruling Royalists and eventually reach the black market, then Greece will be back asking for more dough one year hence.

6. Make sure the British forego their previous private loans to Greece. British bankers, charging interest at around fifteen per cent, formerly drained a heavy portion of the Greek budget.

7. Ask the United Nations to appoint observers to work with us and report back to the UN on everything we do. This should partially offset the slap in the face we gave the United Nations by going ahead with Greek aid independently. It should also prepare for eventual taking over by the UN.

8. Finally, appoint—through the King—a new coalition cabinet representing all political factions except the Communists and Fascists. The Fascists who collaborated with the Germans and who are now represented in the cabinet, must be punished. A Democratic, middle-of-the-road cabinet is the only hope to lift the one-time cradle of democracy out of its present slough of anti-democracy.

Deacons Rally In Ninth To Nip Tar Heels, 8-6

Sport Spins — With Irwin Smallwood

Tourney Spurt of Golfers Gives Carolina 5th Crown

SINCE SEPTEMBER when the 1946-47 collegiate sports season officially opened, the 16-school Southern conference has awarded eight championships, and the smooth-swinging Tar Heel linksmen's sensational performances Saturday over the Old Town Country club course in Winston-Salem presented Carolina with its fifth such award.

Being the fifth SC crown that Tar Heel teams have won this season takes a little away from the sensationalism of the achievement of the golf lovers of Coach Chuck Erickson, but the fact remains that this victory was probably the most dazzling of the quintet annexed thus far.

Carolina had gone undefeated up to the Duke dual match last week, and after the Blue Devils, long the dominant golf school in the conference, had decisively trounced the Tar Heels, the Methodists appeared a cinch to walk away with team as well as individual honors in the tournament.

The defeat at the hands of the neighborhood Dukes apparently had a telling difference on the game of the Tar Heel club, though, and the results showed the Carolina golfers proudly displaying the title they had won by a margin of six strokes. The aggregate of 585, which was a total of the 36-hole scores of the top four Carolina contestants, was 26 strokes under the previous record.

It was a big shock to Carolina students and football fans as a whole to hear of the death of Cotton Sutherland in an automobile accident Sunday night, and we speak for the students as a whole in expressing sympathy to his family and close friends. Many of the football squad members and Monogram club members as possible will attend the funeral in Laurinburg today en masse, and Monogram club president Jim Camp has asked that all students wishing to go, meet in front of Woollen gym at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon. Anyone who can take a car and some riders is urged to be present then.

For the Tar Heels, it was an amazing 67 on the afternoon 18 holes turned in by dependable Dick Doeschler and a similarly outstanding pair of 69's recorded by Ed Ashby and Junie Bailey on the morning 18 holes that netted the triumph and the first SC golf crown for Carolina in history.

It was the first time since 1935 that Duke had not emerged victorious in the links tournament, and the defeat would have been even more decisive had the Tar Heels not lost five strokes to the Blue Devils on the last 18 holes. That means that the Carolina crew was leading by an impressive 11 strokes at the halfway mark, and as a matter of fact, they led by that same margin at the three-quarter mark in the tourney.

The tournament was termed a great success, and 12 of the 16 Southern conference schools were entered. Next for the Heels is a possible trip to the Nationals at Ann Arbor, Mich., starting June 22. Michigan, whose Wolverines lost by a good-sized margin to the Tar Heels earlier in the season, is the defending titleholder. This victory for the linksmen may also be another kind of a triumph. From the looks of plans which are still in the embryo stage, Carolina may have its own golf course by next year. It's something Carolina needs, and continued interest in the links sport may prove the telling influence in the drive for the Tar Heel fairways.

NOTING TRACK: A final count shows 14 SC teams entered in the annual conference meet to be run here Saturday. This is a record field and undoubtedly means the best meet in history. . .The Tar Heels, incidentally, who are currently rated as favorites, will likely be hampered by the leg injuries suffered by Chunk Simmons, Ted Shultz and Laddie Terrell. . .Two former Carolina swimming coaches, Willis and Ralph Casey, will accompany track teams here Saturday. Ralph is head mentor at VMI and Willis is an assistant at State.

Runners Seek SC Track Title

Fast Field Entered In Middle Distances

Fourteen Southern conference track teams totaling 286 competitors spell only one thing, and that a big track carnival to be held on Fetzer Field on Friday and Saturday. The annual conference outdoor track meet will provide all the thrills of a three ring circus.

One of the outstanding events should be the 440-yard run, and it will feature such outstanding runners as Roger Neighborgall of Duke, last year's champion, Norm Rucks of South Carolina, Chuck Chambers of State, Don Nelson of Carolina, and the three standouts for the University of Maryland, Tom Devlin, Ed Mathews, winner of the indoor crown, and Jim Wilson. With these who have all run under 50 seconds for the quarter will be added a host of other top men to make quite an event.

Eye-Opener

The 880-yard run should be another eye-opener, with such stars as Neighborgall, Frank Magill of VPI, who took a second in the indoor games, Mark Burnham of Carolina, Egelund of State, Stirling Kehoe of Maryland, and Bill Orr of South Carolina.

Running is scheduled to get underway with the field events starting at 3:30, and the preliminaries in the other events starting a half hour later.

The team title will probably be a dual between, Carolina, Maryland, Duke and State College. Entries have been received from, Carolina, Duke, State College, Davidson, Wake Forest, VPI, VMI, South Carolina, Furman, Maryland, Clemson, Washington and Lee and William and Mary.

Grand-Slam Homer Provides Big Four Win for Visitors

Loss Drops Locals to Third Place in Loop; Teams Battle Again Today at Wake Forest

By Bob Goldwater

After going 22 innings in two games without reaching a verdict, Carolina and Wake Forest finally played to a decision in the regulation nine stanzas yesterday in Emerson stadium, and the result was anything but gratifying to the Tar Heels. For the Deacons shook off their Big Four cellar role in the final fatal frame to register four tallies on a grand-slam home run and thus defeated Carolina by 8-6.

The setback dropped the locals from their second-place perch in the loop standing, and also evened the score between the two teams for the season. The Tar Heels will get a chance for quick revenge today when they travel to Wake Forest for a clash slated to start at 3:30. Vinnie DiLorenzo and Elmer Sexauer are the probable mound opponents.

Monk Whiteheart was the victim of the Deacon uprising and the high-kicking righthander suffered his second loss against five wins. In trouble most of the way, Whiteheart came within two outs of escaping the last-ditch drive that netted the Deacons their win.

After Charlie Teague walked and Clyde Whitener singled to center, Red Cochran sacrificed both along the basepaths. George Edwards was purposely passed to set up a possible play at the plate.

But the strategy failed. Shortstop Art Hoch, lashed Whiteheart's first offering down the left-field line and sped around the bases for a grand-slammer.

Carolina staged a little rally of its own in the last half of the ninth, but it wasn't enough. Jim Hamilton, who led the team at the plate with three for four, did manage to score but Rip Ryan was called out on strikes after the bases were loaded with two outs.

Afield, Ryan turned in an outstanding game for the locals, coming up with several fielding gems.

In yesterday's other Big Four contest, Duke took over third place in the standings by virtue of a 8-5 victory over the league-leading State nine.

The standings:

Speed Violators Are to Receive Little Sympathy

As a result of the fatal accident Sunday evening, speed limit violators near Chapel Hill will receive little sympathy if apprehended, State Highway Patrolman Robert R. Thomas said yesterday.

"There was no evidence of drunken driving or mechanical trouble in Sunday night's wreck," Thomas said. "The sole cause, apparently, was speeding."

In an effort to end the violation of state speed limits the consideration usually extended student lawbreakers will be dropped, Thomas said. He pointed out that on the hilly roads approaching Chapel Hill even the allowed speeds can be dangerous.

The limit on Pittsboro road and Highway 54 toward Greensboro and toward Raleigh is 50 m.p.h. The limit on the Durham road is 40 m.p.h.

Unions Deny Strike Rumor

Senate Bill Facing Presidential Veto

Washington, May 13. — (UP) — Spokesmen for the AFofL and the CIO issued quick and emphatic denials tonight of a report that organized labor is contemplating a general strike.

The report originated in New Orleans and said that unions were thinking of a 24-hour nationwide walkout to demonstrate their dislike for the bills Congress has been passing.

But the national headquarters of CIO and AFofL here say it's the first they've heard of any such idea.

Came Rapidly

The report came on the heels of the overwhelming senate vote, passing a sweeping union control bill. The senate vote was 68 to 24, six votes more than the two-thirds majority needed to over-ride a veto. The sponsor of the bill, Republican Senator Taft, declined to make any predictions about whether the senate will over-ride the presidential veto which has been widely prophesied.

UN Votes Commission To Study Palestine

Lake Success, May 13.—(UP)—The United Nations Political committee has voted to set up an 11-nation commission, excluding the Big Powers, to study the Palestine problem. However, an argument arose immediately over the legality of the action because less than half of the 55 nations cast votes on the motion.

Alaska May Get Visit By President Truman

Washington, May 13. — (UP) — Interior Secretary Krug says President Truman definitely will visit Alaska late this summer "if Congress adjourns in time" meantime. The White House says Mr. Truman will make a July Fourth address at Monticello, the home of Thomas Jefferson at Charlottesville, Virginia.

Latest Drama Of Hans Rothe Ready to Open

Opening tomorrow evening at 8:30 in the Playmakers theater for a two-night run is the world premiere production of "Innocence," a full length play written and directed by Hans Rothe, visiting lecturer in the dramatic art department.

Mr. Rothe has just translated this play from the German original form. He wrote "Innocence" in 1938 while he was in Paris, after he discovered the idea for this play in a French newspaper. The story revolves around the vengence of a mother for her teen-age daughter, and sets forth the Paris atmosphere of 1938.

Mr. Rothe will give a simple staging of "Innocence." The play lends itself to acting and unique lighting, and these two mediums will be emphasized. No scenery will be employed, but the stage will have three different levels for acting.

Leading roles are taken by Barbara Bramble, Eleanor Ringer, Peter Bucknell, David Hooks, and Lois Warnshuis. The stage manager is Betty Young; Mark Sumner is master electrician.

Mr. Rothe, who has had over 3,000 performances of his German translations of Shakespeare, served as a director for Max Reinhardt's theaters in Berlin from 1925 to 1930. He is also the author of notable German books on the theater, and one of his best known plays, "Night Arrival," has been produced in London, Madrid and Stockholm.

CPU Elects Kemp To Chairmanship For Coming Year

The Carolina Political union Sunday evening elected William R. Kemp, Jr., of Goldsboro, to its chairmanship for the coming year, heading a slate of North Carolina natives in all the other offices. Warren J. Wicker, Sanford, was named vice-chairman, with Josephine Fishel, Vaughn, as secretary and William F. Patterson, Winston-Salem, treasurer.

Kemp, who succeeds Jerry Davidoff, graduating senior from Sunnyside, N. Y., as the gavel man of the non-partisan student group, is a rising senior, member of Delta Kappa Epsilon, and has been a star performer on the varsity wrestling team. He first joined the union in 1942, and returned a year ago after two years with the AAF. During the present year he has served as the organization's treasurer.

The new vice-chairman is also an air corps veteran and a rising junior, and an active member of Student Federalists. Jo Fishel, re-elected to the secretaryship, is a member of Alpha Gamma Delta, president of the Women's Glee club, and a newly-elected member of the student legislature. She is a rising senior in political science. Bill Patterson, a rising sophomore, and also a veteran, is treasurer of the IRC and a member of the track team.

This slate of officers is the first to be made up entirely of North Carolinians in the recent history of the union.

Alpha Delta Pi to Hold Founder's Day Banquet

Alpha Delta Pi sorority will hold its Founder's Day Black Diamond banquet tomorrow evening at 6:00 o'clock in the banquet room of the Carolina inn.

All alumnae who plan to attend should call Mrs. Herbert McKay at 3396.

Early and incomplete election returns gave Tom Eller (right) Student party candidate for presidency, a fairly large lead over University Candidate Bill Miller (left). However, as the counting progressed, Miller cut deeply into the lead with Gerrard hall returns, leaving the final result in a nebulous state.

American Communists Want Complete Socialism in U.S.

By Ed Joyner

"The Communist party in the United States has a two-fold program," Miss Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, chairman of the woman's division of the Party in this country, told a packed Gerrard hall audience of students and faculty members last night.

"The immediate goal of American Communists is to organize people into neighborhood, trade union, and political movements to work for the present needs of the people."

Amplifying this statement Miss Flynn cited the work of the party during the depression in organizing the unemployed to demand relief, jobs, and social security.

Ultimate Goal

The ultimate goal of the party according to Miss Flynn is complete socialism in the United States. "We believe socialism would be better for all the people than capitalism for the few," she stated.

Mentioning such outspoken liberals as Henry Wallace, Miss Flynn said, "We have very little quarrel with any liberal person who is trying to make capitalism work, but we do not believe that it will work in the long run and history seems to bear us out."

Miss Flynn stated that the party does not advocate the change to socialism in this country by revolution but rather through legislation at the will of the majority after the people have been educated to the evils of the capitalistic system.

Stout, matronly and bespectacled, Miss Flynn answered all queries about the party in the question period following her speech, giving a direct answer to some questions, turning the point of others, but never refusing to answer.

The American Communist party has no official ties with the party in Russia or any other country, Miss Flynn told her listeners. "The party follows a line of anti-Fascism here, and to that extent it is in agreement with the policies of Communists in

Miller, Jabine Close Gap As Gerrard Ballots Score

Folger Leads Long; Daniels Paces Surratt As Close Balloting Features Runoff Vote

By Chuck Hauser

At press time last night election returns pointed to another surprise for the campus, as Tom Eller (SP, CP), who took an amazing lead in last Tuesday's elections for president of the student body, slowed down in the runoff tabulations under terrific pressure from a UP barrage coming from the Gerrard hall polls, with Bill Miller (UP) taking a large majority.

Eller seemed to be repeating his last week's performance early in the evening, as returns came from balloting at Lenoir and Aycock polls, but with a total vote estimated at over 2900, Gerrard held the edge with approximately 1600, Lenoir-Aycock 1100, and Alderman 250.

Barron Mills, SP candidate for editor of the Daily Tar Heel, was also taking a terrific beating from the Gerrard hall tabulations, as Bookie Jabine (UP) moved up from his position in the rear from Lenoir-Aycock poll reports.

Polling Battle

The entire election seemed to be on a battle-of-the-polling-places basis, as returns from Gerrard would come in strongly UP, only to be repulsed as SP balloting came to the fore from Lenoir and Aycock polls. As the Daily Tar Heel went to press, returns from Alderman dormitory had not yet been tabulated.

In the vice-presidential race, Jack Folger (UP) and Charlie Long (SP) were running a close race, the vote fluctuating between Gerrard and Lenoir-Aycock as in the other tabulations.

Daniels Leads

Sam Daniels (SP) was holding his lead over John Surratt (UP) in the overall balloting, but with the strange results coming from the campus's four polling places, a reversal was expected at any minute.

Another close battle was being waged between Moffatt Sherard (UP, SP) and Charlie Stancell (CP) for the head cheerleader's post, with signs of Sherard pulling out in front with a large lead appearing imminent.

Bob Cox (UP) was holding his lead over Dan Logue (CP) for vice-president of the CAA, while Roy Moose (CP) was coming out on top in his running with Ed Joyner (UP) for the member-at-large position on the Publications board.

For senior members on the Publications board, Gene Johnstone (UP), Julia Ross (UP), and Roland Giduz (SP) were fighting over two seats on the Board, with Johnstone and Giduz in the lead.

With ballot-counting moving extremely slowly, more aslowly even than last week's tabulations, nothing tangible could be determined before completion of the counting last night. The slowness was blamed on the shortage of counters to aid Elections board Chairman Jabie Heyward in his herculean task.

Pianist, Organist Will Give Student Recital Tomorrow

Samuel Andrew, pianist, and John O'Steen, organist, will present the seventh in a series of student recitals in Hill hall Thursday evening at 8:30.

Andrew, whose home is in Albemarle, is a pupil of Dr. Jan P. Schinan. He has been the recipient of the Kay Kyser scholarship, the Collegiate diploma, and the Young Artist's diploma. He has served as accompanist for the Men's Glee club.

O'Steen, of Washington, D. C., is also a pupil of Dr. Schinan, and has studied at the Luigi Amidio Conservatory in Florence and the Franz Sauer Mozartiem in Salzburg. He received the Kay Kyser scholarship in piano in 1941.

The program will include compositions by Bach, Beethoven, Debussy, Sweelinck, Loeillet, Franck, and Alain.

Gimghoul Castle Proves Mysterious For Two Decades of Feature Writers

By Sigsbee Miller

As mysterious and foreboding in appearance as its name implies, Gimghoul castle — "Grim Gimghoul" to two decades of feature writers—stands half a mile east of Chapel Hill on lofty Piney Prospect, a nearly perfect replica of the pre-Norman feudal stronghold.

Gimghoul castle is the home of the Order of Gimghouls, one of Carolina's most exclusive social groups. It is really Hippol castle but this name is used only by members and alumni of the order.

Modeled after the architecture of Saxon, England, Gimghoul was built in 1925-26 of native stone by the famous Waldesian stone masons.

The most impressive room in the castle is known as the Great hall. Its walls are of rough stone and wheel-shaped chandeliers of hand-forged iron hang from the ceiling.

Moose Heads

Suspended from the walls are three moose heads, one buck head, and a wild boar's head. In front of the huge fireplace is a white bearskin and over the hearth hangs an oil painting of two winged devils and a knight in combat.

At the other end of the hall is the traditional minstrels' gallery. To the right of this is the famous Round Table of the Gimghouls, said to be almost identical with the original Arthurian round table in England.

Gimghoul's most famous occupants are Apollyon and Christian — two life-sized wood statues of the "Pilgrim's Progress" characters, carved with a pen-knife almost a century ago. Apollyon is the glamour boy. Standing five feet, eight, Apollyon has been described as having the "head of a man, the feet of a bear, the horns of a bullock, the tail of a

Devils Bowing Out?

"Duke-Carolina," a phrase to conjure with in our state's athletics since men first began to kick around a football—and each other—may one day lose its lustre. That's the somewhat amazing whisper which has come from a neighboring Methodist campus in recent months, and which reached out-loud proportions in the sports column of the Duke Chronicle this week.

Duke, so the story goes, is beginning a move toward de-emphasization in athletics, which soon might take its name from the heights of sports and make the annual classic with its Chapel Hill neighbors just another game for the Tar Heels. The sports editor of the Chronicle explains, in effect, that when Duke was a young school, struggling along with an endowment of only a few millions per year, highpowered athletic teams were essential to put its name on the educational map. Now, it seems, Duke has arrived as a citadel of learning, and no longer will need broad-shouldered young hirelings to glorify its worth to the outside world.

All this has a ring of truth, especially in light of the showing of Duke teams in the past year. Whether that showing was a cause or an effect of the move to tone-down sports is open to conjecture, but at any rate the opinion seems to be—originating at Duke—that the Durham school has seen the last of its great greenback-built teams.

The passing of the "Duke-Carolina" rivalry would leave a great void in North Carolina's athletic life, but at Chapel Hill there should be none who bemoan the opportunity to maul the Blue Devils roundly every November. And that day might already have come.

On the other hand, we see no move from our Durham brothers to discontinue intercollegiate sports, and as long as they can field a team they will have to face the consequences for their following of the Ivy-League lead.

As we say, Duke's reasons for moving out of the sports headlines sound authentic enough. Still when "de-emphasis" is mentioned, we are always reminded of Knute Rockne, the Notre Dame immortal, who used to work himself into a frenzy over the word. Rockne didn't call it "de-emphasis," though. He called it "The wail of the loser."

Public Recognition

We were pleased and gratified to learn that the Daily Tar Heel has received the highest All-American rating given by the Associated Collegiate Press judges in its nationwide competition.

Coming as it does, at the end of a long and busy year marked by much deserved and undeserved criticism, the award is most timely. For such recognition is the only reward received by the hard-working staff that has spent most of its time and effort throughout the year trying to put out an acceptable newspaper for the student body.

Speaking as the editor of the publication, I want to express my thanks and appreciation to the men who made the award possible. To Managing Editor Roland Giduz, Desk Editor Barron Mills and their many night editors and reporters who made the news coverage possible; to Associate Editor Eddie Allen and newly-appointed Managing Editor Earl Heffner for their fine writing and steady work; to Sports Editor Irwin Smallwood, his assistant, Bob Goldwater, and their hard-working sports crew who have covered the campus sporting scene closely and accurately; and to Business Manager Bill Selig and his company of assistants who have kept the business end of the paper on the highest possible plane.

Public recognition and appreciation of the work these men and women have done to make the DTH a top-notch publication is the sole reward they will receive. Thanks, fellows, from the editor, and from the students, who appreciate the honor you have earned for the Daily Tar Heel, the University, and yourselves.

Letters To The Editor

Viennese Coffee Sugared

To the Editor:

The oracles have spoken. Pseudo-humorist "Tookie" Hodgson has been exposed in a blaze of professional jealousy as the snivelling, spineless creature he is, and his humor mag has been aforedoomed to the wastebaskets of discriminating critics.

Is there room for the timid voice of a plebian who has no reason to fear either Mr. Hodgson or his assailants and hence may proceed with a little less prejudice than has prevailed?

Before me are the words of Mr. John S. O'Neall, president of Phi Beta Kappa (I made a B plus on Latin once but I don't go around gloating over it) and Mr. Dick Seaver (I report, with distress, that I have never won third place in a New Republic short story contest). Their combined efforts, in effect, produce something similar to the immortal words of one of Carolina's more outspoken professors: "He's a s. o. b. and has other bad qualities." Speaking, of course, of Mr. Hodgson.

The Messrs. O'Neall and Seaver are incensed over Hodgson's recent "unwarranted verbal onslaught" against journalist Kinberg, his dog, and the other participants in the DTH menagerie of philosophy. It is my sincere belief that Mr. Hodgson, in this, echoed the sentiments of more students than the president of Phi Beta Kappa and the winner of the third prize in the New Republic short story contest represent. Kinberg and his canine have too long been dirtying up an otherwise excellent editorial page.

O'Neall and Seaver then go on to the personalized insult (Hodgson shows "thinness of character") and speak reproachfully of "good sportsmanship to promote good-will and brotherly love." The conclusion is obvious.

Seriously, kiddies, do you think the columns of the DTH are the place to give vent to your personal peeves? Kinberg and Allen lost the election but they are taking it manfully, as you point out. I know neither of them personally; I know only that Kinberg is consistently weak in his frantic stabs at humor and that Allen has written some excellent columns in the past, with a mastery of words that his late running mate might well emulate. I know Mr. Hodgson, but since he has never displayed his "warped personality" in my presence and since that is the chief target of his opponents, I do not feel qualified to discuss him further.

You inquire, "Personally, people, if you had your choice of either sipping Viennese coffee in Danziger's with 'Poo-Foo' Jellyroll or quaffing a brew in Jeff's with the amiable Dan, which one would you take?"

The latest word from the polls is that the Viennese coffee has received an overwhelming vote of confidence.

But, as I said, I'm not Phi Bete and I've never won third place in a New Republic short story contest.

Sincerely,
SIGSBEE MILLER.

Glee Club Shows Finesse

By R. Haskell Hamilton

Just a couple of hundred people attended the University Women's Glee club concert in Hill hall on Monday night. All of them were convinced, as I was, that the club under the direction of Paul Young, is perhaps the outstanding women's glee group in the South. Not only did the group handle conventional glee club songs with finesse, smoothness and outstanding ability, but by experimenting with modern and unusual selections they displayed a rare versatility. Everyone concerned was more than satisfied.

Kindling a warm mood after the opening "Hey to the Greenwood," by Byrd, the club presented a trio of religious songs sung without interruption, "Jesu! Rex Admiradbilis," Palestrina; Handl's "Pueri Concinite" and the "Alleluia" from "For Us a Child Is Born" by Bach. After this initial portion of the program, Augusta Harper, pianist, played three Shostakovich Preludes which were well-received by the audience. Under the leadership of Paul Young, the glee club next presented a quartet of songs, three of which were in the modern vein. Fast-tempoed "To Agni" by Holst, a song in 5/4 time with alternating 2/4 and 3/4 time was pure melodic delight and thoroughly enjoyed. My musical taste did not appreciate Harris' stark, angular, never-ending melodic lines in his "Whitman Triptych." A disonant Holst number "Tears, Idle Tears," was the other modern piece in the group. "Nightingale" by Castelnuovo-Tedesco completed the first part of the program.

Guest-Conductor Arthur Sheperd joined the club and accompanist Carolyn Bowman in conducting two of his own compositions, "He Came All So Still," and "Song of the Sea Wind." The listeners were indeed fortunate in hearing Dr. Sheperd's work, which was enhanced by the excellence of the glee club. A delightful English folk song, "The Cuckoo" by A. T. D. was next, followed by Schuman's "Carnations Grew in My Garden," and Sullivan's "List and Learn," from "The Gondoliers."

A trio of Naginski's "The Pasture," Griffes' "In a Myrtle Shade," and Beach's "Ah, Love but a Day," preceded what for many was the musical highlight of the evening. I refer to the three songs of Nina Thomas, soprano, accompanied by William Waters on the piano. Miss Thomas' voice was thrilling to hear.

For the final portion of the program, a threesome of modern popular numbers was sung. "When Day Is Done" by Katchez, preceded Noel Coward's haunting love song "Zigeuner." Cole Porter's "Begin the Beguine" concluded the program.

As an encore, the glee club sang "Summertime," from the Gershwin opera "Porgy and Bess."

Strictly Detrimental....

'Dog's Best Friend' Goes Gastronomic in Big Town

By Jud Kinberg

This is the kiss-off for Strictly Detrimental this year, so draw your [illegible] closer, chillen, and listen to the last clacks of the typewriter. Early [illegible] month) summer hibernation of SD is caused by the plethora of details which must go into preparation for an overseas assignment I managed to [illegible] while in New York this past weekend.

The locals in the City of Subways were still shaking in their one-button roll topcoats when we arrived with a train load of sunshine—bottled, that is—Friday last. I am glad to report that it is now safe for any Tar Heel to venture north, the weather is up to need-a-drink warmth.

With the heating problem taken care of, there was little else that wasn't perfect about New York. After weeks of semi-starvation at Chapel Hill, I rousted about to epicurian Elysian fields. sharing an artichoke here and there.

The first place we stopped for non-liquid nourishment was Christo's. This little place on Third Avenue is the bistro where restaurant-owners gather to satisfy the inner man, or so the legend goes. In any event, friend Christo puts forth the most delicious beef steak in the city. For perfect enjoyment, share it with some friend onions and the steak sauce a la Christo. Your saliva back if you're not perfectly satisfied.

If you have a secret Freudian "id" for unusual in French cuisine. Divan Parisienne is the next port of gastronomic call. The management has concocted a fabled dish they call Chicken Divan. The only advice I can think of is to take a friend to help you eat it—the portion is generous to the point of suicide. (What a marvelous way to die.)

And just to complete the pleasant process at the Divan, order their gimmicked spun-candy dessert with brandy, cherries and ice cream in the center. The half hour it takes to eat it should be the best spent of your stay in New York. (No, I don't really think it will ever replace sex, but the automobile better watch out.)

Another place where they can dessert you to death is the Simplon, on Central Park South. Run by the same people that make the steaks go round at Ronnie's, the Simplon meals are big and beautiful. The tab at lunchtime doesn't look like the war debt, either.

So don't say we didn't tell you where to grab a quick meal if you get parlayed into the many inferior restaurants that clutter up the side-streets in New York City. A late starter which we just managed to touch was Mama Leone's, where the pizzeria is said to be the very one that inspired the song "Angelina."

I'm hoping to take Dan the Dog north before I sail for England and show him just how stupid he is to settle for a piece of a Marathon hamburger. I'll learn that dog.

For those who hope to cram a year's theater into a short post-spring quarter trip to the City, saddest news is that Battlin' Bergman has closed up "Joan of Lorraine." According to friends, that lady could do no wrong whatsoever while in New York and even the usually snide drama critics could find nothing but praise for her as she left for Hollywood. But there is still a fair number of worthwhile productions hawking their tickets. The leaders are in the musical field, with "Brigadoon" and "Finian's Rainbow" not only laying them in [illegible] aisles, but standing them there [illegible] performance.

Most of the nightclubs are putting along in low gear, and I understand that headwaiters are starting to pay the patrons to take tables. In all events, the dance floors no longer look like the Independent subway during rush hour.

Perenially prettiest sight is the cotton-dressed lovlies parading Fifth Avenue. The women still throng the chi-chi stores that line Checkbook Gulch and they've even taken over the usually-masculine English Grill at Radio City.

Most beautiful hours of the trip were during the plane trip south Monday as we flew into the oncoming night. Lights were just starting to break on as we landed in Washington and even boisterous propellors were hushed and still in that deepening blue that is so inadequately called twilight.

So take your gold out of that social and take yourself a quickie to the City where nobody knows you, but they don't have to to show you a right fine time.

* * *

To Dick Seaver and John O'Neal A simple thank you.

To Tookie, if he's disappointed that I didn't waste a column rebutting I believe in letting lying dogs sleep young Matt.

DiLorenzo Hurls 5-0 Shutout Against Deacons

Racquetmen, Golfers See Action In Raleigh Today

Sport--Spins

—with—

Irwin Smallwood

YOU CAN BE on the lookout for three Southern conference records to fall by the wayside when the annual loop track meet gets underway. This annual outdoor cinder spectacle will begin Friday and be concluded Saturday afternoon, and unless our speculation is far wrong, there will be new records in the two-mile run, high jump and discus throw.

Jack Milne, the distance star, turned in the best two-mile time ever recorded by a Southern runner in the Penn Relays in Philadelphia a few weeks ago, and with Jimmy Miller recovered from a leg injury and running with him, it looks like a cinch to see a new mark. Big Bob Seligman has broken the University discus record twice this season, and Jack Moody, the frosh high jump sensation, is likewise in line to establish a record leap.

Carolina is in the favored position in the conference event, that is if their ailing contestants are able to participate, and some of the Tar Heels who have good possibilities of turning in "firsts" for Carolina are Don Nelson, Miller and Milne, Chunk Simmons, Seligman, Norm McLeod, Len Briley, Laddie Terrell, Moody and Bob Kirk . . . While mentioning track, it might be well to note a pair of high jumpers who showed outstanding improvement against Duke last weekend. These lads are Bill Joyner and Joe Corpening, both of whom cleared the bar above six feet.

A caravan of Carolina cars carrying dozens of students and officials left from Chapel Hill yesterday for Laurinburg, where last rites were held for Bill "Cotton" Sutherland, Tar Heel blocking back who was killed Sunday night in an automobile wreck. Something between 50 and 100 represented Carolina, the group including the football coaching staff, Chancellor R. B. House, Monogram club members, football squadmen and other friends.

We could not help seeing some glaring statements in this week's sports column of H. E. Beaudouin, Jr., in the Duke Chronicle. Mr. Beaudouin, while making some comments on Duke policy at present on athletic "play for pay," made one statement in particular which we believe he could not very easily prove: "Carolina . . . hired . . . a famous tailback."

Just where do you get the license to make such assertions, Mr. Beaudouin. Looks to me as though you're treading on slanderous grounds!

The Daily Tar Heel sports broadcast has been changed to 4:25 in the afternoon.

Champion Linksmen Meet Wake Forest

Two Carolina teams swing into post-tournament action in Raleigh this afternoon when Coach John Kenfield's racquetmen, runners-up in the Southern conference, oppose N. C. State while Coach Chuck Erickson's golfers, the circuit champions, engage Wake Forest over the Raleigh country club links.

Although neither match will have any bearing on the standings in the two sports, both having been determined over the last weekend in the renewals of the annual loop tournaments, the Tar Heel units will be heavy favorites to add to their respective victory totals for the season. The netters have a 19-1 record while the linksmen sport a 6-1 slate. The lone losses in both sports were inflicted last week.

On the Wolfpack courts, the feature match of the afternoon will pit Carolina's Clark Taylor against State's Bill Weathers. Taylor will be holding the number one berth in the absence of Vic Seixas, who will be resting up after his grueling singles battle with Gardner Larned in the tournament finals last Saturday.

The rest of the Carolina lineup is expected to have, in order, Ray Morris, Charlie Rice, Stan Gruner, Don Skakle and Heath Alexander. In the doubles, Morris and Rice will form one duo, Skakle and Alexander another, and Taylor and Gruner will combine for the third combination.

Southern conference Co-Champion Dick Doeschler will lead the local golfers in their tour of the Raleigh fairways. In back of him will be Junie Bailey, Harvie Ward, Ray Taylor, Mike Nolan and Ed Ashby.

Both Carolina teams will be seeking repeat wins over their opponents. The racquet crew blanked State, 9-0, in the first outing, while the golfers almost did likewise, scoring a 26-1 triumph.

Mural Softball Tournament Gets Underway Today at 4

The annual intramural softball round-robin tournament will get underway this afternoon at 4 when DKE No. 1 faces Delta Sigma Pi, and Sigma Nu No. 1 battles Phi Kappa Sig No. 2.

The playoffs for the three winners in the dormitory division will be delayed because of the postponing of yesterday's BVP-Steele contest, which is now scheduled for this afternoon at 4 on diamond No. 1. A victory for BVP in this afternoon's game would give the championship of league No. 1 to the Grads and if the boys from Steele win, they will face the Grads tomorrow to decide which team will play in the tourney.

A strong Pi Kappa Alpha nine ended up on top in league three of the fraternity division when it downed the Phi Delt No. 1 outfit, 7-3.

The finals, in which the champs of the fraternity and dormitory divisions will face each other for the campus softball crown, are scheduled for next Wednesday.

Assistant Mural Director P. A. Lee announced yesterday that medals are now available for those who won first places in the mural track and swimming meets.

Robinson Set To Hurl As Carolina Nine Plays State At Raleigh This Afternoon

By Morty Schaap

Wake Forest, May 13.—With Vinnie DiLorenzo chunking two-hit ball and his teammates giving him brilliant support, the Tar Heels shutout the Wake Forest nine, 5-0, in a Big Four-Southern conference game played here today.

The Tar Heels started offensive operations in the first inning when Kenny Black laced out a single to left and went to second when the left fielder let the ball get away. After two infield outs, Jack Hussey drew a base on balls and then Frank Jones brought both runners home with a rousing double to left-center field.

Big Four Standings:

	W	L	Pct.
State	5	3	.625
Carolina	3	2	.600
Duke	5	4	.556
Wake Forest	3	7	.300

Games Today:
Carolina at State.
Duke at Wake Forest.

After this scoring both pitchers hooked up in a tight pitchers' duel. Charlie Teague touched DiLorenzo for a single in the fourth and Art Hoch garnered a one base hit in the sixth. These were the only blows that the little left gave to the Deacons during the course of the afternoon.

The men of Walter Rabb picked up an insurance run in the eighth on Rip Ryan's single and a triple by John Gregory. Carolina iced the game in the ninth when three bases on balls plus four errors and a stolen base yielded two markers.

The last of the ninth saw DiLorenzo whiff Livick, walk Cochran and get the last two out on easy infield rollers.

It was in the last of the ninth that Carolina committed its only miscue afield for the afternoon. Ryan took Jones' relay to get Cochran at second, but when the Deacon red-head slid wide of the bag he knocked the Ripper off balance and the throw went past first baseman Gregory for an error.

Coach Rabb was well pleased with the spirit, hustle and play of the team and remarked that it was the best played game in the Big Four for the Tar Heels. He added that the Richmond encounter last Saturday was their best defensive game of the season.

Doeschler Proves That Swing Is the Thing

By Billy Carmichael

There is an age-old adage in golf that the secret to the game is in one's swing. And that is exactly the thoughts of Mr. Dick Doeschler, currently of Carolina's 1947 Southern Conference champions who six or seven times a week sets out to prove that "the swing is the thing."

For dependable Dick has that swing that every duffer and dubber dreams about. Just watch him hit from the practice tee of Hope Valley country club some afternoon—gaze with awe and envy as this senior from Jacksonville, Fla., sends shot after shot sizzling straight and true down the grassy green fairway.

The Machine

It's this systematic ability to connect with the ball that has gained Dick the adequate of "The Machine." This doesn't exactly please him as Mr. Doeschler has found it hard to accustom himself to the publicity that goes with his position as the leading star of the Tar Heel golf sextet.

He seems to find it hard enough to cope with sand traps, ditches, and other course hazards, let alone carry the burden of "rides" from his friends regarding his new publicity popularity.

Otherwise, he is unaffected by it all. He exercises a temperment of the links that the average golfer would be proud to exhibit. Never does he heave the club after a bad shot—a rare occurrence anyhow—nor does he deliver an outburst of profanity after a heart-breaking putt. He just steps to the next tee and sends the ball soaring far down the middle of the fairway to the delight of Coach Chuck Erickson and the disappoint of his already disheartened opponent.

Off the Course

Off the golf course, Dick lives, sleeps, and eats golf. Of course, he finds time for other interests—a few beers, a certain coed, enough study time to accumulate a smart "B" average, and all the other things that go to make up a balanced college life.

Dick hasn't thought too much of continuing his golf seriously after college days are over, this spring. Modestly he will tell you that he doesn't think that he could make the grade in the pro circuit anyhow, and will probably give the advertising business a try instead.

Yet the people who saw Doeschler play in the Southern conference tourney last week-end seem to think differently and they were quick to compare the Tar Heel ace with Bobby Locke, the South African sensation who had played the course several days before. "He can hold his own with the best of them," was the consensus of opinion of those who have seen the best.

National Champion

Dick, who is currently conference individual co-champion with Jimmy McNair of Duke has one more college laurel he can add to his already packed trophy case—and that is the coveted National intercollegiate championship.

He'll be right in there with the nation's top college linksmen when that event gets underway in June at Ann Arbor, Mich. And you can bet every seat you win between now and then that when they come up to the 18th hole for the last time, durable Dick Doeschler will probably still be in there, "outmachining" the best of them.

Old Students Return....

Impressive Number of Events Scheduled for Commencement

Festivities taking place during commencement weekend will not be limited to feasting and toasting the members of the 1947 class, because, according to Alumni Secretary J. M. "Spike" Saunders, quite an impressive schedule has been planned for the numerous old grads returning to the campus.

Of paramount interest will be the annual appearance of the Old Students club, a group of alumni who have been out of school for 50 or more years. Each year, this organization gleefully initiates members of the incoming 50-year class into the club at a banquet.

This year's eligible class, '97, will be formally taken in Sunday, June 8, at a 7 o'clock dinner at the Carolina inn.

Included in this group are such luminaries as William R. Kenan, '94, New York City, donor of Kenan stadium, and John W. Morehead, '91, who is giving the new planetarium soon to go under construction.

The class of '97 will receive gold certificates recognizing their 50-year exodus from the University at an alumni luncheon slated for 1 p. m., June 9, at Lenoir hall.

George McCarkle, class of '78, who holds the distinction of being the oldest University grad, wrote from his Tuscaloosa, Ala., home that he hopes to attend the alumni banquets.

Three other alumni groups will be here for their share of commencement exercises. Each group represents a student generation. Present will be the classes of '03, '04, '05, '06, in one generation; '22, '23, '24, '25, in the second; and '41, '42, 43, '44, in the third generation aggregation. The baby class of 1946 will also be at the alumni supper.

crocodile, the mouth and teeth of a lion, and the tongue of a serpent."

The most popular of many legends surrounding Gimghoul concerns a rounded stone, believed to be connected with the society's rites, which is known as Dromgoole's tomb.

Vanishing Race

Around the turn of the century Peter Dromgoole, a young student who found wild company and poker more compatible than professors and textbooks, disappeared and was never heard from again following a tiff with a Carolina professor. This much is fact.

According to legend, Dromgoole was killed on Piney Prospect in a duel with a companion who had challenged his right to the affections of a certain Miss Fanny. Dromgoole, the story goes, was buried under the rock. Miss Fanny, after banishing the victorious gallant, died of a broken heart and was buried with her lost lover. The story was investigated but has never been confirmed. Neither has it been disproved.

Equally well known is the semi-circular rock seat near Gimghoul erected by the Order in memory of Dr. Kemp P. Battle, a former president of the University. Dr. Battle, who was fond of taking walks on Piney Prospect, started the rock pile and was joined by others at his request.

Foreign Relief Bill Is Passed By Senators

Action Is Delayed On Greek-Turk Aid

Washington, May 14. — (UP) — The administration's legislative program today received a mixture of victories and set-backs at the hands of congress.

The senate handed the administration a thumping victory by passing the $350,000,000 general foreign relief bill. The vote was 79 to four.

The upper chamber defeated, by a vote of 64 to 19, a proposal to trim the amount by $150,000,000, as the house had done earlier. The action indicates a hot fight between senate and house conferees when they meet tomorrow to work out the wide differences between the two versions.

To Replace UNRRA

The money is to allow us to take up where UNRRA left off in helping war-devastated European countries and China avert starvation.

Final action on the Greek-Turkish aid bill was delayed today. However, it is expected that both the house and senate will complete action tomorrow on the bill worked out by a joint conference, and send it to the White House for signature.

Patterson Says Relief Is Headed for Germany

Washington, May 14. — (UP) — Secretary of War Robert Patterson reveals that the American government is taking emergency action to relieve the food crisis in western Germany. He reveals that 400,000 tons of food will be delivered to Germany during May, including 72,000 tons from countries other than the United States.

Patterson said, "Such shipments, we believe, should be sufficient to maintain the ration from now on."

Twenty-Five Persons Killed in Rome Blast

Rome, May 14—(UP)—Police have recovered 25 bodies from the charred remains of a blasted building in downtown Rome, Italy. The building was partially destroyed after fire broke out in a room where motion pictures were stored, and set off two violent explosions. At least 20 persons, burnt or otherwise injured, are being treated in hospitals.

One Defendant Freed In Garsson-May Case

Washington, May 14. — (UP) — Judge Henry Schweinhaut ruled today that the government had failed to prove its charges against Joseph Freeman, one of four defendants in the May-Garsson war fraud trial.

But the court denied similar pleas for dismissal of charges against the other defendants, former Congressman Andrew May and Henry and Murray Garsson, who headed the $78,000,000 wartime munitions combine.

Schweinhaut made the ruling after the government rested its case. He dismissed the jury of seven men and five women until 9:30 am .m. (EST) Friday. At that time, the defense is expected to open its case.

Avery Students Strike To Retain Principal

Legislators Plan Debates Tonight On Record Agency

By Bookie Jabine

The Student legislature will meet at 7:30 this evening in Gerrard hall to discuss the Student Government Record Agency bill which was tabled last week.

Bill Mackie's Finance committee has been holding hearings on the proposal during the week, and will report it out tonight.

In addition to the record measure, the assembly will hear the report of the committee appointed last Thursday to look into the methods of improving student seating arrangements in Kenan stadium next fall.

The group is headed by Charlie Long who has been in consultation with athletic officials. Long said, however that he doesn't expect "the report will be too satisfactory."

Lawmakers also expressed the opinion that two constitutional amendments dealing with the Student Audit board, and the Interdormitory council may come to a vote.

Speaker Charlie Warren stated that the legislature will hear a report of the fact-finding committee tonight. This group has been at work checking on merchandising practices in Chapel Hill and vicinity.

Platform of S P to Be Subject of Meet Today

The entire membership of the Student Party will meet this afternoon at 4:00 in Roland Parker lounge to plan specific steps in carrying out the party's platform, Chairman Herman Baker announced yesterday.

Inviting any interested students to attend the open meeting, Baker urged that all SP officeholders-elect be present.

"The decisive vote in favor of SP candidates in both elections," declared Baker, "indicates popular support of the platform we are pledged to carry out. Tomorrow's meeting is a necessary step toward fulfilling our pledge."

Yesterday it was incorrectly stated that the YWCA was sponsoring this address.

Bramble and Bucknell Star In World Premiere Tonight

The world premiere of "Innocence" a full length play written and directed by Hans Rothe, opens tonight in the Playmakers theatre at 8:30 and will play tomorrow night at the same time. There is no admission charge.

Barbara Bramble and Peter Bucknell are cast in the leading roles in this Carolina Playmakers production. Miss Bramble, a graduate student in dramatic art, appeared in "State of the Union" and several experimental plays this year. Mr. Bucknell, holder of the Kay Kyser fellowship in dramatic art, appeared in the Laboratory theatre's production of "Pierre Pathelin" in the title role.

Eleanor Ringer, also cast in a leading role, recently played Mrs. Malaprop in the Laboratory theatre's production of "The Rivals." David Hooks who plays a dentist, was cast in the Forest theatre production last year and has appeared in experimental plays this year.

"Innocence" tells the revenge story of a mother for her teen-age daughter. The play is staged simply, using no scenery, but employing light to show a change in the set.

Student Party Dominates Runoff Voting In Winning Majority of Major Offices

By Chuck Hauser

A repeat performance of SP predominance in the major offices and Tom Eller's sweeping election returns was revealed in the wee hours of yesterday morning as Elections Board Chairman Jabie Heyward and numerous other hard-working ballot-counters completed tabulations of the general ballot in the runoff elections.

First returns, coming from Lenoir-Aycock polls, were predominately Eller, but reports of a strong UP vote for Bill Miller coming from Gerrard balloting seemed to indicate that the presidential race was to be a close one. Gerrard pulled a reversal, however, and Eller picked up, taking leads in some of the ballot divisions, but without capturing a majority in Gerrard.

The final vote was Eller—1700, Miller—1226, a total vote of over 2900 being cast, with 1600 from Gerrard, 1100 from Lenoir-Aycock, and 250 from Alderman.

Mills Wins

Barron Mills, SP candidate for editor of the Daily Tar Heel, pulled first place in the final tabulations, topping UP man Bookie Jabine by 1644 to 1229. Mills also received a great deal of support from Gerrard polls, after taking Lenoir-Aycock easily.

A UP victory was scored in the vice-presidential race as Jack Folger edged out SP Candidate Charlie Long for the post with a 1590-1239 vote.

Another SP triumph was Sam Daniel's victory over John Surratt (UP) who lost with a vote of 1341 to Daniels' 1448 in a very close, fluctuating race.

Moffatt "Myrt" Sherard, doubly-endorsed UP-SP nominee for head cheerleader scored a smashing victory over Charlie Stancell (CP). The vote was 1733 to 1080.

Publications Board

In the Publications board running, Ed Joyner (UP) walked over Roy Moose (CP) in the final count, after the two had run a neck-and-neck race throughout the counting, first one being ahead, and then the other taking the lead. The final tabulations revealed the vote to be 1401 to 1296.

Other Publications board members elected to senior seats on the board were Gene Johnstone (UP)—1811, and Julia Ross (UP)—1591. Roland Giduz (SP) came in a close third with 1496.

Elections board head Jabie Heyward announced last night that recounts would be made at 2 p.m. this afternoon on senior and sophomore members of the Men's council, where final standing was particularly close. Heyward asked for volunteers to aid in the work, which is to be carried out in the GM Candlelight room.

For vice-president of the Carolina Athletic association, Bob Cox (UP) ran away with the position and 1844 votes as compared to opponent Dan Logue's 918 gained on the CP ticket.

Seats on the Student council, at-large positions, were taken by three UP candidates, Bob Kirby—2032, Jim Paschal—1877, and Betsy Anne Barbee—1669. Margaret Jean Taylor (CP) lost out with 1475 votes.

Final Returns

A set of official returns issued late yesterday evening by Heyward completed the count on all offices.

Men's representatives to the Student council will be Castleberry (CP), Robinson (SP), and Broughton (UP). Hogan (SP) and Forehan (UP) were defeated in the run-off.

Lambeth (SP) and Trimble (CP) qualified as senior members of the Men's council, defeating Wilder (UP) and Thompson (UP). However, a recount has been ordered, between

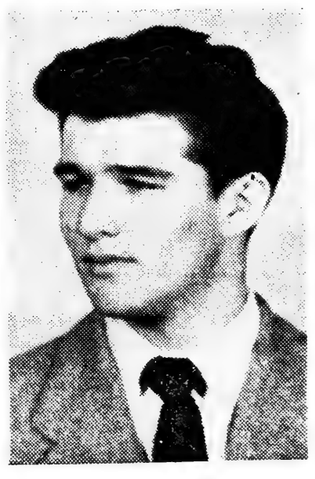
Local Red Club's Forming Denied by Communist Head

By Larry Kent

Talk of a Communist Party club being organized locally in the immediate future was thoroughly spiked here Thursday evening by Sam Hall, State chairman for the group. Hall, who maintains state headquarters for the Reds in Winston-Salem, formally asserted, "I didn't say any of this," when shown an article from the Durham Morning Herald of Saturday morning, May 10, which stated that he planned to organize a Communist Party club in Chapel Hill "in the near future."

The article was released from the Durham Morning Herald Washington bureau, when a Herald Washington reporter secured a hurried interview with him at the end of the first annual encampment of Communist Veterans of World War II in the capital city last weekend. Hall coincidentally was in charge of press relations for the meeting of the several hundred Communist veterans.

Releasing a statement after the speech of Miss Elizabeth Flynn, national women's chairman for the Communists in Memorial hall Thursday evening, Hall further stated: "I am confident of the party's future in the state and I say this with emphasis. But the 'blueprint' for a Chapel Hill Communist club came out of his (the Washington reporter's) imagination. I have, however, no objection to organizing the Communist party anywhere in the Carolinas. That's my business."



Tom Eller (above) is the new president of the student body. Doubly-endorsed by the Student and Campus parties, Eller won by more than 400 votes over Bill Miller (UP).

Jack Folger (above) scored the University party's major victory in the elections by edging out Charlie Long of the Student party in the vice-presidential balloting.

In the closest race of the day, Student Party Candidate Sam Daniels (above) scored a triumph over University Party Candidate John Surratt by slightly over 100 votes.

Barron Mills (above) is the new editor of the Daily Tar Heel as a result of his election win over Bookie Jabine, UP candidate. Mills was endorsed by the DTH and the SP.

Rewarded by Dismissal

Too often in the past we have been prone to flaunt the University of North Carolina's famed liberalism before the state and nation as indicative of its progressiveness. Lest some of this institution's ardent supporters be misled into believing that these two characteristics are synonymous, or that they are existing simultaneously on the campus, we think it desrable to present the most recent example of regression, enacted by a governing board jointly composed, ex officio, of administration and student representatives.

Two years ago the first woman director of the Graham Memorial student union, was appointed. From the beginning the only concern of Martha Rice has been to build up the center of student activities—to build a better union; to employ its facilities to the utmost; to make it a social and institutional home for those individuals and organizations who would otherwise be forced to seek elsewhere for such; to make Graham Memorial fulfill its obligations to the student body every day and every night in the week, rather than once or twice a week as was the case during several past student union administrations; to have Graham Memorial serve the campus impartially and to the full extent of its capabilities.

Space does not permit even a partial enumeration of the specific changes introduced by Miss Rice which have enabled this building to regain its reputation of servce. Those who have worked wth her or who have witnessed her endeavors or who have, at one time or another, participated pleasurably in the fruits of her labors need no such list. It suffices to mention that Graham Memorial has never been as popular in its history as it is today.

That is one side of the picture. Now for the other.

What should be the reward for a capable, conscientious director who in such a short period of time has proved her exemplary qualifications for such a position, who has rendered more than satisfactory service to the University and to the students, who has given more of her time and services than was expected, who, in short, has served "above and beyond the call of duty?"

Yes, what should be the reward for the perseverance of this one out of but twelve directors of student unions in the nation with qualified experience?

Three Western universities with newly-opened student union buildings have offered her positions in which she can more or less name her own salary.

Three other universities have offered to reward her with salaries far above her present one which pays less than the average North Carolina school teacher.

Ignoring a many-signatured petition to retain Martha Rice in her present capacity, the omnipotent Graham Memorial Board of Directors has wrongly, we believe, decided to abide by an archaic and unqualified rule stating that the director of the student union should serve for only two years.

Apparently it matters not to this body that a lack of incentive arises from such a limitation of service.

Apparently it matters not that the demand for such officers is great and the supply correspondingly limited.

Apparently it matters not that a great body of students desire no change.

No. Precedence and tradition must be served at the possible cost of inflicting an ill upon the student body.

We wonder whether the matter of personal retaliation is involved in this unpopular action by the board.

An explanation is due an interested student body.

Post-Election Talk Centers On Student Party's Sweep

By Eddie Allen

That intriguing crew which spends its afternoons in various endeavors on Graham Memorial's second floor began its "lame duck" session yestedray, after reporting an election which saw—in parallel—Maine and Vermont rising up to kick hell out of the Solid South.

To sort out that hodgsonpodge of metaphor, the DTH was a quiet, if glassy-eyed, scene, and the boys who usually lounge out of sight of harassed desk men to discuss sex and other affairs of the day had a new topic.

Some of the boys, like Editor Woestendiek, were finishing out their jobs. Others, who will return, simply went on working as incumbents, while some, as usual, were just recumbent. Whether horizontal or otherwise, however, the talk centered on the amazing sweep which the Student Party had made through Tuesday's elections, and the equally-surprising wane from power of the once-omnipotent UP.

The general opinion was that the UP has committed political hara-kiri, and had died by its own hand with a knife meant for its rivals' backs. Although trailing in the first voting last week, the deposed ballot bosses of fraternity row probably still would have had a better than good chance had they not resorted to a childish mimeograph attempt to smear the SP out of the race. As frequently happens, the move had the opposite effect, and for all their predictions of victory, the University Party was whipped—and soundly.

For the first time since 1938 a Student Party president will sit in the executive chair. For the first time in memory a Student party editor will bow out to another Student party editor. All of which indicates that the UP's iron grip on the campus' major offices may be a thing of the past. For that there are three glaring reasons:

(1) As aforementioned, the ill-advised tactics of the UP, which may have worked on a campus of pre-war years but did not budge the present older, larger, cosmopolitan student body.

(2) The quiet, efficient work of the Student Party, which realigned its ranks after a dangerous party split and still came through, with 99% perspiration and 1% inspiration. Under-estimated by everyone, particularly the UP, the SP worked for what it got.

(3) The record-breaking vote, which served to minimize the former block strength of the fraternity group and to throw the enormous non-frat potential into effect.

That there will be repercussions to the late election is understood. It should be interesting to see how the "outs," now that they are "ins," handle student government and how closely they comply with their platform. It should also be interesting to see the UP's reaction to defeat. There were rumors yesterday of various fraternities either voluntarily, or upon party suggestion, leaving the UP fold. Time will tell.

The UP will have another chance next May, but unless they mend their own fences by then, we have an idea that a new and long trend has been established in Carolina politics.

'PROGRESSIVE WAR'

Prof. Glenn R. Negley of the Duke University Department of Philosophy will discuss "Progressive War" at a program today sponsored by the Philosophy department here. The meeting will be held in the Carolina inn faculty room at eight p.m.

LOOK RECORD REVIEW

TOPS IN WAX—Frankie Laine, whose current album of evergreens and pop side of Mam'selle (Mercury) is setting up a small storm, is in the vanguard of new names cropping up recently in popular music. Like Mel Tormé, he is a musician and able songwriter; but unlike Mel, his style is a mixture of the blues-shouting vibrato and present-day ideas of phrasing. This kid, now on MBS with his own radio show, is on his way to the top. Better listen.

VOCAL DEBUTS—A couple of new lassies are out in moldings for the first time. Ex-GIs will remember Beryl Davis as England's best singer. She shows up on her first Victor release as a young lady with good looks, a cool voice and restrained delivery. Her best: They Didn't Believe Me. Blonde Doris Day, once Les Brown's throatalist, is now on her own, singing Pete (Columbia). The side has some pleasant ideas, but the engineers let her throw in so many s-s-esses that it may grate.

DANCE—Here's something new under the sun—a great dance record combining sense of humor, cowboy commercialism and excellent music. Baton-waver for this paragon of dainty piffle is drummer Ray McKinley, and the tune is Red Silk Stockings and Green Perfume (Majestic). McKinley does his usual delightful job of selling a Texas accent, while arranger Eddie Sauter has scored the side with a light, fluffy bounce, plus some extraordinary wild reed phrases in the middle. The song, by the way, is snitched from Bury Me On the Lone Prairie . . . Sam Donahue, known primarily for a hard-swinging, rhythmful band has a new one on I Never Knew (Capitol) that will surprise you. Instead of playing the tune at its usual race-track tempo, Sam gives it slow, lush treatment with a vocal group backing that is not only good for toe-wagging, but is a revelation of what fresh treatment can do for a bedraggled tune.

♪

VOCAL STANDOUTS—At long last Jo Stafford is singing. Her current Sunday Kind of Love and her theme, SmokeDreams (Capitol), have an emotional quality and warmth she has never before shown on wax. She started out as a group singer with Tommy Dorsey, a clan noted for its vibrato-less and impeccably cold styles. Now she's developing something on her own. Even better is the Ella Fitzgerald waxing of Sunday (Decca). Strange thing: Ella seldom wins a poll any more, yet she is tops when it comes to all-around jazz singing of any type. From ballads like Sunday, she goes all the way to wild scat on Lady Be Good (out soon on Decca). A lesser vocal attraction is the second Jane Russell side with Kay Kyser, Bo-i-n-g (Columbia). Not bad, but Jane has some diction faults and a lot to learn about band singing in general.

They're a conclusive demonstration that, once styles in music change, trying to reproduce them may yield creditable results, but nothing with the flaming, driving spirit of the original.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

TRUMAN WILL ASK CONGRESS FOR LATIN AMERICAN ARMS PROGRAM; REPUBLICANS LEARNED HOW ARMS BREED WAR; ANOTHER MISSOURIAN WILL HEAD INTELLIGENCE UNIT.

Washington.—President Truman is sending a special message to Congress asking for authority to arm and train our good neighbors in Latin America including our not-so-good neighbor—Argentina.

This arms program has a lot of kinks that may not at first catch the eye of the average Congressman. It is a program which previous Republican administrations wrestled with, and it was hoped the Democrats had profited by their lessons.

Back in the 1920's, the present Secretary of the Navy, James Forrestal, then part of Dillon, Read, international bankers, helped loan $20,000,000 to Bolivia which went to arm the Bolivian Army. The Bolivian people and even part of the Bolivian Cabinet did not know too much about this, but through a bribe (the more polite word is "commission") to the Minister of Finance, the loan was put across. Incidentally, it has never been repaid.

Most of the money went to Vickers, Ltd., British munitions firm, though part went to pay German military instructors to train Bolivia to wage war on its neighbor, Paraguay.

That attack starte din 1928. Fortunately, Frank B. Kellogg, a Republican Secretary of State, and Charles Evans Hughes, a Republican ex-Secretary of State, happened to be engaged in a Pan American Conference at the time of the attack, and they succeeded in heading off war—temporarily. For some time thereafter, both Hughes and Kellogg did their best to undo the work of the Dillon-Read money which whetted the appetite of the Bolivian Army.

In the end, Kellogg and Hughes, though able men, were unsuccessful. Full-scale war broke and lasted so long that the Democrats inherited it.

HOW TO BREED WAR

As the war continued, President Roosevelt later appointed Spruille Braden to try to patch up peace between the two countries. Braden moved to South America and spent a hectic, thankless year of his life undoing the martial influence of the Dillon-Read loan.

Today, Spruille Braden, Assistant Secretary of State in charge of Latin American affairs, has been doing his best to dissuade President Truman and Secretary Marshall from repeating the mistakes of the 1920's when we poured money into Latin America to buy arms.

However, the U. S. Army is against him. It is determined to start an arms program in Latin America, and Secretary of State Marshall, quite naturally, is swayed by the Army. Moreover, sincere and honest though he is, his own experience in Latin America is limited.

Unfortunately, the State Department already has seen some of the effects of a U. S. arms program in Latin America. Two things happen:

1. Latin American neighbors, hitherto reasonably peaceful, see another nation getting arms and immediately want an army or navy bigger than the other fellow's. This leads to rivalry, bankruptcy, and war.

2. The Governments in power—many of them dependent on the army—become stronger than ever, and hold power more or less forever. Reinforced by U. S. arms, it is impossible for the opposition to vote them out. This makes for revolt and Communism—just what we want to avoid.

An illustration of point 1 occurred recently between Peru and Colombia. Colombia bought some transport planes from the United States. Then Peru came in and wanted to buy some fighters. Immediately, Colombia was back wanting to buy fighters too.

MUNITIONS BEFORE HEALTH

Another inside incident recently occurred indicating the cross-fire existing between the U. S. Army and the State Department. The latter was anxious to get a moderate loan for Ecuador to improve its sanitation and drinking water. Some Ecuadorian cities are cesspools of disease. But because of the economy drive, higher-ups in the State Department, especially Undersecretary Will Clayton, said no.

Shortly thereafter, the U. S. Army came in with a demand that Ecuador get $1,000,000 to buy arms. Though money couldn't be spared for Ecuadorian health, it was proposed to spare $1,000,000 to entrench the military clique that rules the country. The final disposition of this arms request remains to be seen.

ANOTHER MISSOURIAN

President Truman has now picked another Missourian, Admiral Roscoe Henry Hillenkoetter, to be Chief of Central Intelligence. This is the new super-duper so-called "spy" agency set up since the war to ferret out what's going on in other countries.

Admiral Hillenkoetter not only was born in St. Louis, but commanded the battleship Missouri, which makes him a super-duper Missourian. The man Truman first picked to head Central Intelligence was also a Missourian, Admiral Sidney Souers of St. Louis. He was succeeded by General Hoyt Vandenberg, nephew of the Michigan Senator, an A-1 flying officer but no whirlwind at super-spying.

Linksmen Defeat Deacs; Doeschler Shoots 69 Round

(Special to the Daily Tar Heel)

Raleigh, May 14—Carolina's Southern conference golf titlists put on a display of championship golf at the Raleigh County club this afternoon to hang up a 17½ to 9½ win over the Demon Deacons of Wake Forest. It was the locals' seventh win of the season.

Pacing the Tar Heels was their ever faithful Dick Doeschler, who turned in another outstanding round of 34-35—69 over the hilly par 72 layout. The Jacksonville senior had a total of seven birdies for the day, a remarkable performance considering the poor condition of the course.

Junie Bailey at the No. 2 slot shot a usually-winning 73, but fell before a sizzling 70 turned in by Deacon Bob Hyatt. In the second foursome, Holin' Harvey Ward came up with a 72 to swamp his opponent, while Ray Taylor slipped up to 78 to drop a 1-2 decision at the No. 4 position.

The Tar Heels split in the final quarter with Mike Nolan tallying a not-so-mighty 79 to lose 3-0, while Ed Ashby registered a 73 to win by the opposite score.

The Wake Forest boys, playing their home course, gave the locals a great battle and it was only in the best ball department that the Carolina boys gained the margin of victory.

The summaries:

Doeschler (NC) defeated Harris, 3-0; Hyatt (WF) defeated Bailey, 3-0. Best ball to NC, 3-0. Ward (NC) defeated McKaughn, 3-0; Anger (WF) defeated Taylor, 2-1. Best ball, 1-½-1½. Beam (WF) defeated Nolan, 3-0; Ashby (NC) defeated Gentry, 3-0. Best ball to NC, 3-0.

Phi Kaps, Dekes Gain Wins In Mural Softball Tourney

By Gil McLeod

The opening round of the mural softball playoffs was held yesterday afternoon when the Phi Kappa Sig and Delta Kappa Epsilon nines rang up easy victories over their opponents. Play is scheduled to continue today.

Phi Kappa Sig's hard-hitting combination was more than a match for the previously unbeaten Sigma Nu's as it banged out 15 hits to score a 10-2 victory. The leading sluggers for the Phi Kaps were Dick Atkinson with a perfect three for three, and James Austin with two for four.

The Dekes, with the four-hit pitching of Cam Rodman, shut out Delta Sig, 4-0. It was a pitchers' duel all the way as Bob Callahan of the Delta Sigs allowed only five hits even in losing.

In the Dormitory division things became even more complicated yesterday when it was found that three teams—Steele, Lewis No. 2, and the Grads—were tied for first place in league No. 1. The three teams will hold a tourney of their own this afternoon to decide which will be represented in the dorm playoffs, which are now scheduled to begin next Monday.

Moody Sets Sights On High Jump Mark

One record in the Southern conference outdoor track meet, to be held here tomorrow and Saturday, that may go by the wayside is the high jump mark.

Jack Moody, a freshman from Plainfield, N. J., may be just the lad to not only top the loop mark of 6 feet 2¾ inches, but add the University and field records to his collection. The field record was set by Bill Corpening after he had finished his collegiate participation, with a leap of 6 feet 4 inches. The University record which was tied by Moody this year is 6 feet 3 inches.

Ably aiding Moody in the jump will be Billy Joyner and Joe Corpening, both these boys having cleared 6 feet 1 inch or better.

Another record that may go is the pole vault mark of 13 feet 3 inches and if Norm McLeod can get off a good vault he will have closed out his collegiate career in a blaze of glory.

Carolina Blanks State, 9-0, Meets Virginia Saturday

(Special to Daily Tar Heel)

Raleigh, May 14.—The University of North Carolina completed its conquest of tennis in Tar Heelia this afternoon by soundly trouncing State 9-0 in matches played on the Wolfpack courts here.

The Tar Heels, who finished behind William and Mary in the Southern conference chase, played today without the services of their ace Vic Seixas, but the Carolina felt-pounders had little or no trouble in breezing past the State crew.

Carolina will officially conclude the season's operations Saturday when the Virginia law school travels to Chapel Hill for a dual meet. Harold Mass, former Tar Heel tennis captain, heads the law school squad.

Clark Taylor took over No. 1 position for Carolina and defeated Bill Weathers, a former UNC man, 6-0 and 6-3. The remaining Tar Heel participants won with the same comparative ease, not yielding a single set to the Wolfpack.

The results:

Singles—Taylor over Weathers, 6-0, 6-3; Morris over Fuerstman, 6-0, 6-1; Skakle over Boney, 6-2, 6-1; Gruner over Messick, 6-0, 6-3; Rice over Sherrill 6-0, 6-2; Alexander over Kahn, 6-4, 6-1. Doubles—Rice and Morris over Boney and Messick, 6-2, 6-1; Skakle and Alexander over Fuerstman and Sherrill, 6-0, 6-1; Gruner and Taylor over Pinner and Kahn, 6-1, 6-1.

VARSITY RESERVES DOWN CHERRY POINT BY 7-2

While the varsity was downing State yesterday afternoon, the Carolina varsity reserve tennis team downed the Cherry Point Marines 7-2 in matches played yesterday on the local courts here.

Bob Rose, a former Carolina basketball star, played for the Marines and won one of their only two triumphs.

The results:

Singles—Daniels over Bartlett, 6-2, 6-4; Swigart over Peterson, 6-2, 6-4; August over Denetro, 6-1, 6-1; Johnson over Ligman, 6-2, 6-2; Hufford (CP) over Gallion, 1-6, 6-2, 8-6; Rose (CP) over Kerr, 6-4, 7-5. Doubles—Kenfield and August over Bartlett, 6-3, 6-4; Swigart and Johnson over Demetro and Peterson, 6-0, 6-2; Gallion and Kerr over Rose and Ligman, 6-2, 1-6, 6-1.

Tar Heel Batsmen Get Only Four Hits in Big Four Tilt

Woflpack Hands Carolina Worst Beating Of Season; Duke Takes Over Second Rung

By Bob Goldwater

Devereux Meadow, Raleigh, May 14.—Carolina's Tar Heels suffered their most decisive setback of the season here this afternoon when State's Big Four leaders put together 16 assorted baseknocks and a four-hit pitching performance by Ernie Johnson to register a 12-2 triumph.

The loss was Carolina's third in loop play and dropped the team back into third place behind Duke. The Tar Heels meet the Blue Devils in a battle for second place on Emerson field in Chapel Hill tomorrow at 4 o'clock. Frank Robinson will be on the mound for the Tar Heels and will probably face Hal Stevenson.

GAMES TODAY

Duke at Carolina.

Carolina never had a chance in today's contest. The Techmen jumped off to a two-run lead in the first frame on Bill Fowler's clout over the left-field fence and they really moved into high gear in the third.

In that stanza, four solid blows, climaxed by Leo Katakaveck's base-clearing triple, resulted in three tallies and the exit of starter Tommy Andrew, who suffered his third defeat against two wins.

Ray Blair took the mound for the Tar Heels in the fourth but was unable to halt the State display of power. Two more triples and a trio of one-base blows produced five markers, with several stolen bases—including a theft of home—also figuring in the run production. The State attack leveled off to single tallies in the fifth and sixth innings for a grand total of 12.

In the meantime, the Carolina offensive was not faring too well. The Tar Heels collected their first safety on a clean single by Frank Jones in the fifth frame. In the sixth, two successive walks to Blair and Whitey Black and a single by Jim Hamilton paved the way to a pair of runs. That was all for the day, although Carolina did manage to pick up two singles in the ninth inning.

AVC Selects Giduz, Kirsh, Broadfoot for Convention

Roland "Foo" Giduz, Winston Broadfoot and Charlotte Kirsh were nominated by the Chapel Hill chapter of the American Veterans committee to attend the AVC national convention in Milwaukee next month when the veterans group met Tuesday evening.

Following a report by Martin Knowlton on matters of local importance the chapter voted to authorize a committee of members to investigate the possibilities of the local merchants association instituting the so-called "Newburyport" plan in this community. Knowlton reminded the veterans that Newbury, Mass., merchants had voluntarily reduced their prices 10 per cent in support of President Truman's anti-inflation program.

Dr. N. J. Demerath in reporting on the Taft-Wagner-Ellender bill remarked that it would be a good idea if local veterans wrote their congressional representatives to inquire about the exact status of the bill. He said the bill has not yet appeared on the senate floor despite the critical national housing shortage.

A report on the Chapel Hill school bond issue concluded the meeting.

Phi Vote Defeats Enrollment Move

A resolution pegging enrollment of students at the present level of 6800 was defeated last Tuesday by the members of the Phi assembly.

Among numerous arguments against the bill was a plea that the University must take care of all qualified students of this state, for they have no alternative to coming here.

It is expected that the University will be home to 10,000 students in 1950; in the meantime, 8,000 are expected to enroll here in January, 1948.

An amendment, introduced to lower enrollment level to 5000 was defeated.

House Banker Deemed Guilty

Federal Jury Decides 20-Year Old Fraud

Washington, May 15—(UP)— A Federal jury today found Kenneth Romney, former House of Representative sergeant at arms, guilty of concealing a shortage of 143,000 dollars in House funds. The Montana Democrat who ran the bank at the House for 32 years will be sentenced one week from tomorrow. The maximum penalty is 30 years in prison and a $30,000 fine.

Quick Verdict

It took a jury of seven men and five women only one hour and 50 minutes to reach the verdict. For three days they had listened to the government's story of the shortage in the House bank. Romney refused to call a single witness in his defense. Government witnesses testified that the shortage began back in 1925 when Romney went into a series of ill-fated Florida real-estate deals with former Representative John Smithwick of Florida.

UN Reaches Agreement On Palestine Grievance

Flushing, N. Y., May 15—(UP)—The UN has ended its special session on the Palestine problem. The 17 days of deliberation ended after the assembly named an 11-nation special committee to investigate the Holy Land situation. It also appealed to the people of Palestine to declare a truce during the inquiry.

Greek-Turkish Aid Bill Approved by Congress

Capitol Hill, May 15—(UP)—Both houses of Congress have approved and sent to the White House President Truman's $400,000,000 dollar Greek-Turkish aid bill. However, it is expected that it will cost at least five billion dollars a year for the next three or four years to carry out the Truman doctrine of putting other European and Asiatic countries back on their feet.

Adolph Menjou Blasts Hollywood Communists

Legislature Votes In Favor Of NSO Affiliation

Fourteen Colleges To Be Represented In Annual Running

By Morty Schaap

Carnival time hits the campus again this afternoon when the preliminaries get under way in the 23rd Annual Southern conference track and field championships.

The field this year is in all aspects the best since pre-war days, if not the best of all times. Over 280 athletes representing 14 of the 16 conference schools will vie for individual and team titles in 15 events.

Field trials are slated to get under way at 3:30 o'clock today and the running events will start a half hour later. The field finals are billed for 3 o'clock on Saturday and the track events at 3:30 o'clock.

Teams represented are Clemson, South Carolina, Furman, Davidson, Wake Forest, Duke, North Carolina State, Carolina, VPI, Richmond, Washington and Lee, VMI, William and Mary and Maryland.

Records to Go

Records are expected to go in many events and the most probable new marks come in the high jump, two-mile run and discus.

The team title is expected to be a duel between Duke, last year's winners, Carolina, State and Maryland.

Of all the teams, Carolina seems to be the most potent as a result of their undefeated dual record. The Tar Heels have taken victories over Georgia Tech, Navy and Duke. Both Duke and Maryland have dropped meets to the Middie team, while State

Jack Fitch Wins Grail Leadership

Jack Fitch, star Tar Heel back and member of the Golden Fleece, was elected delegata of the Grail at a special meeting Wednesday evening.

The leader of the campus service organization is a rising senior. His home is Etna, Pa.

The members of the Grail elected Gideon Gilliams exchequer of the organization. Scotty Venable was chosen scribe.

DTH Plans to Carry List of All Officers

The Daily Tar Heel will carry a complete slate of elected campus officers in Sunday's paper. Part of yesterday's elections story, under the sub-heading "Late Returns," did not give an accurate or complete summary of late results.

That section of the article was not written by staff newswriter Chuck Hauser, who was responsible for the rest of the story. The late bulletin created unfortunate embarrassment for some candidates and the UP.

Throng of Dancers Will Jam May Finals of German Club

With Charlie Spivak, his trumpet, and his orchestra on the bandstand, the German club May Finals will open this evening at nine o'clock in Woollen gymnasium.

Advance ticket sales to club members indicate that a throng of 2,600 dancers will jam the huge gym for the first of the weekend set.

Plans call for a concert tomorrow afternoon in Memorial hall at two o'clock and a dance beginning at eight that evening.

German club president Carroll Tomlinson stated that both dances will be formal.

No Stranger

Smooth-trumpeting Spivak is no stranger to the Carolina campus. The man with the "sweetest trumpet in the world" appeared here for Fall Germans in 1941, and returned for the Mid-Winter set in 1946.

In 1944, his band was voted the top sweet outfit of the year in the Downbeat poll, and it was that year that he first appeared in a full length motion picture for 20th Century-Fox.

No Swing

Spivak's music is strictly "no-swing". The trumpet, usually a "brassy" instrument, is given a bell-like quality by Spivak. The maestro is all the more amazing since he never uses a mute on the end of his horn.

A spokesman for the Dance committee warned students that the group would conduct an extensive checkup to keep intoxicated dancers from entering the gymnasium.

HILLEL FOUNDATION

Rabbi Strumph will conduct Sabbath services this evening at 7:30 o'clock in the Roland Parker lounge. Dr. Nathan Rosen, graduate professor of physics, will speak.

Student Who Names Humor Mag Will Get Five-Dollar Award

A five-dollar prize will be awarded to the student submitting the best suggestion for the name of the new humor magazine, according to an announcement released by Matthew "Tookie" Hodgson, editor-elect of the youngest publication on campus.

All entries should be deposited in a box to be located in the "Y" Monday. The two suggestions not to be considered are "Buccaneer" and "Tar and Feathers." Judges Hodgson, Barron Mills, and Gene Johnstone will make the five dollar award soon.

Hodgson has emphasized the fact that the judges desire a new name.

Churches to Push Relief Collection

The Chapel Hill Council of Churches will conduct a campus and city-wide collection drive for old clothes and bedding on May 18 and 22, as part of a national program of overseas relief.

Contributions from the city proper will be collected by truck on the afternoon of May 18, and students residing in Victory Village are asked to bundle up articles they wish to donate, and leave them on the doorsteps. Residents of Trailer Park are requested to assemble their bundles at the main wash house there.

Dormitory collections for needy foreign peoples will be made on May 22.

LAUNDRY DEADLINE

The University laundry has announced that all students living in dormitories, who expect to have any more laundry done this quarter, must send it out before May 21.

Town students must have their laundry in before May 26 and 27.

New Student Body Record Bill Agency Passes Unopposed

By Bookie Jabine

After passing a bill to establish a Student Government Record agency, the Student Legislature went on record last night as favoring that the University become affiliated with the National Students organization.

Before deciding just how many and what delegates should be sent, the assembly got off on a tangent as to how the delegates should be instructed.

The motion to join the organization which was born at a meeting held in Chicago during the fall quarter was passed by a vote of 13-10.

At press time the lawmakers were still undecided on the instruction issue, but it is believed that the UNC delegates will be charged to oppose the inclusion of any Communist front groups in the NSO. The next meeting of the group is scheduled for September at the University of Wisconsin.

Previous to the NSO debate the assembly unanimously approved of the Record Agency bill which provides for the printing of a student government Record. Bill Mackie's finance committee, however, had amended the bill to cut the number of issues of the publication from 20 to ten per school year.

The purpose of the Record, as outlined in a bill introduced by Tag Montague two weeks ago, is to inform students as to the progress and activities of their government. Distribution of the Record will include all dormitory rooms and fraternity houses.

Charlie Long, head of a committee to look into the football seating arrangements in Kenan stadium next year, rendered a report on the chances for improving the situation.

Said Long, "We have waited too late. No student will sit on the fifty yard line next year. The legislature's action comes after all the choice seats have already been reserved by the Educational foundation."

His comment was based on a series of consultations held with Athletic Director Bob Fetzer who handles all seating in the stadium.

PREREGISTRATION

Those students now enrolled in the University who plan to attend the summer school session but who have not yet preregistered this week are urged to drop by South building before noon tomorrow—the deadline for completion of all preregistration.

Dewey Dorsett To Hand Reins To New Regime

All New Officials Must Attend Meets

By Earl Heffner

Changing of governmental reins takes place officially Monday with the inauguration ceremony slated to highlight the leadership conference in Gerrard at 8 o'clock, Pat Kelly, chairman of the campus orientation committee revealed last night.

Kelly explained that Retiring President Dewey Dorsett will be in charge of all affairs, will install all of the newly-elected student government leaders.

Orientation

On Tuesday evening, the ceremonial affairs give way to business-like orientation when Dorsett will explain the campus constitution and correlated setup to the new student leaders. Following this, Sybil Goerch Powe will outline the fundamentals of parlimentary procedure.

"These two meetings are vital to all new officials," Kelly said. "Therefore, it will be necessary for all to attend in order to gain complete information and a clear perspective into the governmental picture."

Must Attend

Students required to attend both sessions include the president, vice-president, and secretary-treasurer of the Student body; editors of all publications, members of the Student legislature and Coed Senate; members of the Men's, Women's and Student council; officers of the WAA and CAA; officers of the Pan-Hellenic council; Interfraternity Council officers; Women's Interdormitory council leaders; officers of the sophomore and senior classes, chairmen of standing boards and committees, and the head cheerleader.

Both meetings have been planned by the Campus Orientation committee, headed by Chairman Kelly, and a special committee of the Coed Senate, headed by Ann Robinson.

YMCA MEETING

There will be a meeting of the YMCA Political Effectiveness committee today at 6:30 in the committee room in the Y building. Bob Perdue, acting chairman, urges all members to be present.

Nelson Benton, student of Professor Earl Slocum will be the featured soloist when the University band presents its traditional spring concert Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock on the lawn under the Davie Poplar.

In case of rain, the concert will be held in Hill hall.

Signing Off

This marks the final isue of the Daily Tar Heel under its present editorship. All of which gives the editor, according to time-worn campus tradition, a chance to let off all the excess steam he has been storing up all year.

But rather than do that, I would like to take this final opportunity to express my thanks and appreciation to everyone who has helped to make the past year a successful one for the The Daily Tar Heel. This group includes the hard-working DTH staff, the many students who have helped us in various ways, the administration officials who have usually been most cooperative, and everyone who has had any connection with the newspaper.

It has been a year filled with controversy, one that has found the DTH necessarily taking strong stands on many issues which split student body opinion. We may not have been right in all instances, but we have always tried to be and have done the best job we knew how in making your student newspaper worthy of its name.

We hope we have been successful. To Barron Mills, the capable, industrious journalist who becomes the new editor, I want to extend my public wishes for success next year. He should make many changes and improvements in the paper that inadequate funds and printing facilities have prevented this year. And we believe that the new editor will please at least fifty per cent of the students fifty per cent of the time. If he does, his tenure of office can be termed a success.

Looking Backward

Along about this time every year everyone begins to get the feeling that all is well with the world and tempers and personalities that have clashed throughout the school year usually cool off and subside in the midst of lazy days and spring parties.

But we would like to seriously look back over the past year in student government and hand out a bouquet to the outgoing leaders of student government who have done much work throughout an explosive year loaded with problems at every turn.

Although the Daily Tar Heel has not always been in agreement with every policy formulated by student body president Dewey Dorsett and vice-president Charlie Warren, we have been the first to realize that both men have worked hard and conscientiously at all times in an effort to better student government and life at Carolina. Even when we have disagreed with some of their actions, we know they were firmly convinced that they were doing the right thing.

And they were running student government during what could be termed its most difficult year—a year which saw the largest student body in Carolina's history overflowing on the campus and a year packed with constitutional problems. To be sure, there were differences of opinion, but on such is fostered the growth of any organization.

So, in this, our last issue of the DTH, we want to acknowledge the efforts of the outgoing student leaders and assure them that their efforts did not go unappreciated.

At this time, we want to wish their successors every bit of success next year. The new officers are taking over at a time when student government can rise to great heights or fall into oblivion. We feel sure that our new student government heads can rise to the occasion and make for a bigger, brighter future for students at Carolina.

Life is too short for a long face.

If we don't fight for the best, we can expect the worse.

Communist's Talk Proves To Be Thought-Provoking

By Manny Margolis

A large group of interested students came face to face with a real, live, honest-to-gosh Communist several nights ago. For most of us, it was a thought-provoking experience. For others, merely provoking.

Miss Flynn touched on perhaps the most difficult problem facing American liberals and progressives today when she stated:

"We have very little quarrel with any liberal person who is trying to make capitalism work, but we do not believe that it will work in the long run, and history seems to bear us out."

Is such a union possible? Is it desirable for such a united front to take form? Is this the answer to the "fascist" tendencies in our country to which Miss Flynn correctly alluded; Or is the present bipartisan unity on domestic and foreign affairs to be our reply to the exigencies of the moment?

These are questions which fighters for liberal democracy are being confronted with everywhere. In Europe, the answer has been inevitable. There, where communist and socialist parties are the strongest in almost every country, political democracy has forced the issue. The powerful parties of the left HAD to be represented. As the vanguard in the fight against Fascism, they emerged from World War II with tremendous power and prestige.

But in the United States, where the Communist Party is exceptionally weak, such a coalition of forces might not necessarily seem wise or necessary or practical. But what should be clear, and to this extent one couldn't help but agree with Miss Flynn, is that the red-baiting and divisive tactics among liberal organizations themselves on the issue of communists in the United States and the "intentions" of the Soviet Union has helped to reduce them into a state of political impotence.

Issues are being overlooked and forgotten. Instead, organizations are purging themselves clean—not of communists, sympathizers, "fellow-travelers," and what have you, but of IDEAS. The un-American Committee has 'em all checking up on the birth certificates of their membership, which doesn't leave them any time to check up on the death notices in the daily papers of the Norris-LaGuardia and Wagner Acts, the Taft-Ellender-Wagner Bill, and so on.

Miss Flynn claimed that she didn't konw what was going on in Moscow, but she appeared to be thoroughly acquainted with what was going on in Washington. We all might do well to give that some thought. Do we know as much about what our Congress is doing as we CLAIM to know about what the Politburo is perpetrating on the Russian people? If indeed there is an "iron curtain" over Eastern Europe, isn't it rather amazing how much "reliable" information we have as to what is going on behind it? If an iron curtain does exist, then how do we know so much about what is REALLY happening there, and if no "curtain" exists, then what's all the fuss about?

The charges that Miss Flynn skirted questions regarding the Soviet Union, are perfectly true. But she did not side-step any regarding the situation and conditions here in the United States. Other American citizens might do well to think in similar concrete terms.

World Peace Hopes Hinge On International Police

By Howard Turnage

"We the peoples of the United Nations determined to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war, which twice in our lifetime has brought untold sorrow to mankind. . ." Thus begins the preamble of the Charter of the United Nations.

In May, 1947, however, the United Nations is a group of representatives of various nations, without a single dollar, without a single policeman, without a single gun. Indeed, these representatives have little to work with except their mouths.

At this moment, the United Nations would be about as capable of suppressing a war, if there were the threat of one, as the Carrboro police force.

"The rule of law must be substituted for the rule of force," stated Senator Carl Hatch in his May 8 address here. "First, a code of international law must be agreed upon by all nations. The world Court of Justice must have compulsory jurisdiction over all disputes. Secondly, the United Nations must have a strong international military force." Senator Hatch further recommended the complete delegation to international authority the right to declare and wage war.

Article 47, paragraph 1 of the United Nations Charter provides that, "There shall be established a Military Staff Committee to advise and assist the Security Council on all questions relating to the Security Council's military requirements for the maintenance of international peace and security, the employment and command of forces placed at its disposal, the regulation of armaments, and possible disarmament."

Articles 43 and 45 provide that contingents of military forces be placed at the disposal of the Security Council and the Military Staff Committee by the various nations.

If we are to have international peace, these provisions must be carried out. The United Nations must be provided with an effective military force. The Military Staff Committee must be the supreme military authority, subject only to the Security Council, over not only the armed forces of the United Nations, but over all the General Staffs of all the nations of the world.

The Military Staff Committee must have absolute rights to the use of all bases and military establishments now in existance and the authority to establish new ones where ever it feels the need for such. Neither the United States nor Russia, nor any nation of the world must be able to counter orders issued by the Military Staff Committee except through the democratic machinery of the United Nations.

These measures are drastic. But they are made under the assumption that war is more drastic. This is a recommendation for a military domination of the entire world. But this domination would presumably be maintained by a group representing the interests of all the world.

International peace can never be maintained as long as vast national armies remain under national control ready at any moment to challenge nations of contrary interests. Only through the establishment and recognition of complete international authority over all military matters can orders be given for national disarmament and those orders be strictly enforced. Only then can a nation disarm and feel secure. Only that way can nations ever be released from the immense burdens of arms.

The cost of maintaining an international "police force" can never be more than a fraction of the cost of World War III. Perhaps, in time through national disarmament, the international police force itself might be reduced to what we more commonly think of as a "police force."

Answering Flynn

To the Editor:

This letter is a response to the claim by Miss Elizabeth G. Flynn that the American Communists want socialism. As a Marxist I would like to call attention to the vast gap between the so-called socialism of the Communist Party and the scientific socialism of Karl Marx.

My first point deals with Miss Flynn's claim that the Soviet Union is a socialist country. According to the teaching of Karl Marx the Soviet Union is not a socialist country. When the 1917 revolution occurred in Russia the economic conditions necessary for the establishing of socialism were not present. As a result the workers did not gain control of the means of production and the political state did not wither away. Instead a new ruling class arose to replace the overthrown feudal lords and capitalists in exploiting the Russian people. This Stalinist bureaucracy has continually strengthened its control over the people of the Soviet Union and is using them to further its nationalistic and imperialistic ambitions which are cloaked by socialistic phrasology.

My second point concerns the domestic policies of the American Communists which they say will bring about socialism. Believing that the end will justify the means, they ignore the fact that the means used will determine what kind of end is obtained. The Communist Party is thoroughly opportunist and will use any means and advocate anything they think will aid them in gaining political power in the United States. Miss Flynn spoke of the "aims" of the Communists which include the retention of ceiling prices and free lunches for school children. The net result of such opportunism is to waste the energies of their gullible followers in seeking a multitude of reforms. Socialism will never be instituted by people who strive to obtain free lunches for school children but only by workers whose one political demand is not the reforming of capitalism but the socialist reconstruction of society.

Signing Off

This marks the final isue of the Daily Tar Heel under its present editorship. All of which gives the editor, according to time-worn campus tradition, a chance to let off all the excess steam he has been storing up all year.

But rather than do that, I would like to take this final opportunity to express my thanks and appreciation to everyone who has helped to make the past year a successful one for the The Daily Tar Heel. This group includes the hard-working DTH staff, the many students who have helped us in various ways, the administration officials who have usually been most cooperative, and everyone who has had any connection with the newspaper.

It has been a year filled with controversy, one that has found the DTH necessarily taking strong stands on many issues which split student body opinion. We may not have been right in all instances, but we have always tried to be and have done the best job we knew how in making your student newspaper worthy of its name.

We hope we have been successful. To Barron Mills, the capable, industrious journalist who becomes the new editor, I want to extend my public wishes for success next year. He should make many changes and improvements in the paper that inadequate funds and printing facilities have prevented this year. And we believe that the new editor will please at least fifty per cent of the students fifty per cent of the time. If he does, his tenure of office can be termed a success.

Looking Backward

Along about this time every year everyone begins to get the feeling that all is well with the world and tempers and personalities that have clashed throughout the school year usually cool off and subside in the midst of lazy days and spring parties.

But we would like to seriously look back over the past year in student government and hand out a bouquet to the outgoing leaders of student government who have done much work throughout an explosive year loaded with problems at every turn.

Although the Daily Tar Heel has not always been in agreement with every policy formulated by student body president Dewey Dorsett and vice-president Charlie Warren, we have been the first to realize that both men have worked hard and conscientiously at all times in an effort to better student government and life at Carolina. Even when we have disagreed with some of their actions, we know they were firmly convinced that they were doing the right thing.

And they were running student government during what could be termed its most difficult year—a year which saw the largest student body in Carolina's history overflowing on the campus and a year packed with constitutional problems. To be sure, there were differences of opinion, but on such is fostered the growth of any organization.

So, in this, our last issue of the DTH, we want to acknowledge the efforts of the outgoing student leaders and assure them that their efforts did not go unappreciated.

At this time, we want to wish their successors every bit of success next year. The new officers are taking over at a time when student government can rise to great heights or fall into oblivion. We feel sure that our new student government heads can rise to the occasion and make for a bigger, brighter future for students at Carolina.

Life is too short for a long face.

If we don't fight for the best, we can expect the worse.

Duke Pounds Out 15-7 Triumph Over Tar Heels

Carolina Held Slight Favorite To Win Battle For Team Title

Simmons, McLeod To Defend Crowns Won Last Season

has fallen before Duke, in a very close meet.

Ace of the Duke squad is Doug Ausbon, who last year won three individual titles. The Duke lad captured the 220-yard run, the high jump, the broad jump and was third in the 100-yard dash. Not very far behind him is teammate Roger Neighborgall who will defend his laurels in the 880-yard run. Roger also was runner up in the 440-yard event and will be out to beat Ed Mathews of Maryland who won that race last year.

Carolina's Norm McLeod will be out to repeat his pole vault win of last year and will have to fight off Duke's Lowell Jackson and John Colvin.

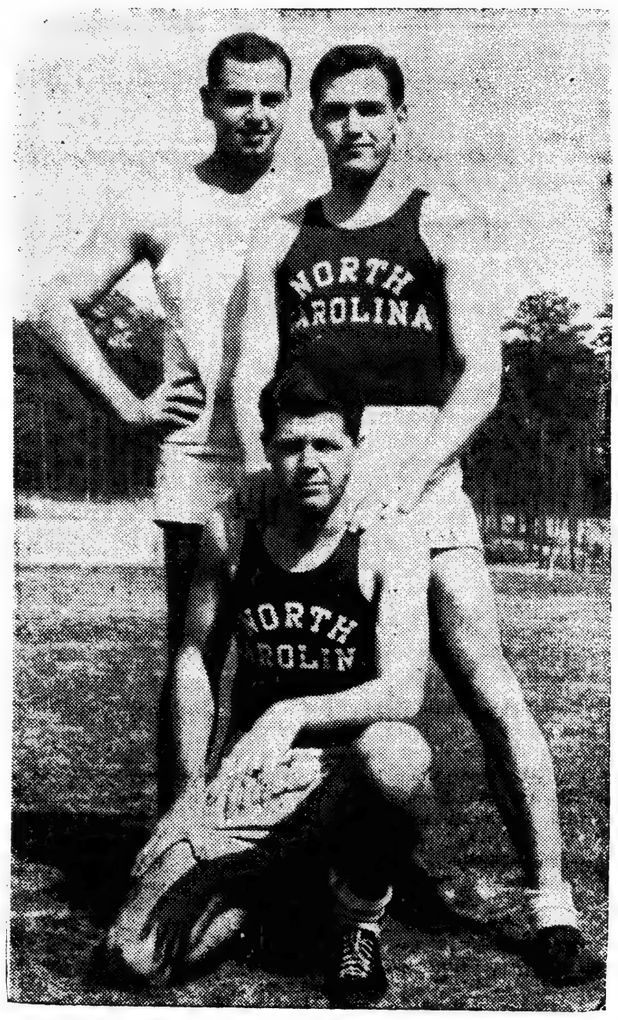
Simmons Defends

Chunk Simmons, ace Tar Heel hurdler will be out to make it two years in a row as high and low hurdle winner. His sternest opposition in the highs should come from Jim Radliff of South Carolina and Charlie Salvanelli of Maryland. In the lows he will have to contend with Chuck Chambers of State college, John Scupine of Duke and Ed McLear of VPI.

An unusual interest item will be the appearance of two sets of brothers. Sterling and Lindy Kehoe, competing for Coach Jim Kehoe, another brother, will give the Terrapins a strong pair in the 880 and the mile. The other two brothers will be competing under different colors as Frank Magill of VPI will make a bid for half-mile honors while brother Sam will be carrying the standards for Carolina in the two mile.

Coach Bob Fetzer who is acting as host for the meet has lined up fine officials for the affair and believes that this gathering will be near tops in track performances.

There will be no admission charge for the trials today. However, tomorrow's finals will have a 50 cents charge.



Today's schedule of events:

FIELD TRIALS

3:30—shot put; 3:30—javelin throw; 4:00—broad jump; 4:15—discus throw.

TRACK TRIALS

4:00—440-yard run; 4:20—120-yard dash; 4:40—120-yard high hurdles; 5:00—880-yard run; 5:20—220-dash; 5:40—220-yard low hurdles.

THREE OF THE many point-getters on whom Carolina will depend in the quest for the Southern conference track championship are Bob Seligman and Chunk Simmons, standing, and Don Nelson, kneeling.

Trackmen Elect Co-Captains

Middle-distance man Tommy Turner and pole-vaulter Norman McLeod, were named co-captains of the 1947 Carolina track team in the voting of squad members held yesterday afternoon.

The two were named on the eve of the Southern conference meet which starts today and they will lead the locals in their attempt to capture the loop cinder honors.

Turner, a junior, hails from Laurinburg and runs the half mile for the men of Coaches Ranson and Fetzer. He is the brother of Gene Turner, one of those injured in the auto crash near Chapel Hill last Sunday.

McLeod is from Sanford and graduates this June. Probably the South's top pole vaulter, he will seek new heights tomorrow in his efforts to break the Southern conference record for the jump. He will be the defending champion in the conference event.

Pi Phi, Carr Capture Coed Archery Honors

Three Scoring Innings Give Blue Devils Big Four Win

Local Club Suffers Fourth Circuit Defeat; Kelly Wallops Two Homers in Losing Cause

By Bob Goldwater

Carolina held Duke scoreless in six innings yesterday in Emerson stadium but the roof fell in on the Tar Heels in the other three and they suffered a 15-7 licking for their fourth Big Four defeat.

Besides giving the Blue Devils a 2-1 lead in the season's series between the two clubs, the loss served to push the locals a little deeper into third place while elevating Duke to a virtual tie with State for the league lead. The two teams meet again tomorrow in Durham.

Main bright spot for the Tar Heels during the otherwise mournful afternoon was the heavy stickwork of surprise starter Jim Kelly, who opened in right field. Swinging from the portside, Kelly walloped two homers and a pair of singles and now sports the classy Big Four average of .700, made on seven hits in 10 tries.

Hackney Homers

Bo Hackney also clouted a round-tripper to mark up Carolina's final tally in the sixth, while Harry Beason, collecting two-for-five, made four bases on a one-base knock on which Duke center-fielder Art Vann erred.

Kelly's first homer came in the first frame with one man aboard and gave Carolina a 2-0 lead. The Blue Devils picked up their first safety off the Tar Heel starter, Frank Robinson, in the fourth stanza and garnered two more before the inning ended to account for three runs. Carolina regained the lead in the fifth by scoring four markers, with Kelly's four-ply blow the climax to the splurge.

Parade to Plate

And then the sky dropped on the Tar Heels. In the first half of the sixth, 12 Blue Devils paraded to the plate and six completed the circuit by circling the bases before the side was retired. Vinnie DiLorenzo took over for Robinson after the first four batters had reached base, and departed after four more had touched him for singles or walks.

Monk Whiteheart followed DiLorenzo and escaped without further damage in that inning but the Blue Devils reached him for four hits and six runs in a big eighth inning during which 11 batters took their turns at the plate.

DIAMOND DUST: Duke started a small rumpus in the fifth frame when Vann was called out at home although Buck Hardee dropped the ball. But Umpire Stallings ruled that Vann had grabbed the ball after Hardee's tag . . . . .Bob Houghton went the distance to register his fifth Big Four win. . . . Robinson's loss was his first, against one victory.

Rail Rebates May Be Given To University

Three Railroads Told To Repay Overcharge

Raleigh, May 16—(UP)—The North Carolina Utilities commission may give more than half a million dollars to the University of North Carolina, if railroad passengers do not claim overcharges on intrastate train tickets.

The order directs three railroads to refund excess fares charged on passenger-coach trips entirely within the state during the period from August 1, 1944 to July 25, 1945.

Escheats Law

If the passengers do not claim their money, the funds may go to the University of North Carolina under the state escheats law.

The passenger-fare case has been in the courts for a long time. It started when the Interstate Commerce commission allowed the railroads to increase their fares slightly. But the state Utilities commission refused to allow the raise in fares on the Atlantic Coast line, the Seafoard Airline railway, and the Southern railway for trips made wholly within the state.

May Takes Stand To Defend Himself

Washington, May 16—(UP)—Former Congressman Andrew May has taken the stand to defend himself against charges that he used his high office to help the Garsson Munitions combine. His opening testimony indicates that he will try to establish that anything he did for the Garssons was in line of duty and that he received no compensation.

Lynchers Were Drunk, Says Taxicab Driver

Greenville, S. C., May 16—(UP)—A Greenville taxicab driver, E. C. Fowler, testified that a lynch mob bolstered its courage with whisky the night it dragged Willie Earle from jail and killed him. The state devoted the first part of today's session introducing statements implicating most of the 31 men defendants in the lynching.

Governor Threatens German Martial Law

Frankfurt, May 16—(UP)—The American military governor of Hesse, James Newman, threatens to impose martial law on the German state in order to deal with the food crisis. He says such a step may be necessary unless the attitude of the people improves.

Shooting Spree Ends With Negro Wounded

Washington, May 16—(UP)—The Negro attorney who killed two persons and injured two others in a shooting spree this noon, is in a Washington hospital with three bullet wounds. The lawyer went on a rampage when he was denied admission to the District of Columbia Bar and when his demand for a refund of his admission fee was refused.

Merger Long Way Off Says Phillip Murray

Washington, May 16—(UP)—C. I. O. President Philip Murray says a merger of the C. I. O. and A. F. of L. is a long way off, unless the A. F. of L. changes its stand. Murray says the A. F. of L. merely suggested that all C. I. O. unions enter the A. F. of L. but left important organizational, economic and political questions to be settled at the A. F. of L. convention in October.

Defeated Measures Include Two Proposals Considered Major Items by Legislature

By Ed Joyner

First amendments to the year-old Student Constitution were ratified by the student body in last week's general election and will go into effect immediately.

Official count of the balloting completed by the Student council Thursday showed that of seven amendments approved by the student legislature, five met the approval of the student body and were passed by the necessary affirmative vote of two-thirds of the students voting in the election. Two were rejected.

Paradoxically, the defeated bills were two of the three major issues up for consideration, the other amendments concerning purely procedural matters.

First of the rejected proposals was the abolishment of the House Privileges Board, which received an approving vote of only 65 per cent of the voters. As set up by the constitution the board is composed of the five officers of the Interfraternity council, the speaker and three members of the Coed senate, and one member of the Women's council. Its function is to supervise and enforce rules regulating visiting of coeds in fraternity houses.

IFC Backing

The abolishment bill had the backing of the IFC, which took over the duties of the board when it ceased to function properly last year. With the defeat of the amendment the board will continue to exist.

The second of the defeated measures was elimination of the appellate power of Men's and Women's councils to the Student council. Due to controversy over the question of whether one student group should have the power to reverse decisions of another such group the elimination of the appellate power was advocated by the three councils involved and by the president of the student body. The bill failed of ratification as only 56.18 per cent of the voters favored it.

Most important of the approved amendments was one giving complete power over women students to the Coed senate. Previously the Student legislature had authority to make some rules affecting the coeds.

Other amendments ratified, together with ballot results, were proposals to:

Add two non-voting faculty members to the Student Audit board; for 2110; against 723; 74.47%.

Increase membership of the Dance committee by six, add a faculty adviser, and report to honor councils only violations of dance rules beyond jurisdiction of the committee; for 2377; against 584; 80.27%.

Advance date of elections one month, to first Tuesday in April and first Tuesday in December; for 2292; against 463; 83.19%.

Reclassify powers and duties of officers and committees; for 1959; against 591; 76.82%.

Total vote on the Coed Senate bill was 2099 for, 724 against, giving it ratification by 74.35%. On the defeated House Privileges board issue the count was 1816 for, 974 against, 65.09%. The Student council appellate power amendment got only a 52.18% affirmative vote, 1447 for and 1326 against.

Special Session Of Legislature To Discuss NSO

The lame-duck Student legislature, expected to end its work with Thursday evening's final regular session, voted to hold a special session next week on the matter of participation in the National Student organization.

The outgoing legislators at press time Thursday had approved in general terms Carolina's sending a delegation to the N. S. O. conference to be held at Madison, Wisconsin next September. But the assembly bogged down on detailed planning and finally voted to refer the N. S. O. participation to Johnny Clampitt's special conference committee, asking the committee to have a repart ready for consideration at the special session.

An attempt was made to leave detailed planning for the conference up to the incoming legislature, but Jimmy Wallace, delegate to the Prague and Chicago student conference, succeeded in keeping the decision in the hands of the present legislators.

Wallace moved that the legislature name three delegates to the conference at Madison. However, after Wallace's motion was carried, President-elect Tom Eller, sitting as a dorm legislator, suggested that nomination of delegates be delayed until the legislature had determined what instructions should be given the Carolina delegates. Eller's proposal was accepted.

When it became apparent that there would be more debate on the question of instructions than Thursday's already late-running session could handle, Tom Eller and Winston Broadfoot suggested the special session. Retiring Speaker Charlie Warren promised to call a session before next Thursday, when the new legislature is seated, and the meeting was adjourned.

Blond, Bespectacled Boredom

Unhappy Disk Jockey, Sam Beard, Plans To Return and Polish Off English Major

By Sigbsee Miller

Sam Beard, the unhappiest disc jockey in the business, may return to Carolina this summer to polish off the 10 hours of work he needs to complete an English major. Put that away in your notebook and when you see six feet of blond, bespectacled boredom coming toward you, stare hard. You probably won't ever see anything like it again.

In the cubbyhole of a studio where for 55 minutes a night, five days a week, he hurls insults to enraptured listeners over half of the United States and part of Europe, the Moon Glow misanthrope affably admitted the press and, between station breaks and autographing some eggs for fraternity pledges, talked for 105 minutes, about five of which are transcribed here.

Incognito

Beard was at Carolina, virtually incognito, during the 1946 fall term when his program over WPTF in Raleigh was just beginning to assume the insulting proportions that has made it one of the most widely publicized in the country.

"Nobody knew just who I was when I was at Carolina then," he recalled with satisfaction. "My philosophy professor discovered that I was the Moon Glow man and he told the class but they promised not to let it get around."

Beard originally came to Carolina in 1941, left to enter the armed services in March, 1944, and returned last September. Then Moon Glow was born from an idea he had used on a radio station back in his home town of Bristol, Va., several years before, and this along with full-time announcing duties led to commuting problems and heavy schedules. The result, by quarter's end, was a perceptibly weakened Beard. So the textbooks went on the shelf and Beard continued on the air, more vicious and more popular than ever.

Now, Beard is considering a return to Carolina to round out his four years of A.B. work.

No Quote

"But you needn't quote me on that," he cautioned sourly. "I've already spent too many years at Carolina."

Sam Beard has a dispassionate, yawning contempt for anybody who is foolish enough to listen to him from 11:05 until midnight, when he ignores their song requests and emits the bitterest misanthropy the FCC will allow. The colleges surrounding Raleigh are his chief target—Carolina (The Country Club); Duke (When in Doubt, Endow); N. C. State (Cow College); and Meredith (Angel Farm).

He takes particular pride in never having made any but slurring references to the Meredith feminity. The girls retaliated by inviting him to do his program as the crowning event of their junior-senior prom Saturday night.

Rates High

By the protocol of at least one North Carolina hotel, Beard rates along with the secretary of state. Blowing his girl-friend to dinner at a swank Pinehurst hotel recently, Beard was seated next to the table of Secretary of State George C. Marshall. Several days later the hotel bulletin reported the recent presence of "two honored guests." Marshall got three lines, Beard five. The hotel went on to suggest an international bingo game, with Marshall calling the numbers and Beard giving advice on how to get along with people.

A Look into the Future

The subscribers of the Daily Tar Heel have just hired for their publication a new editor and with him come new policies and trends. It is quite true that an aspirant for the editorship is forced to affiliate with a political group in order to win a campus-wide election. However, in keeping with our campaign promises that were clearly stated in our platform, we will take a nonpartisan stand on all political questions and act as an observer during the coming year. All of our relations with political groups on campus have been severed.

We welcome all criticisms on our policies and our doors will be open at all times to discuss questions pertinent to campus life or anything within our realm of thought and knowledge. Adequate space will be devoted to student opinion in your Write Away column. And if necessary at the expense of less important editorial matter.

The campus cannot expect a complete rejuvenation of the editorial page and staff with a single sweep. There is only a little more than one week of publication for the remainder of this term before exams begin. However, you will be surprised to read that the fellow that rooms down the hall has turned DTH columnist or that the coed who sits next to you in your 8 o'clock class has decided to expound her views on coed life at the University.

Our aim is to publish a campus newspaper that will be of interest and enjoyment to the student body and we will endeavor to fulfill this aim. We do not promise a crusade in each and every issue, but we do pledge ourselves to develop the publication into a journal for student readers.

Our fight for an eight-column newspaper will be resumed. At the present time presses and facilities in the printshops of Chapel Hill are not adequate to handle an eight-column daily publication and newsprint is scarce and sold on a quota basis. However, we will strive to give you an eight-column newspaper by next fall.

This paper carries entirely too many advertisements for its size. We will attempt to remedy this situation by an increase in advertising rates so that the advertisements will continue to defray at least 30 per cent of the publication costs. We will recommend to the Publication Board members that they approve an increase in advertisement rates to begin July 1.

We fully realize our tremendous undertaking as editor of your campus daily and we will strive to repay the confidence you have shown by your vote.—B. M.

NSO Possibilities

The news that the Student Legislature has voted to join the ranks of the National Student Organization is greeted with rejoicing by those who are interested in seeing the University keep its standing by continually looking for improvements. The comparatively infant organization began its policy making and seasoning last December in Chicago at the Plenary session, and September promises to be an important time in the life and development of the group with the ever-important Constitutional convention ahead.

Little has been said about the policies and object of the NSO outside of the Student Legislature although it has drawn much attention among student leaders. The representative body of students plans to center its activities around two phases. The first of its activities is to enhance the welfare of students in their campus lives. The second objective is to bring the American student into closer contact with the students of other countries.

Under the heading of student welfare the group proposes to concern itself with the academic, cultural, social, and physical conditions of campus life.

As one of its projects the group hopes to compile the most advanced information concerning eating and rooming situations on the various campuses throughout the nation and to stimulate the expansion of student cooperative housing and eating facilities. This is only one of the problems that the NSO hopes to remedy through combined discussion and action.—B. M.

Scribe Warns Student Body To Avoid 'Don't Care' Trend

By Dave Boak

Well, elections are over and will be forgotten before the stooped men with nail-pointed sticks have speared up the last of the multi-colored propaganda leaflets from walks and gutters. They, i.e., SP-UP-CP, will once again sink into the comparative oblivion of 'twixt-election doldrums and most of the three thousand or so students who voted will reach new highs or lows in apathy towards campus affairs.

Little power groups of men and women legislators will decide how closely to follow their campaign platforms and will form their coalitions, their little and big ententes over beer or tea as the case may be. And what is best for campus or party will once again be resolved in inner sanctums.

Fertile Hot-Beds

Those fertile political hot-beds of lower quad and fraternity court will once again lay fallow and their big guns enroute to Legislature will collect unwilling friends to help swing an issue. And perhaps the Legislature will pass a couple of laws (providing they have a quorum). Good laws maybe, but couched in language guaranteeing confusion.
